The Sermons of John Donne

JOHN DONNE, AET. CA. 45

[The original of this portrait, artist unknown, is in the National Portrait Gallery, London. It shows him at the age of forty-four or forty-five. Before it reached the National Portrait Gallery, it was for many years at Brandon House, Suffolk, and seems to be one of a number of portraits that were collected by the Rev. Jonathan Tyers Barrett, D.D. (1783 or 1784 to 1851), Rector of Attleborough, while he resided at Brandon House. For further details see the "bibliographical note" by Geoffrey Keynes prefixed to John Sparrow's edition of Donne's Devotions (Cambridge University Press, 1923). Introduction

THE SERMONS included in this volume cover the period from May, 1623, to January, 1626, that is, the last two years of the reign of James I, his death, and the accession of Charles I, followed by the marriage of Charles to Henrietta Maria, and the terrible outbreak of plague in the summer and autumn of 1625. For the most part the historical background was gloomy. In the summer of 1623 the negotiations for the marriage of Charles to the Spanish Infanta were in full swing, and the projected match was most unpopular in England. Donne's friend, Sir Robert Ker or Karr, was among the courtiers who followed Charles and Buckingham to Spain, and a letter which Donne wrote to him while he was there enables us to date approximately the sermon which we print as No. 1 of this volume. In this letter, which Gosse misdated as having been written in February or March, 1624,¹ we find Donne writing thus: "But yet, Oriens nomen ejus, the East is one of Christ's names, in one Prophet; And, Filius Orientis est Lucifer, the East is one of the Devill's names, in another, and these two differ diametrically."² He continues by pointing out that if a flat map is pasted on a round globe, the farthest east and the farthest west meet and are all one. A little later he says apologetically, "Sir, I took up this paper to write a letter, but my imaginations were full of a sermon before, for I write but a few hours before I am to preach, and so instead of a letter I send you a homily."

The sermon which we print here echoes these words very closely. "In a flat Map, there goes no more, to make West East, though they be distant in an extremity, but to paste that flat Map upon a round body, and then West and East are all one. . . . The name of Christ is Oriens, The East; And yet Lucifer himselfe is called Filius Orientis, The Son of the East." Though the sermon is undated, we can ascribe it with some confidence, in view of the striking resemblance of the wording, to the period of the letter to Ker. Mr. I. A. Shapiro³ dates the letter between March and September, 1623, since Charles and Buckingham were in Spain between those dates and returned to England on October 5. In view of other indications in the letter, he is inclined to think that it was written before rather than after July. Since it was Donne's custom to spend most of July, August, and September preaching in his country parishes and visiting his friends, and since, as far as we know, he never prepared any of these country sermons for publication, we have an additional reason for assigning this sermon to a date in April, May, or June, 1623.

The sermon itself is a good average specimen of Donne's middle period. It is not connected with the sermon which immediately precedes it in the Folio, which has the title "Preached to the King at White-hall, upon the occasion of the Fast, April 5, 1628," though that sermon took as its text two verses from the same penitential psalm on which Donne was now preaching. There is, however, some slight connection between the present sermon and the group of undated sermons on the Sixth Psalm, which are Nos. 50-53 in the Folio. This is shown by Donne's remarks on page 40: "But why is it so long before David leads us to that consideration? Why hath he deferred so primary a duty, to so late a place, to so low a roome, to the end of the Psalme? The Psalme hath a Deprecatory part, that God would forbear him, and a Postulatory part, that God would heare him, and grant some things to him, and a Gratulatory part, a sacrifice of thanksgiving." Donne then gives a few sentences to the "Deprecatory" and the "Postulatory" parts which had been the subject of Nos. 50-53. In No. 51, preaching on verses 2 and 3 of the psalm, he had remarked: "This whole Psalm is prayer; And the whole prayer is either Deprecatory, as in the first verse, or Postulatory . . . And in that Postulatory part of David's prayer, which goes through six verses of this Psalme, we consider the Petitions, and the Inducements." Thus the present sermon, which deals with the "Gratulatory part," completes the series, and must have been later than the others. It is, however, well able to stand by itself, and may have been preached at some considerable interval after them.

It contains many points of interest, as when Donne remarks that David postponed his expression of thanksgiving "because being reserved to the end, and close of the Psalme, it leaves the best impression in the memory. And therefore it is easie to observe, that in all Metricall compositions, of which kinde the booke of Psalmes is, the force of the whole piece, is for the most part left to the shutting up; the whole frame of the Poem is a beating out of a piece of gold, but the last clause is as the impression of the stamp, and that is it that makes it currant." This is true of a number of Donne's best poems, and at once we remember such characteristic concluding lines as Thy firmnes makes my circle just,

And makes me end, where I begunne.⁴

or

Hope not for minde in women; at their best Sweetnesse and wit, they'are but Mummy, possest.⁵

Donne speaks of thanksgiving as the only return which we can make to God for His love to us. "The love of God is not a contract, a bargain, he looks for nothing againe, and yet he looks for thanks, for that is nothing, because there is nothing done in it, it is but speaking; . . . God looks for nothing, nothing to be done in the way of exact recompence, but yet, as he that makes a Clock, bestowes all that labour upon the severall wheelles, that thereby the Bell might give a sound, and that thereby the hand might give knowledge to others how the time passes; so this is the principall part of that thankfulness, which God requires from us, that we make open declarations of his mercies, to the winning and confirming of others."

A little later he speaks of the continual presence of God with the faithful on earth. "He that goes about his worldly businesse, and goes about them in Gods name, in the feare and favour of God, remaines in Gods presence still. . . . No descent into hell, of what kinde soever you conceive that descent into hell to have been, put the Son of God out of heaven, by descending into hell; no Discede, no Leave, no Commandement that God gives us, to doe the works of our calling here, excludes us from him; but as the Saints of God shall follow the Lamb, wheresoever he goes in heaven, so the Lamb of God shall follow his Saints, wheresoever they goe upon earth, if they walk sincerely."

There is now an interval of ten months in our dated sermons. This is due first to the usual summer vacation, and then to the serious illness which Donne contracted in the late autumn. We know from a letter of Chamberlain⁶ to Carleton, of October 25, 1623, that two days earlier Donne had preached at St. Paul's after the admission of a number of eminent lawyers as Serjeants-at-law at the Temple. The sermon has not been preserved, unless it is one of those in the Folios without a heading or date. The whole procession walked through heavy rain "dabbling and bareheaded" from the Inns of Court to St. Paul's, and it may be that Donne caught a chill which predisposed him to the sickness which afflicted him during November and December. Walton describes this as "a dangerous sickness, which inclined him to a Consumption," but by this Walton means merely a wasting disease, not tuberculosis. Gosse's account is even more misleading. He takes it to be an unusually violent attack of what he describes as Donne's chronic disease, of which he says "its crises were apt to be brought on by anxiety or excess of intellectual work, as well as by cold. . . . We are tempted to suppose that Donne had suffered from what we now call typhoid fever in his youth, and that it had left behind a chronic tendency to gastritis. Whatever medical name we call it by, it was evidently a burning away of the internal organs, which gradually consumed, and at last destroyed him."⁷ This is at variance with our only trustworthy source of evidence, Donne's own account of this sickness in the Devotions upon Emergent Occasions which he composed during his convalescence, and caused to be published early in 1624. According to Donne the onset of the disease was very sudden. In Meditation 1 he says: "this minute I was well, and am ill, this minute. I am surpriz'd with a sodaine change, and alteration to worse, and can impute it to no cause, nor call it by any name." In Meditation 2 he analyses his symptoms further. He has lost his appetite, and everything tastes insipid; his knees are weak and give way; he sweats from his forehead to the soles of his feet, and he finds himself unable to sleep. A message is sent for the physician, and meanwhile he is left alone by his friends, for fear of infection (Meditation 5). When the physician arrives, he takes a grave view of the case, and Donne detects this, in spite of the physician's attempt to disguise it. "I feare the more, because he disguises his fear, and I see it with the more sharpnesse, because hee would not have me see it" (Meditation 6). He turns to God, and prays that he may submit everything to the will of God. The King hears of Donne's severe illness, and sends his own physician to consult with Donne's doctor (Meditation 8). They prescribe physic, and Donne accepts it gladly (Meditation 9), but the disease grows worse, so that the physicians prescribe the fashionable remedy of applying pigeons cut in half "to draw the vapors from the Head" (Meditation 12).⁸ In Meditation 13, we are told that the sickness "declares the infection and malignity thereof by spots." Donne cannot sleep by day or night, and the bells of the neighboring church seem by their tolling to summon him to prepare for death (Meditations 15-18). At last, however, he begins to recover, and the physicians immediately apply their favorite purgatives (Meditations 19, 20). He is told by them that he may get out of bed, but he finds that he can hardly stand. Finally he recovers, and employs his convalescence in arranging his devotions during his sickness into a little volume to be published immediately.

The evidence proves that Donne suffered from a violent fever, which ran its course in about three weeks. It left him extremely weak, but after a protracted convalescence he was able to resume his usual duties, and on Easter Day, 1624, he preached at St. Paul's. His health was restored so that for another six years he was able to live an active, energetic life. There is nothing to justify Gosse's hypothesis of a chronic disease aggravated by a neurotic temperament. What is noteworthy is the sane and commonsense view which Donne took of his illness. He recognized that he was acutely ill, summoned the doctor and obeyed his instructions, prepared himself for the possibility of death, but hoped for recovery, and rejoiced when he found that the sickness had abated. It was natural and right that he should wish to live, for he was the father of a family of young people who had lost their mother a few years previously, and he was also the Dean, but lately appointed, of the cathedral church of St. Paul's. At the same time, his recovery was probably helped by his confidence that, whether he lived or died, he was in the hands of God (see Expostulation 4). On his sickbed he wrote the well-known Hymne to God the Father:

Wilt thou forgive that sinne where I begunne,
Which was my sin, though it were done before?
Wilt thou forgive that sinne, through which I runne,
And do run still: though still I do deplore?
When thou hast done, thou hast not done,
For I have more.

Wilt thou forgive that sinne which I have wonne Others to sinne? and made my sinne their doore?
Wilt thou forgive that sinne which I did shunne
A yeare, or two: but wallowed in, a score?
When thou hast done, thou hast not done,
For I have more.

I have a sinne of feare, that when I have spunne
My last thred, I shall perish on the shore;
But sweare by thy selfe, that at my death thy sonne Shall shine as he shines now, and heretofore;
And, having done that, Thou hast done,
I feare no more.

After quoting this Hymne, Walton adds that Donne "caus'd it to be set to a most grave and solemn Tune, and to be often sung to the Organ by the Choristers of St. Pauls Church, in his own hearing, especially at the Evening Service; and at his return from his Customary Devotions in that place, did occasionally say to a friend, The words of this Hymne have restored to me the same thoughts of joy that possesse my Soul in my sickness when I composed it. And, O the power of Church-musick! that Harmony added to it has raised the Affections of my heart, and quickened my graces of zeal and gratitude; and I observe, that I alwayes return from paying this publick duty of Prayer and Praise to God, with an unexpressible tranquillity of mind, and a willingness to leave the world."¹⁰ Grierson³⁰ gives a contemporary musical setting from Egerton MS 2013 by John Hillton, organist of St. Margaret's Church, Westminster, who died in 1657.

It is against this background of a vigorous life interrupted by serious sickness and then restored to renewed activity that we should view this volume of Donne's sermons, which contains much of his best work. The first dated sermon which he preached after his recovery was that which he delivered at St. Paul's on Easter Day, March 28, 1624 (No. 2 in this volume). He took as his text a verse from one of his favourite books, the Apocalypse or Revelation of St. John, "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first Resurrection." Though he made no direct allusion to his illness, he was in fact carrying on a line of thought which we find in Expostulation and Prayer 21 of the Devotions which he had written so lately. There he had taken his own rising from his bed of sickness as an earnest of a resurrection from sin in this life, and a resurrection of body and soul hereafter. "... wee shall have a Resurrection in Heaven; the knowledge of that thou castest by another glasse upon us here; we *fee*le that we have a Resurrection from sinne; and that by another glasse too; wee see wee have a Resurrection of the body, from the miseries and calamities of this life. This Resurrection of my body, shewes me the Resurrection of my soule; and both here severally, of both together hereafter." A few pages later he had written "... thou hast not onely afforded mee, the abilitie to rise out of this bed of wearinesse and discomfort, but hast also made this bodily rising, by thy grace, an earnest of a second resurrection from sinne, and of a third, to everlasting glory."

In this Easter sermon Donne takes as one branch of his exposition the resurrection of the soul from sin. "Of these words of this first Resurrection (which is not the last, of the body, but a spirituall Resurrection) there are three expositions authorized by persons of good note in the Church.... Secondly, that it is a Resurrection from the death of sin, of actuall, and habituall sin; so it belongs to every particular penitent soul; and Blessed art thou, blessed am I, if we have part in this first Resurrection." Later in the sermon he applies the text to the state of the glorified soul in heaven: "But then in her [the soul's] Resurrection, her measure is enlarged, and filled at once; There she reads without spelling, and knowes without thinking, and concludes without arguing; she is at the end of her race, without running; In her triumph, without fighting; In her Haven, without sayling . . . What a death is this life? what a resurrection is this death? For though this world be a sea, yet (which is most strange) our Harbour is larger then the sea; Heaven infinitely larger then this world. . . . Beloved, I thinke you could be content to heare, I could be content to speake of this Resurrection, our glorious state, by the low way of the grave, till God by that gate of earth, let us in at the other of precious Stones."¹¹

Another passage in this sermon offers a parallel to Expostulation 4 of the Devotions. There Donne had written, when his friends sent for the doctor, "My God, my God, how soone wouldest thou have me goe to the Phisician, and how far wouldest thou have me go with the Phisician? I know thou hast made the Matter, and the Man, and the Art, and I goe not from thee when I go to the Phisician. . . . And it is the voyce of the Wise man, both for the matter, phisicke it selfe, The Lorde hath created Medicines out of the Earth, and hee that is wise, shall not abhorre them [marginal reference, Ecclus. 38.4], And for the Arte, and the Person, The Phisician cutteth off a long disease. In all these voyces, thou sendest us to those helpes, which thou hast afforded us in that. But wilt not thou avowe that voyce too, Hee that hath sinned against his Maker, let him fall into the hands of the Phisician [marginal reference, Ecclus. 38.15].

So more briefly in this sermon: "As we are bid to honour the Physitian, and to use the Physitian, but yet it is said in the same Chapter, He that sinneth before his Maker, let him fall into the hands of the Physitian [marginal references, Ecclus. 38.1 and 15]; It is a blessing to use him, it is a curse to rely upon him . . ."¹²

Finally, at the close of the sermon, Donne urges on his hearers the view which he had taken during his own illness: "Stay therefore patiently, stay chearfully Gods leasure till he call; but not so over-chearfully, as to be loath to go when he cals." And he ends by reaffirming his intense belief in Christ, the Resurrection and the Life: "Reliefe in persecution by power, reconciliation in sin by grace, dissolution, and transmigration to heaven by death, are all within this first Resurrection: But that which is before them all, is Christ Jesus. . . . He was our Creation, he was our Redemption, he is our Resurrection."¹³

This sermon was followed by two others which Donne thought worthy of preservation. These are his first and second sermons preached as Vicar of St. Dunstan's-in-the-West, on April 11 and April 25, respectively. The reversion of this living had been given to Donne soon after he took holy orders, by Richard, third Earl of Dorset. At that time the Vicar was an old man, who had held the living since 1575, Dr. Thomas White, the founder of Sion College, and of the Professorship of Moral Philosophy at Oxford. He died on March 1, 1623/1624, and Donne succeeded him without any delay. He appointed a curate, Matthew Griffiths, to do the ordinary clerical duties, and installed him in the vicarage, but took pains to preach fairly regularly in the church. Among his parishioners was Izaak Walton, who had a linen-draper's shop in Fleet Street, west of Chancery Lane. He was a great admirer of Donne's "powerful preaching," and he described himself as Donne's "Convert" in the Elegy which he contributed to the edition of Donne's Poems in 1633, and which he revised and reprinted for his enlarged Life of Donne in the editions of 1658 and 1670.

The style of the first sermon at St. Dunstan's is different from that of Donne's eloquent discourses at St. Paul's. Dr. Jessopp wrote of it: "The sermon is a kind of manifesto setting forth the preacher's view of the reciprocal duties of the pastor and his flock. It was evidently composed with great care, and is expressed in language almost homely in its simplicity, very unlike the ordinary style of Donne's most studied sermons delivered on important occasions";¹⁴ and he quotes some phrases from the concluding paragraphs: "If the Pastor love, there will bee a double labour; if the People love, there will bee double respect. . . . For where the Congregation loves the Pastor, hee will forbear bitter reprooves, and wounding increpations, and where the Pastor loves his Congregation, his Rebukes, because they proceed out of love, will bee acceptable, and well interpreted by them. . . . love being the root of all, the fruit of all may be peace, love being the soul of all, the body of all may be unity; which the Lord of unity, and concord, grant to us all, for his Sonne Christ Jesus sake."¹⁵

The second sermon at St. Dunstan's (No. 4 in this volume) is also in Donne's plainer manner, but it has many happy short sentences such as, "Militia, vita; our whole life is a warfare; God would not chuse Cowards";¹⁶ or again, "A man may thread Sermons by half dozens a day, and place his merit in the number, a man may have been all day in the perfume and incense of preaching, and yet have receivd none of the savor of life unto life. Some things an Ape can do as wel as a Man; some things an Hypocrite as wel as a Saint."¹⁷ Sometimes Donne obtains his effect by quoting or translating an unfamiliar reading from the Vulgate: "(as the vulgat reads that place) Gods secret discourse is with the single heart."¹⁸ He ends with these words: "The love of God begins in fear, and the fear of God ends in love; and that love can never end, for God is love."¹⁹

Sermon 5 is an undated Whitsunday sermon which we have assigned conjecturally to 1624. Like many other of the Whitsunday sermons, it is much less eloquent than the Christmas and Easter sermons. It contains a reference to the Paracelsian doctrine of the balsam, in which Donne believed. "Every thing hath in it, as Physitians use to call it, Naturale Balsamum, A naturall Balsumum, which, if any wound or hurt which that creature hath received, be kept clean from extrinsique putrefaction, will heale of it self."²⁰ This should be compared with a passage in an undated sermon preached at Whitehall: "... that Balsamum naturale, which Paracelsus speaks of, that naturall Balme which is in every body, and would cure any wound, if that wound were kept clean, and recover any body, if that body were purged."²¹ There are many references in Donne's poems and prose works to the doctrines of Paracelsus,²² that enigmatic figure, half

²² Donne possessed a copy of the Chirurgia Magna of Paracelsus (Keynes, Bibliography of Donne, 2d ed., p. 178). He refers to this book in Biathanatos, p. 216, and calls Paracelsus an "excellent Chirurgicalian." There are other references to him on pp. 172, 215 of Biathanatos, in Essays in Divinity, p. 15, and in Letters (1651), p. 15. scientist, half charlatan, whose vigorous attacks on the traditional medical lore of the Galenists created such a ferment of thought in the sixteenth century. The doctrine of the balsam is to be found in Paracelsi Opera Omnia (Geneva, 1658), II, 91: "For there are spirits celestial and infernal of human beings, and of metals, of plants, of stones. . . . Wherefore you may know that the spirit is in very truth the life and balsam of all corporeal things." Also ibid., I, 368: "This chain of Venus, indeed, is nothing else than a constancy of human balsam which brings it about that the physical body will not decay."²⁸

On Trinity Sunday, a week later, Donne returned to St. Dunstan's. Here again he preached a sermon of instruction in doctrine, without much eloquence. In speaking of the difficulty of the doctrine of the Trinity he uses the term "slippery," which he had employed some years previously in his poem The Litanie. There he had written:

O Blessed glorious Trinity, Bones to Philosophy, but milke to faith,
Which, as wise serpents, diversly
Most slipperinesse, yet most entanglings hath.²¹

In the sermon he says: "... that is true which S. Augustine sayes, . . . there is not so steepy a place to clamber up, nor so slippery a place to fall upon, as the doctrine of the Trinity . . ."²⁵

On another page there is a reminiscence of what he had written in *Essays in Divinity*²⁰ about the knowledge of God given in Nature, that Book of Creatures, Liber Creaturarum, as Raymond of Sabund called it. In the Essays Donne had devoted almost a page to Raymond's praise of the Book of Creatures, but here he is careful to explain the inferiority of the knowledge derived from Nature to that derived from the Word of God.

"We consider two other wayes of imprinting the knowledge of God in man; first in a darke and weake way, the way of Nature, and the book of Creatures . . . The voyce of the Creature alone, is but a faint voyce, a low voyce . . . As a stick bears up, and succours a vine, or any plant, more precious then it selfe, but yet gave it not life at first, nor gives any nourishment to the root now: so the assistance of reason, and the voyce of the Creature, in the preaching of Nature, works upon our faith, but the roote, and the life is in the faith it selfe; The light of nature gives a glimmering before, and it gives a reflexion after faith, but the meridianall noone is in faith."²⁷

On June 13, Donne preached "to the Earl of Exeter, and his company, in his Chappell at Saint John's." This sermon is remarkable for a passage in which Donne shows a breadth of sympathy unusual in an age so full of theological hatred and uncharitableness: "... there are an infinite number of Stars more then we can distinguish, and so, by Gods grace, there may be an infinite number of soules saved, more then those, of whose salvation, we discern the ways, and the meanes. Let us embrace the way which God hath given us, which is, the knowledge of his Sonne, Christ Jesus: what other way God may take with others, how he wrought upon Iob, and Naaman, and such others as were not in the Covenant, let us not inquire too curiously, determine too peremptorily, pronounce too uncharitably: God be blessed, for his declaring his good-wil towards us, and his will be done his way upon others."²⁸ He then proceeds to argue that even those texts which are ordinarily understood to mean that few of the Jews will be saved, may "receive a charitable interpretation, and extension. God says, in Ieremy, I will take you, one out of a City, and two out of a family; yet he says, he wil do this therefore, because he is married to them; so that this seems to be an act of his love; And therefore, I had rather take it, that God would take a particular care of them, one by one, then that he would take in but one and one . . ."

From the Jews, Donne proceeds to a consideration of the width of God's mercy toward all branches of the Christian Church. "Gods mercy was not confined, nor determined upon the Jews: Other sheep have I, which are not of this fold, says Christ, them also I must bring in . . . I must bring them; who are they? Many shall come from the east, and from the west, and shall sit downe with Abraham, Isaac, and Iacob, in the kingdom of heaven; from the Eastern Church, and from the Western Church too, from the Greek Church, and from the Latine too, and, (by Gods grace) from them that pray not in Latine too, from every Church, (so it be truly, and fundamentally a Church) Many shall come; How many? a multitude that no man can number . . ."²⁰

After this there is an interval of six months for which we have no dated sermons. We know, however, that in September Donne visited Knole, and presumably he preached either in the parish church of Sevenoaks, of which he was rector, or, less probably, in the private chapel of the great house. In a letter to his brother-in-law, Sir Nicholas Carew, dated September 1, 1624, Donne states that on the following Saturday he is to accompany the new Earl of Dorset to Knole.²⁰ In previous years Donne had been the guest of that ill-assorted couple, Richard, the third Earl, and his wife, who before her marriage was Lady Anne Clifford, daughter of George, Earl of Cumberland, from whom she inherited large estates in Westmoreland. On March 26, 1624, Richard had died at the early age of thirty-five. He had been one of the greatest spendthrifts of the age, and died leaving £60,000 of debt, the equivalent of more than half a million pounds sterling at the present time. He was "so great a lover of scholars and soldiers, as that with an excessive bounty towards them, or indeed any of worth that were in distress, he did much to diminish his estate, as also with excessive prodigality in housekeeping, and other noble ways at court, as tilting, masqueing, and the like."²¹ It was he who had bestowed on Donne the reversion of the living of St. Dunstan's in the West, of which he was the patron, but he died before Donne preached his first sermon in that church. The new Earl, Edward Sackville, Richard's younger brother, though he was less prodigal in his hospitality, was as kind to Donne as his brother had been. The heavy load of debt which his brother had left behind encumbered the estate for a number of years,³² but by prudent management, and by obtaining from the King a grant of "certain islands on the south of New England, viz.: Long Island, Cole Island, Sandy Point, Hell Gates, Martin's Vineyard, Elizabeth Islands, Block Island, with other islands near thereunto,"³³ he soon increased his income substantially. He became a Commissioner for planting Virginia, and in time was made Lord Chamberlain and Lord Privy Seal.³⁴

By the end of October, Donne had finished his country visits and was back in the Deanery of St. Paul's, for from it he wrote an elaborate and beautiful letter to Lady Kingsmill on the death of her husband.³⁵ He probably continued to preach at St. Dunstan's during the autumn and winter, for Walton tells us that it was his custom when in health to preach "once a week, if not oftner." He did not, however, choose to write up his notes of these sermons, unless any of the three undated sermons described as "preached at St. Dunstan's" should be inserted here. He was careful to preserve the full collection of his Christmas and Easter sermons at St. Paul's, and the Christmas Day sermon for 1624 (No. 8 in this volume) contains one of his most exquisite passages, in which he dilates on his favorite theme, the boundless and ever-present mercy of God:

"God made Sun and Moon to distinguish seasons, and day, and night, and we cannot have the fruits of the earth but in their seasons: But God hath made no decree to distinguish the seasons of his mercies; In paradise, the fruits were ripe, the first minute, and in heaven it is alwaies Autumne, his mercies are ever in their maturity.... He brought light out of darknesse, not out of a lesser light; he can bring thy Summer out of Winter, though thou have no Spring; though in the wayes of fortune, or understanding, or conscience, thou have been benighted till now, wintred and frozen, clouded and eclipsed, damped and benumbed, smothered and stupified till now, now God comes to thee, not as in the dawning of the day, not as in the bud of the spring, but as the Sun at noon to illustrate all shadows, as the sheaves in harvest, to fill all penuries, all occasions invite his mercies, and all times are his seasons."³⁶

This is only a fragment of a long passage which should be read slowly and carefully to relish its full flavor. George Saintsbury singled it out as "a passage than which I hardly know anything more exquisitely rhythmized in the whole range of English from Ælfric to Pater."³⁷

Donne achieves some of his effect here by the use of alliteration. In the first sentence quoted we have three alliterative sounds: s in "Sun . . . seasons . . . seasons . . . seasons"; m in "Moon . . . mercies . . . minute . . . mercies . . . maturity"; and d in "distinguish . . . day . . . decree . . . distinguish." More subtle is the effect produced by the use of heavy consonantal groups and thick vowel sounds in "clouded and eclipsed, damped and benumbed, smothered and stupified." Here the slow, heavy syllables suggest the bewilderment of the frozen soul, which is contrasted with the sense of life and movement conferred by the bestowal of God's mercy, suggested by the light anapaestic rhythm of "not as in the dawning of the day, not as in the bud of the spring," a clause which leads up in turn to the full splendour of the climax, "as the Sun at noon to illustrate [the second syllable is stressed] all shadows, as the sheaves in harvest, to fill all penuries."

We are not to think of Donne as elaborately working out a series of rhetorical effects. He was a poet, and whenever he was deeply moved, as here by his contemplation of the amazing mercy of God, he chose with a poet's instinct the right sounds and rhythms to express the emotion which he wished to convey.

This magnificence of diction is not sustained throughout the sermon, which contains a number of dull and tedious pages. In this it is characteristic of Donne's work as a whole, whether in prose or verse, for he is one of the most uneven of writers.

On New Year's Day, 1624/1625, Donne preached at St. Dunstan's. The winter was a sickly one, with "spotted fever" prevalent, so that Parliament was prorogued from November 2 to February 16, on account of "a general sickness and disease which proves mortal to many and infectious to more," which had dispersed itself in the City and Westminster.³⁸ There is an ominous reference in this sermon: "And, then, when the infection is got into a House, who can say, it shall end here in this Person, and kill no more; or it shall end this weeke, and last no longer?"³⁹ Since New Year's Day is the Feast of the Circumcision, Donne devotes his sermon (No. 9) to an exposition of the meaning of circumcision as ordained for the Jews, and then to the need for a spiritual circumcision among Christians. This last consists in confession of sin, contrition for and detestation of those sins which are confessed, and restitution to any who may have been wronged. On the subject of contrition Donne has a characteristic passage: "A house is not clean, though all the Dust be swept together, if it lie still in a corner, within Dore; A Conscience is not clean, by having recollected all her sinnes in the Memory, for they may fester there, and Gangreen even to Desperation, till she have emptied them in the bottomlesse Sea of the blood of Christ Jesus, and the mercy of his Father, by this way of Confession. But a house is not clean neither, though the Dust be thrown out, if there hang Cobwebs about the Walls, in how dark corners soever. A Conscience is not clean, though the sins, brought to our memory by this Examination, be cast upon Gods mercy, and the merits of his Sonne, by Confession, if there remaine in me, but a Cobweb, a little, but a sinfull delight in the Memory of those sins, which I had formerly committed. . . . Therefore is there a cleansing required in this Circumcision . . . Now there is no clensing of our blood, but by his blood; and the infusion, and application of his blood, is in the seale of the Sacrament; so that that soule onely is so clensed, as is required in this spirituall circumcision, that preserves it

selfe alwayes, or returns speedily, to a disposition of a worthy receiving of that holy and blessed Sacrament . . .⁴⁰

The next sermon (No. 10) was delivered on January 30, the Sunday following the Feast of the Conversion of St. Paul. It opens with a quotation from that noble passage in Ecclesiasticus, "Let us now praise famous Men, and our Fathers that begat us. The Lord hath wrought great glory by them, through his power from the beginning," and applies the words to "our blessed and glorious Apostle S. Paul, whose Conversion the Church celebrates now." Here it is worth remarking that Donne knew the Apocryphal books well, and that this book of Ecclesiasticus was apparently his favorite. Though he was careful never to choose a text for a sermon from the Apocrypha, he made as much use of the book of Ecclesiasticus⁴¹ as of most of the canonical books of the Old Testament, with the exception of Genesis, the Psalms, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and Job.

The whole sermon is a grand panegyric on St. Paul, full of eloquence, and should be read from beginning to end. Two of the finest passages may be quoted here. Speaking of God's method in converting St. Paul by casting him to the earth, and striking him with blindness, he says: "and he [God] hath not discovered, but made that Northerne passage, to passe by the frozen Sea of calamity, and tribulation, to Paradise, to the heavenly Jerusalem. There are fruits that ripen not, but by frost; There are natures, (there are scarce any other) that dispose not themselves to God, but by affliction. And as Nature looks for the season for ripening, and does not all before, so Grace looks for the assent of the soule, and does not perfect the whole worke, till that come. It is Nature that brings the season, and it is Grace that brings the assent; but till the season for the fruit, till the assent of the soule come, all is not done."⁴²

A little later Donne turns aside to the thought of death, which was never far from his mind. The verbal music of these sentences is worth careful analysis.

"Death is not a banishing of you out of this world; but it is a visitation of your kindred that lie in the earth; neither are any nearer of kin to you, then the earth it selfe, and the wormes of the earth. You heap earth upon your soules, and encumber them with more and more flesh, by a superfluous and luxuriant diet; You adde earth to earth in new purchases, and measure not by Acres, but by Manors, nor by Manors, but by Shires; And there is a little Quillet, a little Close, worth all these, A quiet Grave. And therefore, when thou readest, That God makes thy bed in thy sicknesse, rejoyce in this, not onely that he makes that bed, where thou dost lie, but that bed where thou shalt lie; That that God, that made the whole earth, is now making thy bed in the earth, a quiet grave, where thou shalt sleep in peace, till the Angels Trumpet wake thee at the Resurrection, to that Judgement where thy peace shall be made before thou commest, and writ, and sealed, in the blood of the Lamb."⁴³

On the first Friday in Lent Donne preached as usual at Whitehall. He took as his subject Christ's reply to the young ruler who asked what he should do to inherit eternal life. This was a sermon which excited Coleridge's intense admiration. Of one passage he remarked with a certain naïveté: "The whole paragraph is pure gold. Without being aware of this passage in Donne I expressed the same conviction, or rather declared the same experience, in the Appendix to the Statesman's Manual."⁴⁴ A little later, when Donne declares that nothing is essentially good but God, and that there is nothing in the world which does not in some measure partake of that goodness, Coleridge expresses his delight.

"All excellent, and [paragraph] D. most so. Thus, our old divines showed the depth of their love and appreciation of the Scriptures, and thus led their congregations to feel and see the same. Here is Donne's authority (Deus non est ens, etc.) for what I have so earnestly endeavoured to show, that Deus est ens super ens, the ground of all being, but therein likewise absolute Being, in that he is the eternal self-affirmant, the I Am in that I Am; and that the key of this mystery is given to us in the pure idea of the will, as the alone Causa Sui. O!

compare this manhood of our Church divinity with the feeble dotage of the Paleyan school, the 'natural' theology, or watchmaking scheme, that knows nothing of the maker but what can be proved out of the watch."⁴⁵

It was the philosophy of this sermon rather than its literary quality that appealed to Coleridge. There is less eloquence here than in the previous sermon, but it is one of the most thoughtful of Donne's discourses. For a modern reader ignorant of scholastic philosophy Donne's account of the nature of evil is difficult to grasp. His dependance on St. Thomas Aquinas must be emphasised, for Donne assumes a certain amount of knowledge in his hearers and readers.⁴⁶

"For, when it is ordinarily inquired in the Schoole, whether any thing be essentially good, it is safely answered there, that if by essentially we mean independantly, so good as that it can subsist of it self, without dependance upon, or relation to any other thing, so there is nothing essentially good: But if by essentially good, we mean that whose essence, and beeing is good, so everything is essentially good. And therefore when the Manichees pressed S. Augustine with that, Vnde malum? If there be not an ill God, as wel as a good, unde malum, from whom, or from whence proceed all that ill that is in the world? S. Augustine saies . . . Why, what is there, that you can call evill? I know no such thing; so that, if there be such a God, that God hath no creature. For, as poisons conduce to Physick, and discord to Musick, so those two kinds of evill, into which we contract all others, are of good use, that is, malum pœnæ, the evill of punishment, affliction, adversity, and malum culpæ, even sin it selfe, from which, the punishment flowes."⁴⁷

Donne has little difficulty in arguing that "affliction, poverty, sickness, imprisonment, banishment, and such, are not evill," for wise men of all ages have looked on such misfortunes as the physic of the soul, and Christians believe with St. Paul that all things work together for good to those that love God. Malum culpæ, however, presents a much more formidable obstacle. Donne, following St. Thomas Aquinas, argues thus: "You know, I presume, in what sense we say in the Schoole, Malum nihil, and Peccatum nihil, that evill is nothing, sin is nothing; that is, it hath no reality, it is no created substance, it is but a privation, as a shadow is, as sicknesse is; so it is nothing."⁴⁸ Aquinas states, "Evil is distinct both from simple being, and from simple not-being, because it is neither a habit, nor a pure negation, but a privation . . . Evil imports the absence of good. But not every absence of good is evil. For absence of good can be taken in a privative and a negative sense. Absence of good taken negatively is not evil . . . But the absence of good taken in a privative sense is an evil; as, for instance, the privation of sight is called blindness."⁴⁹

Donne recognises that this definition, however valuable it may be for the philosopher, is of little help to the ordinary man, so he proceeds: "But if I cannot finde a foundation for my comfort, in this subtilty of the Schoole, That sin is nothing, (no such thing as was created or induced by God, much lesse forced upon me by him, in any coactive Decree) yet I can raise a second step for my consolation in this, that be sin what it will in the nature thereof, yet my sin shall conduce and cooperate to my good. So Ioseph saies to his Brethren, You thought evill against me, but God meant it unto good: which is not onely good to Ioseph, who was no partaker in the evill, but good even to them, who meant nothing but evill."⁵⁰

Thus Donne carries on and amplifies in this sermon a line of reasoning which he had hinted at in one of his early paradoxes, "That Good is more common than Evill." It is important to grasp the fact that in spite of all his morbidity Donne's thought from first to last is fundamentally optimistic. He believes that goodness will ultimately triumph, and that it does not simply blot out evil, but makes use of it and incorporates it in the finished design. This is the meaning of a passage in Paradox 4: "And as Imbroderers, Lapidaries, and other Artisans, can by all things adorne their workes . . . so Good . . . refuses no aid, no not of her utter contrary Evill, that she may bee the more common to vs . . .⁵¹

This faith that even man's sin can be fashioned by the Divine goodness to form part of a higher and more beautiful whole finds expression in several of the sermons. "God's work is perfect; How appears that? For all his ways are Iudgement, sayes Moses in his victorious song. This is Perfection, That he hath established an order, a judgement . . . That even disorders are done in order, that even our sins some way or other fall within the providence of God."⁵² So in a loftier strain, in a sermon preached near the end of his life, he took up the words of Job, "O earth, cover not thou my blood": "And truly, so may I, so may every soule say, that is rectified, refreshed, restored, re-established by the seales of Gods pardon, and his mercy, so the world would take knowledge of the consequences of my sins, as well as of the sins themselves, and read my leafes on both sides, and heare the second part of my story, as well as the first; so the world would look upon my temporall calamities, the bodily sicknesses, and the penuriousnesse of my fortune contracted by my sins, and upon my spirituall calamities, dejections of spirit, sadness of heart, declinations towards a diffidence and distrust in the mercy of God, and then, when the world sees me in this agony and bloody sweat, in this agony and bloody sweat would also see the Angels of heaven ministering comforts unto me . . . so they would know as well what God hath done for my soule, as what my soule and body have done against my God; so they would reach me throughout, and look upon me altogether, I would joyne with Iob in his confident adjuration, O Earth cover not thou my blood; Let all the world know all the sins of my youth, and of mine age too, and I would not doubt, but God should receive more glory, and the world more benefit, then if I had never sinned."⁵³

In March, 1624/1625, Donne wrote the last of his funeral elegies at the insistent request of his friend and patron, Sir Robert Ker, later Earl of Ancrum, on the occasion of the death of the Marquess of Hamilton. In the letter to Ker which accompanied the poem Donne wrote, "I presume you rather try what you can doe in me, then what I can doe in verse; you know my uttermost when it was best, and even then I did best when I had least truth for my subjects. In this present case there is so much truth as it defeats all Poetry. Call therefore this paper by what name you will, and, if it bee not worthy of him, nor of you, nor of mee, smother it, and bee that the sacrifice. If you had commanded mee to have waited on his body to Scotland and preached there, I would have embraced the obligation with more alacrity; But, I thanke you that you would command me that which I was loath to doe..."⁵⁴ The poem was entitled "An hymne to the Saints, and to Marquesse Hamylton." Some lines in it find a parallel in various passages of the sermons:

And if, faire soule, not with first Innocents Thy station be, but with the Pœnitents, (And, who shall dare to aske then when I am Dy'd scarlet in the blood of that pure Lambe, Whether that colour, which is scarlet then,
Were black or white before in eyes of men?)
When thou rememb'rest what sins thou didst finde Amongst those many friends now left behinde,
And seest such sinners as they are, with thee Got thither by repentance, Let it bee Thy wish to wish all there, to wish them cleane;
With him a David, her a Magdalen.⁵⁵

This should be compared with a passage in the Whitsunday sermon which we have assigned to 1625: "...yet when I shall come to the next world, I shall finde... Mary Magdalen that had been, I know not what sinner; and David that had been all; I leave none so ill in this world, but I may carry one that was, or finde some that had been as ill as they, in heaven; and that blood of Christ Jesus, which hath brought them thither, is offered to them that are here, who may be successors in their repentance, as they are in their sins."⁵⁶

On March 27, a few weeks after Hamilton's death, King James died. On April 2, Donne received a royal command from the new king, Charles the First, to preach before him on the afternoon of Sunday,

April 3. This was but short notice for so important an occasion, and Donne wrote to his friend Sir Robert Ker begging him to let him spend a little time in his rooms at court before the service, so that he might prepare himself for the ordeal.⁵⁷ Ker answered kindly, and invited Donne to dine with him, but Donne refused, writing: "But, in good faith, I do not eat before nor can after, till I have been at home; so much hath my this years debility disabled me, even for receiving favours. After the Sermon, I will steal into my Coach home, and pray that my good purpose may be well accepted, and my defects graciously pardoned."⁵⁸

The King listened to the sermon attentively and devoutly, so the courtiers observed. He was very pale and grave, and all watched him eagerly, for the accession of a new sovereign might mean a reversal of policy both in Church and State. However, he soon signified his approval of Donne's sermon (No. 12 in this volume), and accompanied the message with a command that it should be published. This was done speedily, and it appeared as "The first sermon preached to King Charles, At Saint James: 3^o April 1625," the publisher being Thomas Jones, and the printer A. M. (Augustin Matthewes). It was not reprinted in the folios, nor by Alford. Hence it is one of the least familiar of Donne's sermons, even to those who have access to the Folios. The text is chosen from Psalm 11.3: "If the Foundations be destroyed, what can the righteous doe?" Donne reassures his hearers that in truth the foundations of neither Church nor State have been destroyed. Christ is the foundation of the Church, and therefore it cannot be overthrown. The foundation of the State is the Law, and to each hearer Donne says: "Let the Law bee sacred to thee, and the Dispensers of the Law, reverend; Keepe the Law, and the Law shall keepe thee; And so Foundations being never destroyed, the Righteous shall doe still, as they have done, enjoy their Possessions, and Honours, and themselves, by the overshadowing of the Lawe, which is the Foundation of the second House, the State."⁵⁹ It would have been well for the young King if he had remembered this respect for the Law in later years, but at the moment he was full of good resolutions, and his subjects were pleased with him, for his projected marriage with Henrietta Maria was far more popular than the detested Spanish match, which James the First had first designed, and had then broken off.

The sermon (No. 13) preached at St. Paul's "in the Evening, upon Easter-day, 1625" is a good example of Donne's quieter manner. It contains no prose poems such as the paean on God's mercy which distinguishes the Christmas sermon of 1624, but it is full of intellectual vigor and sound sense. It is marked by some of Donne's acutest remarks on the relation of body and soul. Donne has sometimes been accused of an undue depreciation of the body in his sermons, but here he lays emphasis on the dignity of the body and its high value in God's sight.

"That God, all Spirit, served with Spirits, associated to Spirits, should have such an affection, such a love to this body, this earthly body, this deserves this wonder. The Father was pleased to breathe into this body, at first, in the Creation; The Son was pleased to assume this body himself, after, in the Redemption; The Holy Ghost is pleased to consecrate this body, and make it his Temple, by his sanctification . . ."⁶⁰ This leads him to condemn an excessive asceticism, by which men torture their own bodies, and a harshness which leads men to work their servants or laborers too hard. He condemns the weakening and deforming of the body by lust and intemperance, and also the excessive adorning of the body by the use of paint and cosmetics. He has also a word of rebuke for parsimonious "Heires and Executors" who neglect "the respect and duties, belonging to the dead bodies of Gods Saints, in a decent and comely accompanying them to convenient Funerals," and who "pretend better employments of that, which would be, (say they) vainly spent so."⁶¹ He sums up this section of his sermon in a forceful paragraph: "...marvell at this, at the wonderfull love of God to the body of man, and thou wilt favour it so, as not to macerate thine owne body, with uncommanded and inhumane flagellations, and whippings, nor afflict their bodies, who are in thy charge, with inordinate labour; thou wilt not dishonour this body, as it is Christs body, nor deforme it, as it is thine owne, with intemperance, but thou wilt behave thy selfe towards it

There is one part of this discussion of the dignity of the body which shows Donne's interest in the social and moral aspect of a legal practice which, though it still survived in the reign of Charles the First, and was not finally discontinued until 1640,⁶³ was beginning to trouble the consciences of sensitive souls. This was the practice of using torture to extort a confession from a prisoner—a practice so universal throughout the Middle Ages that it is strange to think that as far back as St. Augustine Christians had seen the folly and injustice of the method. Donne justifies his own attack on the practice by the example of his favorite saint: "S. Augustine moves a question, and institutes a disputation, and carries it somewhat problematically, whether torture be to be admitted at all, or no. That presents a faire probability, which he sayes against it: we presume, sayes he, that an innocent man should be able to hold his tongue in torture; That is no part of our purpose in torture, sayes he, that hee that is innocent, should accuse himselfe, by confession, in torture. And, if an innocent man be able to doe so, why should we not thinke, that a guilty man, who shall save his life, by holding his tongue in torture, should be able to doe so? And then, where is the use of torture?"⁶⁴

Donne continues with Augustine's exposition of the injustice of this horrible practice: "And whereas, many times, the passion of the Judge, and the covetousnesse of the Judge, and the ambition of the Judge, are calamities heavy enough, upon a man, that is accused, in this case of torture, Ignorantia Iudicis est calamitas plerumque innocentis, sayes that Father, for the most part, even the ignorance of the Judge, is the greatest calamity of him that is accused: If the Judge knew that he were innocent, he should suffer nothing; If he knew he were guilty, he should not suffer torture; but because the Judge is ignorant, and knowes nothing, therefore the Prisoner must bee racked, and tortured, and mangled, sayes that Father."⁶⁵

⁶³ "It has never been abolished by Act of Parliament in England, for . . . it has never been the law of our country: when used it was always carried out by the order of the King as one of the rights he claimed as pertaining to his position." L. A. Parry, History of Torture in England, pp. 32–33.

We may wonder that Donne should need to support his argument by the authority of St. Augustine, but we must remember that he had been a law student at Lincoln's Inn, and that he was familiar with the usual legal prejudice in favor of an established practice, which has made the path of legal reform so thorny and difficult.

The sermon as a whole, like all Donne's Easter sermons, is firmly based on that article of the Christian faith as expressed in the Apostles' Creed, "I believe in the resurrection of the body." This particular sermon is not concerned with Christ's own resurrection from the dead. We note that it was preached on the evening of Easter Day, and probably the morning preacher at St. Paul's had dealt already with that side of the Easter message. Donne concerns himself here with two kinds of resurrection which the Christian believer is to experience—a resurrection of the soul from sin, which takes place in this life, and a resurrection of the body after death, for which he must await the Last Day.

A few days later, Donne preached at Denmark House, shortly before the body of King James was removed from it for burial. Denmark House was in Westminster, and had formerly been known as Somerset House, after its earlier owner, the Protector Somerset. In 1596, Queen Elizabeth granted the keeping of the house to her kinsman, Lord Hunsdon, for life. Later, James I gave it to his Queen, Anne of Denmark, and commanded that it be called Denmark House. Of Donne's sermon (No. 14) Dr. Jessopp wrote, "A greater contrast than this beautiful sermon offers to the fulsome and almost profane oration which the Bishop of Lincoln (Williams) delivered at Westminster Abbey can hardly be imagined."⁶⁰ Indeed it is only by comparing Donne's sermons with those of his immediate contemporaries that we can realize how comparatively sober and restrained was the eulogy which Donne delivered on the dead king.

Donne chose a text from Canticles, "Goe forth ye Daughters of Sion, and behold King Solomon, with the Crown, wherewith his mother crowned him, in the day of his espousals and in the day of the gladnesse of his heart." The choice suggests a delicate allusion to the fact that James for his learning and his pacific policy had been called "the British Solomon," but Donne devotes most of his sermon to

Christ as prefigured by Solomon. "...Behold King Solomon; Solomon the sonne of David, but not the Son of Bathsheba, but of a better Mother, the most blessed Virgin Mary. For, Solomon, in this text, is not a proper Name, but an Appellative; a significative word: Solomon is pacificus, the Peacemaker, and our peace is made in, and by Christ Jesus... Now, as Saint Paul says, that he would know nothing but Christ... and then he would know nothing of Christ, but him crucified... so we seek no other glasse, to see our selves in, but Christ, nor any other thing in this glasse, but his Humiliation. What need we? Even that, his lowest humiliation, his death, is expressed here, in three words of exaltation, It is a Crown, it is a Mariage, it is the gladnesse of heart: Behold King Salomon crowned..."⁸⁷ It is only at the close that Donne turns to the commemoration of the dead King, and then in a sufficiently dignified manner. "But then the hand of God, hath not set up, but laid down another Glasse, wherein thou maist see thy self... Christ, who was the other glasse, is like thee in every thing, but not absolutely, for sinne is excepted; but in this glasse presented now (The Body of our Royall, but dead Master and Sovereigne) we cannot, we doe not except sinne.... Those therefore that are like thee in all things, subject to humane infirmities, subject to sinnes, and yet are translated, and translated by Death, to everlasting Joy, and Glory, are nearest and clearest glasses for thee, to see thy self in; and such is this glasse, which God hath proposed to thee, in this house. And therefore, change the word of the Text, in a letter or two, from Egredimini, to Ingredimini; never go forth to see, but Go in and see a Solomon crowned with his mothers crown..."⁸⁸

On May 8, Donne preached the first of his "Prebend Sermons." As Dean Donne was one of the thirty prebendaries of St. Paul's, "The Psalter was divided up among the thirty prebendaries, each of whom was supposed to recite his five psalms daily, and to make them his special subject of meditation. Donne took his place in the Chapter as prebendary of Chiswick, and his five psalms were the 62nd to the 66th. inclusive."⁸⁹

This was a congenial task for Donne, who has told us that the Psalms were his favorite reading in the Old Testament. "I acknowledge, that my spirituall appetite carries me still, upon the Psalms of David, for a first course, for the Scriptures of the Old Testament: and upon the Epistles of Saint Paul, for a second course, for the New, and my meditations even for these publike exercises to Gods Church, returne oftneft to these two." He justifies this preference by the examples of St. Augustine and St. Chrysostom, and adds, "I may have another more particular reason, because they are Scriptures, written in such forms, as I have been most accustomed to; Saint Pauls being Letters, and Davids being Poems; for, God gives us, not onely that which is meerly necessary, but that which is convenient too."⁷⁰

Donne began this sermon (No. 15) by praising the Psalter as a whole, and by explaining to his congregation that he proposed from time to time to preach on texts taken from his five special psalms "for some testimony, that those my five Psalmes returne often into my meditation." Though he took as his text the ninth verse, which speaks of men as "lighter than vanity," he gave utterance to an eloquent description of man as "a great thing, a noble Creature" in his relation to God's purpose: "...When we see Man made The Love of the Father, The Price of the Sonne, The Temple of the Holy Ghost, The Signet upon Gods hand, The Apple of Gods eye, Absolutely, unconditionally we cannot annihilate man, not evacuate, not evaporate, not extenuate man to the levity, to the vanity, to the nullity of this Text (Surely men altogether, high and low, are lighter then vanity.) For, man is not onely a contributory Creature, but a totall Creature; He does not onely make one, but he is all; He is not a piece of the world, but the world it selfe; and next to the glory of God, the reason why there is a world."⁷¹

Donne preached again on Whitsunday, which fell on June 5, but our assumption that the sermon which we have printed as No. 16 belongs here, is conjectural. It belongs to this period, and it has certain links with other sermons of this year, especially with that preached on March 4 (No. 11), in which Donne had dwelt on the essential goodness of God and on the fact that everything made by God is good. Here Donne says: "Thou canst not be so absolutely, so intirely, so essentially sinfull, as God is absolutely, and intirely, and essentially mercifull. Doe what thou canst, there is still some goodnesse in thee; that nature that God made, is good still; Doe God what hee will, hee cannot strip himselfe, not devest himselfe of mercy."⁷² Moreover, the passage in which David and Mary Magdalen are linked together⁷³ is reminiscent of the Hymne to the Saints, and to Marquess Hamylton, written in March 1624/1625. There is also a return to Donne's polemical manner, which suits with the fact that after the abandonment of the Spanish marriage project and the outbreak of war with Spain the penal laws against recusants were put in force again. This seems to be the meaning of Donne's words in this sermon: "... But then, this is our comfort still, that where their perversnesse shall endanger either Church or State, both the State and Church may ... and will return to those means which God allows them for their preservation, that is, To whet the edge of the Iron, in execution of the laws."⁷⁴

After this we have an interval of six months before the Christmas Day sermon, 1625 (No. 17). This year there was a special reason for a longer interval than the usual summer recess. London was visited by an epidemic of plague, which was probably more terrible than any except the Great Plague of 1665. During April and May there had been a steady increase in the number of deaths recorded, and in June the mortality rose much more rapidly.⁷⁵ Nevertheless, the arrival of the new Queen, Henrietta Maria, from France, and the opening of Parliament kept many people in London during June. Charles the First met his bride at Dover on June 13, and three days later they entered London by water. The citizens were ordered to indulge in suitable rejoicings, bonfires were lit in the streets, and the City bells rang continuously for seven hours.⁷⁶ Parliament assembled on June 18, sat for three weeks, and was adjourned on July 11 to meet at Oxford on August 1, though most members had left London a week or more before the adjournment,⁷⁷ owing to their fear of the plague.

Trinity Term had been adjourned on June 18, and six days later all trials by jury were abandoned.⁷⁸ In July more than 5,000 people died of the plague in London itself, and in August the number rose to 19,000. The mortality was proportionally as great in what were then the outlying districts of Westminster, Lambeth, Stepney, and Islington.⁷⁹

The general terror was increased by lack of any proper understanding of the cause of an epidemic of plague. The plague bacillus was not isolated till as late as 1894, and it was only then that the discovery was made that bubonic plague is a disease of rats, and that the infection is transmitted from rat to rat and from rat to man by the bite of rat fleas. The plague may be transmitted from place to place by fleas which are carried by people on their persons or in their baggage. In the seventeenth century no one in England suspected the rat as a cause of infection. Some thought that the plague was due to sin, and that it might be likened to God's arrow flying through the air. Others held that the cause was to be found in the planets. According to them, the plague of 1625 "was the consequence of a great Conjunction of Saturn, Jupiter, and Mars, in the Celestial Sign Leo, a sign of the fiery triplicity, and representing the heart in the Microcosme."⁸⁰ Another theory assigned the plague to the corruption of the air "by a hidden and secret propertie," and this took place especially when the air was hot and moist. There was, however, a general consensus that whatever might be the cause of the plague, it was transmitted by infected persons to those who were well; that segregation was the remedy in the first place, and if the epidemic became general, flight from the city was the only wise course. This was the view of the authorities, and elaborate plague orders were issued to secure segregation. The Court and Parliament took the lead in forsaking London. A solemn fast was held on July 2, 1625, and the King himself, with the Lords of the Upper House and the Judges, heard two sermons in the Abbey, while the House of Commons heard three sermons, the first of three hours, and the other two of two hours each, in St. Margaret's, Westminster. After this ordeal most of the members left London without waiting for the formal adjournment on July 11, and the Court moved first to Hampton Court, which became infected, then to Oatlands, to Windsor, and finally to Woodstock near Oxford, where it remained while Parliament sat at Oxford during the first part of August. Rich and poor fled from stricken London, so that at last almost all the shops were shut and the streets were as deserted at mid-day as they were ordinarily at three o'clock in the morning. The usual sounds of cheerful traffic were stilled, and "in their stead were heard the howling of dogs, the raving of the sick, and the mourning of the bereaved. . . . In Cheapside it was almost impossible to change a piece of gold, and if spice were needed to make comfortable Broth, it was not to be had: for all the grocers had fled."⁸¹

Meanwhile, the scum of the great city, the criminals and the vagabonds, set about looting the empty houses. Donne has a vivid passage on this in his "First Sermon after our Dispersion, by the Sickness" (No. 18): "... even in this City, no doubt but the hand of God fell upon thousands in this deadly infection, who were no more affected with it, then those Egyptians, to cry out, Omnes Moriemur, We can but die, and we must die: And . . . Let us eat and drink, and take our pleasure, and make our profits, for to morrow we shall die, and so were cut off by the hand of God, some even in their robberies, in half-empty houses; and in their drunkenness in voluptuous and riotous houses; and in their lusts and wantonness in licentious houses; and so took in infection and death, like Judas's sop, death dipt and soaked in sin. Men whose lust carried them into the jaws of infection in lewd houses, and seeking one sore perished with another; men whose rapine and covetousness broke into houses, and seeking the Wardrobes of others, found their own winding-sheet, in the infection of that house where they stole their own death; men who sought no other way to divert sadness, but strong drink in riotous houses, and there drank up David's cup of Malediction, the cup of Condemned men, of death, in the infection of that place."⁸²

He has also left us an account of the flight of the citizens in a letter written to Sir Thomas Roe on November 25, 1625: "... the Citizens fled away, as out of a house on fire, and stuffed their pockets with their best ware, and threw themselves into the highways, and were not received, so much as into barns, and perished so, some of them with more money about them than would have bought the village where they died. A Justice of peace—into his Examination it fell—told me of one that died so, with 1400 l. about him. I scattered my family, and . . . removed for a time to Chelsea, where within a few weeks the infection multiplied so fast, as that it was no good Manners to go to any other place, and so I have been in a secular Monastery . . . the infection hath made this village so infamous as that I go not to Court, though it be at Hampton.”⁸³

At Chelsea, Donne stayed in the house of his good friends Sir John and Lady Danvers. Before her second marriage Lady Danvers had been Magdalen Herbert, mother of George Herbert and of Lord Herbert of Cherbury. Donne employed his enforced leisure and seclusion by going through the notes of his sermons, and writing them out in full for the use of his elder son John, who was at this time an undergraduate of Christ Church, Oxford, and who was beginning to show signs of intellectual promise by contributing Latin poems to three volumes which were published in 1623, 1624, and 1625, respectively.

In December, Donne wrote to Sir Henry Goodyer contradicting a report of his own death: “The report of my death hath thus much of truth in it, that though I be not dead, yet I am buried; within a few weeks after I immured my self in this house, the infection strook into the town, into so many houses, as that it became ill manners to make any visits. Therefore I never went to Knoll, nor Hanworth, nor Kenton, nor to the Court, since the Court came into these quarters, nor am yet come to London; therefore I am little able to give you account of high stages. . . . Mr. George Herbert is here at the receipt of your letter, and with his service to you, tells you that all of Uvedall House are well.”⁸⁴ This seems to be the first mention of George Herbert in any of Donne’s writings.

On Christmas Day Donne preached at St. Paul’s (No. 17). He opened his sermon with an eloquent passage on the nature of eternity, and the eternal generation of the Son of God. On the whole, however, the sermon is less interesting than most of Donne’s Christmas sermons, and Coleridge severely criticized the puerility of some of its statements. Thus on the remark (on p. 334) about a "barbarous and inhumane custome" of the Jews, he wrote: "Is it possible that Donne could have given credit to this absurd legend? It was, I am aware, not an age of critical acumen. . . . Still, that a man like Donne should have imposed on himself such a set of idle tales, as he has collected in the next paragraph for facts of history, is scarcely credible; that he should have attempted to impose them on others, is most melancholy."⁸⁵

Donne made no mention of the plague in this discourse. He reserved his reflections for the sermon which he preached three weeks later at St. Dunstan's (No. 18), which is entitled "The First Sermon after our Dispersion, by the Sickness." It is a powerful discourse on the text "For there was not a house where there was not one dead." There are in it some gruesome passages, such as: "...consider upon what ground you tread; upon ground so holy, as that all the ground is made of the bodies of Christians, and therein hath received a second consecration. Every puff of wind within these walls, may blow the father into the sons eys, or the wife into her husbands, or his into hers, or both into their childrens, or their childrens into both. Every grain of dust that flies here, is a piece of a Christian; you need not distinguish your Pews by figures; you need not say, I sit within so many of such a neighbour, but I sit within so many inches of my husbands, or wives, or childes, or friends grave. Ambitious men never made more shift for places in Court, then dead men for graves in Churches; and as in our later times, we have seen two and two almost in every Place and Office, so almost every Grave is oppressed with twins . . . so in this lamentable calamity, the dead were buried, and thrown up again before they were resolved to dust, to make room for more."⁸⁶ This is doleful enough, but Donne passes from his morbid contemplation of the dead to give consolation to the mourners: "...we forbid not that office of the eye, that holy tenderness, to weep for them that are so dead. But there was a part in every one of them, that could not die; which the God of life, who breathed it into them, from his own mouth, hath suck'd into his own bosome. . . . When time shall be no more, when death shall be no more, they shall renew, or rather continue their being. . . . And our afternoon shall be as long as Gods forenoon; for, as God never saw beginning, so we shall never see end; but they whom we tread upon now, and we whom others shall tread upon hereafter, shall meet at once, where, though we were dead, dead in our several houses, dead in a sinful Egypt, dead in our family, dead in our selves, dead in the Grave, yet we shall be received, with that consolation, and glorious consolation, you were dead, but are alive. *Enter ye blessed into the Kingdom, prepared for you, from the beginning.*⁸⁷

Preached upon the Penitentiall Psalmes.

[April, May, or June, 1623]

PSAL. 6.8, 9, 10. DEPART FROM ME, ALL YE WORKERS OF INIQUITIE; FOR THE LORD HATH HEARD THE VOYCE OF MY WEEPING.

THE LORD HATH HEARD MY SUPPLICATION; THE LORD WILL RECEIVE MY PRAYER.

LET ALL MINE ENEMIES BE ASHAMED AND SORE VEXED: LET THEM RETURNE AND BE ASHAMED SUDDENLY.

THIS is Davids profligation and discomfiture of his enemies; this is an act of true honour, a true victory, a true triumph, to keepe the field, to make good one station, and yet put the enemy to flight. A man may perchance be safe in a Retrait, but the honour, the victory, the triumph lies in enforcing the enemy to fly. To that is David come here, to such a thankfull sense of a victory; in which we shall first consider Davids thankfulnesse, that is, his manner of declaring Gods mercy, and his security in that mercy; which manner is, that he durst come to an open defiance, and protestation, and hostility, without modifications, or disguises, Depart from me all yee workers of iniquity. And then, secondly, we shall see his reason, upon which he grounded this confidence, and this spirituall exultation, which was a pregnant reason, a reason that produced another reason; The Lord hath heard my supplication, the Lord will heare my prayer; upon no premises doth any conclusion follow, so logically, so sincerely, so powerfully, so imperiously, so undeniably, as upon this, The Lord hath, and therefore the Lord will. But then what was

²⁰ that it was so, because God heard it then; for we are not bound, nay, we are not allowed to pray all such prayers, as good men have prayed, and as God hath heard. But here the prayer was this, Let all mine enemies be ashamed, and sore vexed, let them returne, and be ashamed suddenly. But this is a malediction, an imprecation of mischiefe upon others; and will good men pray so? or will God heare that? Because that is an holy problem, and an usefull intergatory, we shall make it a third part, or a conclusion rather, to enquire into the nature, and into the avowableness, and exemplarinesse of this, in which David seemes to have been transported with some passion.

Divisio ³⁰ So that our parts will be three, the building it selfe, *David*s thanksgiving in his exultation, and declaration, Depart from mee all yee workers of iniquitie; and then the foundation of this building, For God hath heard, and therefore God will heare; and lastly, the prospect of this building, David contemplates and lookes over againe the prayer that he had made, and in a cleare understanding, and in a rectified Conscience, he finds that he may persist in that prayer, and he doth so: Let all mine enemies be ashamed, and sore vexed, let them returne, and be ashamed suddenly.

I. Part

First then we consider *David*s thankfulness: But why is it so long ⁴⁰ before David leads us to that consideration? Why hath he deferred so primary a duty, to so late a place, to so low a roome, to the end of the Psalme? The Psalme hath a Deprecatory part, that God would forbear him, and a Postulatory part, that God would heare him, and grant some things to him, and a Gratulatory part, a sacrifice of thanksgiving. Now the Deprecatory part is placed in the first place, Vers. I. For if it were not so, if we should not first ground that, That God should not rebuke us in his anger, nor chasten us in his hot displeasure, but leave our selves open to his indignation, and his judgements, wee could not live to come to a second petition; our sinnes, ⁵⁰ and judgements due to our sinnes, require our first consideration; therefore David begins with the deprecatory prayer, That first Gods anger may be removed: but then, that deprecatory prayer, wherein he desired God to forbear him, spends but one verse of the Psalme; David would not insist upon that long: When I have penitently con-

fest my sinnes, I may say with Iob, My flesh is not brasse, nor my bones stones, that I can beare the wrath of the Lord; but yet I must say with Iov too, If the Lord kill me, yet will I trust in him. God hath not asked me, What shall I doe for thee, but of himselfe he hath done more, then I could have proposed to my selfe in a wish, or to him in ⁶⁰ a prayer. Nor will I aske God, Quousque, how long shall my foes increase? how long wilt thou fight on their side against me? but surrender my selfe entirely, in an adveniat regnum, and a fiat voluntas, thy kingdome come, and thy will be done. David makes it his first worke, to stay Gods anger in a deprecatory prayer, but he stayes not upon that long, he will not prescribe his Physitian, what he shall prescribe to him, but leaves God to his own medicines, and to his own methode. But then the Postulatory prayer, what he begs of God, employs six verses: as well to shew us, that our necessities are many; as also that if God doe not answer us, at the beginning of our prayer, ⁷⁰ our duty is still to pursue that way, to continue in prayer. And then the third part of the Psalme, which is the Gratulatory part, his giving of thanks, is, shall we say deferred, or rather reserved to the end of the Psalme, and exercises onely those three verses which are our Text. Not that the duty of thanksgiving is lesse then that of prayer; for if we could compare them, it is rather greater; because it contributes more to Gods glory, to acknowledge by thanks, that God hath given, then to acknowledge by prayer, that God can give. But therefore might David be later and shorter here, in expressing that duty of thanks, first, because being reserved to the end, and close of the other duty of repentance, which belongs to Prayer; for in all Solomons bookes, you shall not finde halfe so much of the duty of thankfulnessse, as you shall in Seneca and in Plutarch. No book of Ethicks, of morall doctrine, is come to us, wherein there is not, almost in every leafe, some detestation, some Anathema against ingratitude; but of repentance, not a word amongst them all. And therefore in that dutie of prayer, which presumes repentance, (for he must stand Rectus in curia that will pray) David hath insisted longest; and because he would enter, and establish a man, upon a confidence in God,¹⁰⁰ he begins with a deprecation of his anger; for but upon that ground, no man can stand; and because he would dismisse him with that which concerns him most, he chooseth to end in a Thanksgiving.

Therefore at last he comes to his thanks. Now this is so poore a duty, if we proportion it to the infinitenesse of Gods love unto us, our thanks, as we may justly call it nothing at all. But Amor Dei affectus, non contractus, The love of God is not a contract, a bargaine, he looks for nothing againe, and yet he looks for thanks, for that is nothing, because there is nothing done in it, it is but speaking; Gratias dicere,¹¹⁰ est gratias agere, To utter our thanks to God, is all our performance of thankfulnessse. It is not so amongst us; Vix, aut nunquam apud nos purum, & merum beneficium; Every man that gives, gives out of designe, and as it conduces to his ends: Donat in hamo, There is a hook in every benefit, that sticks in his jawes that takes that benefit, and drawes him whither the Benefactor will. God looks for nothing, nothing to be done in the way of exact recompence, but yet, as he that makes a Clock, bestowes all that labour upon the severall wheelles, that thereby the Bell might give a sound, and that thereby the hand might give knowledge to others how the time passes; so this is the¹²⁰ principall part of that thankfulnessse, which God requires from us, that we make open declarations of his mercies, to the winning and confirming of others.

Discedite

This David does in this noble and ingenuous publication, and protestation, I have strength enough, and company enough, power enough, and pleasure enough, joy enough, and treasure enough, honour enough, and recompence enough in my God alone, in him I shall surely have all which you can pretend to give, and therefore Discedite à me, Depart from me all ye workers of iniquity; Here is then first, a valediction, a parting with his old company, but it is a valediction, ¹³⁰ with a malediction, with an imprecation of Gods Justice, upon their contempts and injuries. There was in the mouth of Christ, sometimes, such a Discede, such an Abito, as that farewell was a welcome; as when he said to the Ruler, Abito, Goe thy way, thy son liveth; And when he said to the woman, Goe in peace, thy faith hath saved thee.

 This going was a staying with him still; Here the Abite, and Venite was all one. He that goes about his worldly businesse, and goes about them in Gods name, in the feare and favour of God, remaines in Gods presence still. When the Angels of God are sent to visit his children, in the midst of Sodome, or where they lie, and languish ¹⁴⁰ in sordid and nasty corners, and in the loathsomenesse of corrupt and infectious diseases, or where they faint in miserable dungeons, this Commission, this Discedite, goe to that Sodome, to that Spittle, to that Dungeon, puts not those Angels out of the presence of God.
 No descent into hell, of what kinde soever you conceive that descent into hell to have been, put the Son of God out of heaven, by descending into hell; no Discede, no Leave, no Commandement that God gives us, to doe the works of our calling here, excludes us from him; but as the Saints of God shall follow the Lamb, wheresoever he goes in heaven, so the Lamb of God shall follow his Saints, wheresoever ¹⁵⁰ they goe upon earth, if they walk sincerely. Christ uses not then as yet, as long as we are in this world, this Discede of David, to bid any man, any sinner to depart from him: But there shall come a time, when Christ shall take Davids Discede, the words of this Text into his mouth, with as much and more bitterness then David does here, Nescivi vos, I never knew yee, and therefore Depart from me yee workers of iniquity.

Servi sui

So have you his Protestation, his Proclamation, They must avoid; but who? Who be these that David dismisses here? Take them to be those of his owne house, his Servants, and Officers in neare places, ¹⁶⁰ whose service he had used to ill purposes, (as Davids Person, and Rank, and History directs us upon that Consideration) and we shall finde all such persons, wrapt up in this danger, that they dare not discharge themselves, they dare not displace, nor disgrace those men, to whom by such employments, they have given that advantage over themselves, as that it is not safe to them, to offend such a servant.

Polybius

Naturâ nec hostem habet, nec amicum rex, says a wise Statesman; In nature, (that is, in the nature of greatnesse, and, as great) great persons consider no man to be so much a friend, nor to be so much an enemy, but that they will fall out with that friend, and be reconciled to that enemy, to serve their own turne, sayes that Statesman.¹⁷⁰ But yet when great Persons trust servants with such secret actions, as may bring them into contempt at home, or danger abroad, by those vices, if they should be published, they cannot come when they would, to this Discedite, Depart from me all ye workers of iniquity.

2 Sam. 19.

We have this evidently, and unavoidably, we cannot but see it, and say it, in this example which is before us, even in King David. He had employed Ioab in such services, as that he stood in feare of him, and indured at his hands that behaviour, and that language, Thou hast shamed this day the faces of all thy servants that have saved thy life, and thy sons, and daughters, and wives, and concubines, thou regardedst neither thy Princes, nor servants; but come out, and speak comfortably unto them, for I sweare by the Lord, except thou doe come out, there will not tarry one man with thee this night. David indured all this, for he knew that Ioab had that letter in his Cabbinet, which he writ to him for the murder of Vriah, and he never came to this Discedite, to remove Ioab from him in his life, but gave it in Commandement to his Son, Let not Ioabs hoary head goe downe to the grave in peace: Here is the misery of David, he cannot discharge himselfe of that servant when he will, and here the misery of that¹⁸⁰ servant, that at one time or other he will; and he is a short liv'd man, whose ruine a jealous Prince studies. Because the Text invited us, commanded, and constrained us to do so, we put this example in a Court, but we need not dazle our selves with that height; every man in his own house may finde it, that to those servants, which have served him in ill actions, he dares not say, Discedite, Depart from me ye workers of iniquity.¹⁹⁰

Tentatores

Thus then it is; if those whom David dismisses here, were his owne servants, it was an expressing of his thankfulnessse to God, and a duty that lay upon him, to deliver himselfe of such servants. But other²⁰⁰ Expositors take these men, to be men of another sort, men that came to triumph over him in his misery, men that Persecuted him whom God had smitten, and added to the sorrow of him whom God had wounded, as himselfe complaines; men that pretended to visit him, yet when they came, They spoke lies, their hearts gathered iniquity to themselves, and when they went abroad they told it; Men that said to one another, When shall he dye, and his name perish? Here also was a Declaration of the powerfullnesse of Gods Spirit in him, that he could triumph over the Triumpher, and exorcise those evill spirits, and command them away, whose comming was to dishonour God, and to argue and conclude out of his ruine, that either his God was a weake God, or a cruell God, that he could not, or would not deliver his servants from destruction.

Psal. 69.26

Ver. 5

That David could command them away, whose errand was to blaspheme God, and whose staying in a longer conversation, might have given him occasion of new sins, either in distrusting Gods mercy towards himselfe, or in murmuring at Gods patience towards them, or perchance in being uncharitably offended with them, and expressing it with some bitterness, but that in respect of himselfe, and not of Gods glory only, this Discedite, Depart from me all such men as do sin in your selves, and may make me sin too, was an act of an heavenly courage, and a thankfull testimony of Gods gracious visiting his soule, inabling him so resolutely to teare himselfe from such persons, as might lead him into tentation.

Neither is this separation of David, and this company, partiall; he does not banish those that incline him to one sin, a sin that perchance he is a weary of, or growne unable to proceed in, and retained them that concurre with him in some fresh sin, to which he hath a new appetite. David doth not banish them that suckt his Subjects blood, or their money, and retained them that sollicite, and corrupt their wives, and daughters; he doth not displace them, who served the vices of his predecessor, and supply those places with instruments of new vices of his owne, but it is Discedite omnes, Depart all yee workers of iniquity. Now beloved, when God begins so high as in Kings, he makes this duty the easier to thee; to banish from thee, All the workers of iniquity. It is not a Discede, that will serve to banish one, and retaine the rest, Nor a Discedite, to banish the rest, and retaine one, but Discedite omnes, Depart all, for that sinne staies in state, that staies alone, and hath the venome, and the malignity of all the rest contracted in it. It is nothing for a sick man that hath lost his taste, to ²⁴⁰ say, Discedat gula, Depart voluptuousnesse; nothing in a consumption to say, Discedat luxuria, Depart wantonnesse; nothing for a Client in Forma pauperis, to say, Discedat corruptio, I will not bribe; but Discedant omnes, Depart all, and all together ye workers of iniquity.

Operantes

But yet David's generall discharge had, and ours must have, a restriction, a limitation; it is not (as S. Ierom notes upon this place) Omnes qui operati, but Omnes operantes, not all that have wrought iniquity, but all that continue in doing so still. David was not inexorable towards those that had offended; what an example should he have given God against himselfe, if he had beene so? wee must not ²⁵⁰ despise, nor defame men, because they have committed some sin. When the mercie of God hath wrought upon their sin in the remission thereof, that leprosie of Naaman cleaves to us, their sinne is but transferred to us, if we will not forgive that which God hath forgiven, for it is but Omnes operantes, all they that continue in their evill wayes.

Rom. 16.17

All these must depart: how far? first, they must be avoided, Declinate, saith S. Paul, I beseech you brethren, marke them diligently which cause division and offences, and avoid them. And this corrects our desire in running after such men, as come with their owne inventions, Schismaticall Separatists, Declinate, avoid them; if hee be ²⁶⁰ no such, but amongst our selves, a brother, but yet a worker of iniquity, If any one that is called a brother, be a Fornicator, or covetous, with such a one eate not. If we cannot starve him out, wee must thrust him out; Put away from among you, that wicked man. No conversation at all is allowed to us, with such a man, as is obstinate in his sin, and incorrigible; no not to bid him God speed, For he that biddeth him God speed, is partaker of his evill deeds. In this divorce, both the generality, and the distance is best exprest by Christ himselfe, If thine eye, thine hand, thy foote offend thee, amputandi & projiciendi, with what anguish or remorse soever it be done, they must bee cut off, and ²⁷⁰ being cut off, cast away; it is a divorce and no super-induction, it is a separating, and no redintegration. Though thou couldest be content to goe to Heaven with both eyes, (thy selfe, and thy companion) yet better to goe into Heaven with one, thy selfe alone, then to endanger thy selfe to be left out for thy companions sake.

Discedite

To conclude this first part, David does not say, Discedam, but Discedite, he does not say, that he will depart from them, but he commands them to depart from him. Wee must not thinke to depart from the offices of society, and duties of a calling, and hide our selves in Monasteries, or in retired lives, for feare of tentations; but when a tentation²⁸⁰ attempts us, to come with that authority, and that powerfull exorcisme of Nazianzen, Fuge, recede, ne te cruce Christi, ad quam omnia contremiscunt, feriam, Depart from me, lest the Crosse of Christ, in my hand, overthrow you. For a sober life, and a Christian mortification, and discreet discipline, are crosses derived from the Crosse of Christ Jesus, and animated by it, and may be alwaies in a readinesse to crosse such tentations. In the former descriptions of the manner of our behaviour towards workers of iniquity, there is one Declinate, one word that implies a withdrawing of our selves; for that must be done, not out of the world, but out of that ill ayre, we must not put our²⁹⁰ selves in danger, nor in distance of a tentation; but all the other words, are words of a more active vehemence, Amputate, and Projicite; it is Discedite, and not Discedam, a driving away, and not a running away.

Wee proceed now in our second part, to the reasons of Dauids confidence, and his opennesse, and his publique declaration; why David was content to be rid of all his company; and it was, because he had better; he sayes, The Lord had heard him; and first, He had heard, vocem fletus, the voice of his weeping. Here is an admirable readinesse in God, that heares a voyce in that, which hath none. They have described God by saying he is all eye, an universall eye, that pierceth³⁰⁰ into every darke corner; but in darke corners, there is something for him to see; but he is all eare too, and heares even the silent, and speechlesse man, and heares that in that man, that makes no sound, his teares. When Hezekias wept, he was turned to the wall, (perchance, because he would not be seene) and yet God bad the Prophet Esay tell him, Vidi lacrymam; though the text say, Hezekias wept sore, yet Vidit lacrymam, God saw every single teare, his first teare, and was affected with that. But yet this is more strange; God heard his teares. And therefore the weeping of a penitent sinner, is not improperly called, Legatio lacrymarum, An embassage of teares; To Embas-³¹⁰ sadours belongs an audience, and to these Embassages God gives a gracious audience; Abyssus abyssum invocat, One depth calls upon another; And so doth one kinde of teares call upon one another. Teares of sorrow call upon teares of joy, and all call upon God, and bring him to that ready hearing which is implied in the words of this text, Shamang; a word of that largeness in the Scriptures, that sometimes in the Translation of the Septuagint, it signifies hearing, Shamang, is audit, God gives eare to our teares; sometimes it is beleeving, Shamang, is Credit, God gives faith, and credit to our teares; sometimes it is Affecting, Shamang, is Miseretur, God hath mercy upon us for ³²⁰ our teares; sometimes it is Effecting, Shamang, is Respondet, God answers the petition of our teares; and sometimes it is Publication, Shamang, is Divulgat, God declares and manifests to others, by his blessings upon us, the pleasure that he takes in our holy and repentant teares. And therefore Lacrymæ fœnus, sayes S. Basil, Teares are that usury, by which the joyes of Heaven are multiplied unto us; the preventing Grace, and the free mercy of God, is our stock, and principall; but the Acts of obedience, and mortification, fasting, and praying, and weeping, are Fœnus, (sayes that blessed Father) the interest, and the increase of our holy joy.

³³⁰ That which we intend in all this, is, that when our heart is well disposed toward God, God sees our prayers, as they are comming in the way, before they have any voyce, in our words. When Christ came to Lazarus house, before Mary had asked any thing at his hands, as soone as she had wept, Christ was affected, He groaned in the spirit, he was troubled, and he wept too; and he proceeded to the raising of Lazarus, before shee asked him; her eyes were his glasse, and he saw her desire in her tears. There is a kind of simplicity in teares, which God harkens to, and beleeves. We know not what we should pray for as we ought. Quid? nescimus orationem dominicam? Can we not say ³⁴⁰ the Lords Prayer, sayes S. Augustin? Yes, we can say that; but Nescimus tribulationem prodesse, sayes he, we doe not know the benefit, that is to be made of tribulation, and tentation, Et petimus liberari ab omni malo, we pray to be delivered from all evill, and we meane all tribulation, and all tentation, as though all they were alwaies evill; but in that there may be much error: The sons of Zebedee prayed, but ambitiously, and were not heard; S. Paul prayed for the taking away of the provocation of the flesh, but inconsiderately, and mist; the Apostles made a request, for fire against the Samaritans, but uncharitably, and were reprov'd. But when Iehosaphat was come what to say, Hoc solum residui habemus, sayes he, ut oculos nostros dirigamus ad te, This we can doe, and we need doe no more, wee can turne our eyes to thee. Now whether he directed those eyes in looking to him, or in weeping to him, God heares the voyce of our looks, God heares the voyce of our teares, sometimes better then the voyce of our words; for it is the Spirit it selfe that makes intercession for us, Gemitibus inenarrabilibus, In those groanes, and so in those teares, which we cannot utter; Ineloquacibus, as Tertullian reads that place, devout, and simple teares, which cannot speak, speake aloud in the eares of God; nay, teares which we cannot utter; not onely not utter the force of the teares, but not utter the very teares themselves. As God sees the water in the spring in the veines of the earth, before it bubble upon the face of the earth; so God sees teares in the heart of a man, before they blubber his face; God heares the teares of that sorrowfull soule, which for sorrow cannot shed teares.

Rom. 8.26

From this casting up of the eyes, and powring out the sorrow of the heart at the eyes, at least, opening God a window, through which he may see a wet heart through a dry eye; from these overtures of repentance, which are as those unperfect sounds of words, which Parents delight in, in their Children, before they speake plaine, a penitent sinner comes to a verball, and a more expresse prayer. To these prayers, these vocall and verball prayers from David, God had given eare, and from this hearing of those prayers was David come to this thankfull confidence, The Lord hath heard, the Lord will heare. Now, Beloved, this prayer which David speaks of here, which our first translation calls a Petition, is very properly rendred in our second translation, a Supplication; for Supplications were à Suppliciis; Supplications amongst the Gentiles were such sacrifices, as were made to the gods, out of confiscations, out of the goods of those men, upon whom the State had inflicted any pecuniary or capitall punishment. Supplicationes, à Suppliciis; and therefore this prayer which David made to God, when his hand was upon him, in that heavy correction, and calamitie, which occasioned this Psalme, is truly and properly called a Supplication, that is, a Prayer, or Petition, that proceeds from suffering.

Supplicatio

And if God have heard his supplication, if God have regarded him then, when he was in his displeasure, if God have turned to him, when he was turned from him, and stroakt him with the same hand that struck him, God will much more perfect his own worke, and grant his 390 prayer after; if God would endure to looke upon him in his deformitie, he will delight to looke upon him then, when he hath shed the light and the lovelinesse of his owne countenance upon him: It is the

 Rom. 5.10 Apostles argument, as well as Dauids, If when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God, by the death of his Sonne, much more being reconciled, we shall be saved by his life. When David found, that God had heard his Supplications, the voyce of his suffering, of his punishment, he was sure he would heare his Prayer, the voyce of his thankfulness too.

Oratio

And this was Dauids second reason, for his alacrity, and confidence, 400 that God would never be weary of hearing, he had heard him, and he would heare him still, he had heard the Supplication, and he would heare his Prayer; for this word, which signifies Prayer here, is derived from Palal, which signifies properly Separare: As his Supplication was acceptable, which proceeded à Suppliciis, from a sense of his afflictions; so this Prayer, which came Post separationem, after he had separated, and divorced himselfe from his former company, after his Discedite, his discharging of all the workers of iniquitie, must necessarily be better accepted at Gods hand. He that heares a Suppliant, that is, a man in misery, and does some small matter for the present ease of that 410 man, and proceeds no farther, Ipsam quod dedit, perit, That which he gave is lost, it is drowned by that floud of misery that overflows and surrounds that wretched man, he is not the better to morrow for to dayes almes, Et vitam producit ad miseriam, that very almes prolongs his miserable life still; without to dayes almes, he should not have had a to morrow to be miserable in. Now, Christ onely is the Samari-
 Luk. 10.33 tane which perfected his cure upon the wounded man: He saw him, sayes the text, so did the rest that passed by him; but, He had compassion on him; so he might, and yet actually have done him no good; but, He went to him; so he might too, and then out of a delicate-420 nesse or fastidiousnesse, have gone from him againe; but (to contract) he bound up his wounds, he powred in oyle and wine, he put him upon his own beast, he brought him to an Inne, made provision for him, gave the Host money before-hand, gave him charge to have a care of him, and (which is the perfection of all, the greatest testimony of our Samaritans love to us) he promised to come againe, and at that comming, he does not say, He will pay, but He will recompence, which is a more abundant expressing of his bountie. Christ loves not but in the way of marriage; if he begin to love thee, he tells thee, Sponsabo te mihi, I will marry thee unto me, and Sponsabo in æternum, I will marry thee for ever. For it is a marriage that prevents all mistakings, and excludes all impediments, I will marry thee in righteousness, and in judgement, and in loving kindnesse, and in mercies, and in faithfulness; many, and great assurances. And as it is added, Seminabo te mihi, which is a strange expressing of Gods love to us, I will sow thee unto me in the earth; when I have taken thee into my husbandry, thou shalt increase, and multiply, Seminabo te, and all that thou doest produce, shall be directed upon me, Seminabo te mihi, I will sowe thee to my selfe: therefore thy soule may be bold to joyne with David in that thankfull confidence, He hath heard my supplication, and therefore He will heare my prayer; He lookt upon me in the dust of the earth, much more will he doe so, having now laid me upon Carpets; he lookt upon me in my sores, sores of mine enemies malice, and sores of mine own sinnes, much more will he doe so now, when he hath imprinted in me the wounds of his own Sonne; for those that were so many wounds upon him, are so many starres upon me; He lookt upon me, may David say, when I followed the Ewes great with young, much more will he doe so now, now when by his directions, I lead out his people, great with enterprizes, and victories against his enemies. First David comes to that holy noblenesse, he dares cast off ill instruments, and is not afraid of conspiracy; he dares divorce himselfe from dangerous company, and is not afraid of melancholy; he dares love God, and is not afraid of that jealousie, that he is too religious to be imployed, too tender conscienced to be put upon businesse; he dares reprehend them that are under his charge, and is not afraid of a recrimination; he dares observe a Sabbath, he dares startle at a blasphemy, he dares forbear countenancing a prophane or a scurrill jest with his praise, he dares be an honest man; which holy confidence constituted our first part, Depart from mee all yee workers of iniquity; And then he grounds this confidence upon an undeceivable Rocke, upon Gods seale, God hath heard me, therefore God will heare mee. And when God heares, God speaks too, and when God speaks, God does too, and therefore I may safely proceede as I doe, which was our second Consideration. And then the third, which remains, is, that upon this, he returnes to the consideration, what that was, that he had done; he had either imprecated, or denounced, at least, heavy judgements upon his enemies; and he finds it avowable, and justifiable to have done so; and therefore persists in it, Let all mine enemies be ashamed, and sore vexed; let them returne, and be ashamed suddenly.

3 Part ⁴⁷⁰ All cleane beasts had both these marks, they divided the hoofe, and they chewed the cud: All good resolutions, which passe our prayer, must have these two marks too, they must divide the hoofe, they must make a double impression, they must be directed upon Gods glory, and upon our good, and they must passe a rumination, a chawing of the cud, a second examination, whether that prayer were so conditioned or no. We pray sometimes out of sudden and indigested apprehensions; we pray sometimes out of custome, and communion with others; we pray sometimes out of a present sense of paine, or imminent danger; and this prayer may divide the hoofe; It may looke ⁴⁸⁰ towards Gods glory, and towards our good; but it does not chew the cud too; that is, if I have not considered, not examined, whether it doe so or no, it is not a prayer that God will call a sacrifice. You see Christ brought his own Prayer, Si possibile, If it be possible &c. through such a rumination, Veruntamen, yet not my will &c. As many a man sweares, and if he be surprized, and askt, what did you say, he does not remember his owne oath, not what he swore; so many a man prays, and does not remember his own prayer. As a Clock gives a warning before it strikes, and then there remains a sound, and a tingling of the bell after it hath stricken: so a precedent meditation, ⁴⁹⁰ and a subsequent rumination, make the prayer a prayer; I must think before, what I will aske, and consider againe, what I have askt; and upon this dividing the hoofe, and chewing the cud, David avowes to his own conscience his whole action, even to this consummation thereof, Let mine enemies be ashamed &c.

Imprecatoria

Now these words, whether we consider the naturall signification of the words, or the authority of those men, who have been Expositors upon them, may be understood either way, either to be Imprecatoria, words of Imprecation, that David in the Spirit of anguish wishes that these things might fall upon his enemies, or els Prædictoria, words of 500 Prediction, that David in the spirit of Prophecy pronounces that these things shall fall upon them.

If they be Imprecatoria, words spoken out of his wish, and desire, then they have in them the nature of a curse: And because Lyra takes them to be so, a curse, he referres the words Ad Dæmones, To the Devill: That herein David seconds Gods malediction upon the Serpent, and curses the Devill, as the occasioner and first mover of all these calamities; and sayes of them, Let all our enemies be ashamed, and sore vexed &c. Others referre these words to the first Christian times, and the persecutions then, and so to be a malediction, a curse 510 upon the Jewes, and upon the Romans, who persecuted the Primitive Church then, Let them be ashamed &c. And then Gregory Nyssen referres these words to more domesticall and intrinsicke enemies, to Dauids owne concupiscences, and the rebellions of his owne lusts, Let those enemies be ashamed &c. For all those who understand these words to be a curse, a malediction, are loath to admit that David did curse his enemies, meerly out of a respect of those calamities which they had inflicted upon him. And that is a safe ground; no man may curse another, in contemplation of himselfe onely, if onely himselfe be concerned in the case. And when it concernes the glory of God, our 520 imprecations, our maledictions upon the persons, must not have their principall relation, as to Gods enemies, but as to Gods glory; our end must be, that God may have his glory, not that they may have their punishment. And therefore how vehement soever David seeme in this Imprecation, and though he be more vehement in another place, Let them be confounded, and troubled for ever, yea, let them be put to shame, and perish, yet that perishing is but a perishing of their purposes, let their plots perish, let their malignity against thy Church be frustrated; for so he expresses himselfe in the verse immediately before, Fill their faces with shame; but why? and how? That they may 530 seeke thy Name, O Lord; that was Dauids end, even in the curse; David wishes them no ill, but for their good; no worse to Gods enemies, but that they might become his friends. The rule is good, which out of his moderation S. Augustine gives, that in all Inquisitions, and Executions in matters of Religion, (when it is meerly for Religion without sedition) Sint qui pœniteant, Let the men remaine alive, or else how can they repent? So in all Imprecations, in all hard wishes, even upon Gods enemies, Sint qui convertantur, Let the men remaine, that they may be capable of conversion; wish them not so ill, as that God can shew no mercy to them; for so the ill wish falls upon God

Psal. 83.17

⁵⁴⁰ himselfe, if it preclude his way of mercy upon that ill man. In no case must the curse be directed upon the person; for when in the next Psalme to this, David seemes passionate, when hee asks that of God there, which he desires God to forbear in the beginning of this Psalme, when his Ne arguas in ira, O Lord rebuke not in thine anger, is turned to a Surge Domine in ira, Arise O Lord in thine anger; S. Augustine begins to wonder, Quid? illum, quem perfectum dicimus, ad iram provocat Deum? Would David provoke God, who is all sweetnesse, and mildnesse, to anger against any man? No, not against any man; but Diaboli possessio peccator, Every sinner is a slave to his beloved ⁵⁵⁰ sin; and therefore, Misericors orat, adversus eum, quicunque orat, How bitterly soever I curse that sin, yet I pray for that sinner. David would have God angry with the Tyrant, not with the Slave that is oppressed; with the sin, not with the soule that is intrahled to it. And so, as the words may be a curse, a malediction in David's mouth, we may take them into our mouth too, and say, Let those enemies be ashamed, &c.

Prædictoria

If this then were an Imprecation, a malediction, yet it was Medicinall, and had Rationem boni, a charitable tincture, and nature in it; he wished the men no harm, as men. But it is rather Prædictorium, a ⁵⁶⁰ Propheticall vehemence, that if they will take no knowledge of Gods declaring himselfe in the protection of his servants, if they would not consider that God had heard, and would heare, had rescued, and would rescue his children, but would continue their opposition against him, heavy judgements would certainly fall upon them; Their punishment should be certaine, but the effect should be uncertaine; for God only knowes, whether his correction shall work upon his enemies, to their mollifying, or to their obduration. Those bitter, and waighthy imprecations which David hath heaped together against Iudas, seeme to be direct imprecations; and yet S. Peter himselfe calls them Prophesies; Oportet impleri Scripturam; They were done, sayes he, that the Scripture might be fulfilled; Not that David in his owne heart did wish all that upon Iudas; but only so, as fore-seeing in the Spirit of

Prophesying, that those things should fall upon him, he concurred with the purpose of God therein, and so farre as he saw it to be the will of God, he made it his will, and his wish. And so have all those judgements, which we denounce upon sinners, the nature of Prophesies in them; when we reade in the Church, that Commination, Cursed is the Idolater, This may fall upon some of our owne kindred; and Cursed is he that curseth Father or Mother, This may fall upon 580 some of our owne children; and Cursed is he that perverteth judgement, This may fall upon some powerfull Persons, that we may have a dependance upon; and upon these we doe not wish that Gods vengeance should fall; yet we Prophesie, and denounce justly, that upon such, such vengeance will fall; and then, all Prophesies of that kinde are alwaies conditionall; they are conditionall, if we consider any Decree in God; they must be conditionall in all our denunciations; if you repent, they shall not fall upon you, if not, Oportet impleri Scripturam, The Scripture must be fulfilled; We doe not wish them, we do but Prophesie them; no, nor we doe not prophesie them; but 590 the Scriptures have pre-prophesied them before; they will fall upon you, as upon Iudas, in condemnation, and perchance, as upon Iudas, in desperation too.

Dauids purpose then being in these words to work to their amendment, and not their finall destruction, we may easily and usefully discern in the particular words, a milder sense then the words seeme at first to present. And first give me leave by the way, only in passing, by occasion of those words which are here rendred, Convertentur, & Erubescant, and which in the Originall, are Iashabu, and Ieboshu, which have a musicall, and harmonious sound, and agnomination in 600 them, let me note thus much, even in that, that the Holy Ghost in penning the Scriptures delights himself, not only with a propriety, but with a delicacy, and harmony, and melody of language; with height of Metaphors, and other figures, which may work greater impressions upon the Readers, and not with barbarous, or triviall, or market, or homely language: It is true, that when the Grecians, and the Romanes, and S. Augustine himselfe, undervalued and despised the Scriptures, because of the poore and beggerly phrase, that they seemed to be written in, the Christians could say little against it, but turned still upon the other safer way, wee consider the matter, and not the phrase,

⁶¹⁰ because for the most part, they had read the Scriptures only in Translations, which could not maintaine the Majesty, nor preserve the elegancies of the Originall.

Their case was somewhat like ours, at the beginning of the Reformation; when, because most of those men who laboured in that Reformation, came out of the Romane Church, and there had never read the body of the Fathers at large; but only such ragges and fragments of those Fathers, as were patcht together in their Decretat's, and Decretals, and other such Common placers, for their purpose, and to serve their turne, therefore they were loath at first to come to that ⁶²⁰ issue, to try controversies by the Fathers. But as soon as our men that imbraced the Reformation, had had time to reade the Fathers, they were ready enough to joyne with the Adversary in that issue: and still we protest, that we accept that evidence, the testimony of the Fathers, and refuse nothing, which the Fathers unanimously delivered, for matter of faith; and howsoever at the beginning some men were a little ombrageous, and startling at the name of the Fathers, yet since the Fathers have been well studied, for more then threescore yeares, we have behaved our selves with more reverence towards the Fathers, and more confidence in the Fathers, then they of the Romane per-⁶³⁰ swasion have done, and been lesse apt to suspect or quarrell their Books, or to reprove their Doctrines, then our Adversaries have been. So, howsoever the Christians at first were fain to sink a little under that imputation, that their Scriptures have no Majesty, no eloquence, because these embellishments could not appeare in Translations, nor they then read Originalls, yet now, that a perfect knowledge of those languages hath brought us to see the beauty and the glory of those Books, we are able to reply to them, that there are not in all the world so eloquent Books as the Scriptures; and that nothing is more demon-⁶⁴⁰ strable, then that if we would take all those Figures, and Tropes, which are collected out of secular Poets, and Orators, we may give higher, and livelier examples, of every one of those Figures, out of the Scriptures, then out of all the Greek and Latine Poets, and Orators; and they mistake it much, that thinke, that the Holy Ghost hath rather chosen a low, and barbarous, and homely style, then an eloquent, and powerfull manner of expressing himselfe.

Erubescit

To returne and to cast a glance upon these words in Dauids prediction, upon his enemies, what hardnesse is in the first, Erubescant, Let them be ashamed: for the word imports no more, our last Translation sayes no more, neither did our first Translators intend any more, by ⁶⁵⁰ their word, Confounded; for that is, confounded with shame in themselves. This is Virga disciplinæ, sayes S. Bernard; as long as we are ashamed of sin, we are not growne up, and hardned in it; we are under correction; the correction of a remorse. As soone as Adam came to be ashamed of his nakednesse, he presently thought of some remedy; if one should come and tell thee, that he looked through the doore, that he stood in a window over against thine, and saw thee doe such or such a sin, this would put thee to a shame, and thou wouldest not doe that sin, till thou wert sure he could not see thee. O, if thou wouldest not sin, till thou couldst think that God saw thee ⁶⁶⁰ not, this shame had wrought well upon thee. There are complexions that cannot blush; there growes a blacknesse, a sootinesse upon the soule, by custome in sin, which overcomes all blushing, all tendernesse. White alone is palenesse, and God loves not a pale soule, a soule possest with a horror, affrighted with a diffidence, and distrusting his mercy. Rednesse alone is anger, and vehemency, and distemper, and God loves not such a red soule, a soule that sweats in sin, that quarrels for sin, that revenges in sin. But that whitenesse that preserves it selfe, not onely from being died all over in any foule colour, from contracting the name of any habituall sin, and so to be called such or such a ⁶⁷⁰ sinner, but from taking any spot, from comming within distance of a tentation, or of a suspition, is that whitenesse, which God meanes, when he sayes, Thou art all faire my Love, and there is no spot in thee. Indifferent looking, equall and easie conversation, appliablenesse to wanton discourses, and notions, and motions, are the Devils single money, and many pieces of these make up an Adultery. As light a thing as a Spangle is, a Spangle is silver; and Leafe-gold, that is blowne away, is gold; and sand that hath no strength, no coherence, yet knits the building; so doe approaches to sin, become sin, and fixe sin. To avoid these spots, is that whitenesse that God loves in the ⁶⁸⁰ soule. But there is a rednesse that God loves too; which is this Erubescence that we speak of; an aptnesse in the soule to blush, when any of these spots doe fall upon it.

Cant. 4.7

God is the universall Confessor, the generall Penitentiary of all the world, and all dye in the guilt of their sin, that goe not to Confession to him. And there are sins of such waight to the soule, and such intangling, and perplexity to the conscience, in some circumstances of the sin, as that certainly a soule may receive much ease in such cases, by confessing it selfe to man. In this holy shamefastnesse, which we intend in this outward blushing of the face, the soule goes to confession too. And it is one of the principall arguments against Confessions by Letter, (which some went about to set up in the Romane Church) that that took away one of the greatest evidences, and testimonies of their repentance, which is this Erubescence, this blushing, this shame after sin; if they should not be put to speak it face to face, but to write it, that would remove the shame, which is a part of the repentance. But that soule that goes not to confession to it selfe, that hath not an internall blushing after a sin committed, is a pale soule, even in the palenesse of death, and senslesnesse, and a red soule, red in the defiance of God. And that whitenesse, to avoid approaches to sin, and that rednesse, to blush upon a sin, which does attempt us, is the complexion of the soule, which God loves, and which the Holy Ghost testifies, when he sayes, My Beloved is white and ruddy. And when these men that David speaks of here, had lost that whitenesse, their innocency, for David to wish that they might come to a rednesse, a shame, a blushing, a remorse, a sense of sin, may have been no such great malediction, or imprecation in the mouth of David, but that a man may wish it to his best friend, which should be his own soule, and say, Erubescam, not let mine enemies, but let me be ashamed with such a shame.

Cant. 5.10

Conturbetur

Ver. 2 & 3

⁷¹⁰ In the second word, Let them be sore vexed, he wishes his enemies no worse then himselfe had been: For he had used the same word of himselfe before, Ossa turbata, My bones are vexed, and Anima turbata, My soule is vexed; and considering, that David had found this vexation to be his way to God, it was no malicious imprecation, to wish that enemy the same Physick that he had taken, who was more sick of the same disease then he was. For this is like a troubled Sea after a tempest; the danger is past, but yet the billow is great still: The danger was in the calme, in the security, or in the tempest, by mis-interpreting Gods corrections to our obduration, and to a remorselesse stupefaction; but when a man is come to this holy vexation, to be troubled, to be shaken with a sense of the indignation of God, the storme is past, and the indignation of God is blowne over. That soule is in a faire and neare way, of being restored to a calme-nesse, and to reposed security of conscience, that is come to this holy vexation.

In a flat Map, there goes no more, to make West East, though they be distant in an extremity, but to paste that flat Map upon a round body, and then West and East are all one. In a flat soule, in a dejected conscience, in a troubled spirit, there goes no more to the making of ⁷³⁰ that trouble, peace, then to apply that trouble to the body of the Merits, to the body of the Gospel of Christ Jesus, and conforme thee to him, and thy West is East, thy Trouble of spirit is Tranquillity of spirit. The name of Christ is Oriens, The East; And yet Lucifer himselfe is called Filius Orientis, The Son of the East. If thou beest fallen by Lucifer, fallen to Lucifer, and not fallen as Lucifer, to a senslesnesse of thy fall, and an impenitiblenesse therein, but to a troubled spirit, still thy Prospect is the East, still thy Climate is heaven, still thy Haven is Jerusalem; for, in our lowest dejection of all, even in the dust of the grave, we are so composed, so layed down, as that ⁷⁴⁰ we look to the East; If I could beleeeve that Trajan, or Tecla, could look East-ward, that is, towards Christ, in hell, I could beleeeve with them of Rome, that Trajan and Tecla were redeemed by prayer out of hell. God had accepted sacrifices before; but no sacrifice is called Odor quietis, It is not said, That God smelt a savor of rest, in any sacrifice, but that which Noah offered, after hee had beene variously tossed and tumbled, in the long hulling of the Arke upon the waters. A troublesome spirit, and a quiet spirit, are farre asunder; But a troubled spirit, and a quiet spirit, are neare neighbours. And therefore David meanes them no great harme, when hee sayes, Let them ⁷⁵⁰ be troubled; For, Let the winde be as high as it will, so I sayle before the winde, Let the trouble of my soule be as great as it will, so it direct me upon God, and I have calme enough.

And this peace, this calme is implied in the next word, Convertantur, which is not, Let them be overthrowne, but Let them returne, let them be forced to returne; he prayes, that God would do something to crosse their purposes; because as they are against God, so they are against their owne soules. In that way where they are, he sees there is no remedy; and therefore he desires that they might be Turned into another way; What is that way? This. Turne us O Lord, ⁷⁶⁰ and we shall be turned; That is, turned the right way; Towards God. And as there was a promise from God, to heare his people, not onely when they came to him in the Temple, but when they turned towards that Temple, in what distance soever they were, so it is alwaies accompanied with a blessing, occasionally to turne towards God; But this prayer, Turne us, that we may be turned, is, that we may be, that is, remaine turned, that we may continue fixed in that posture. Lots Wife turned her selfe, and remained an everlasting monument of Gods anger; God so turne us alwaies into right wayes, as that we be not able to turne our selves out of them. For God hath Viam rectam, ⁷⁷⁰ & bonam, as himselfe speaks in the Prophet, A right way, and then a good way, which yet is not the right way, that is, not the way which God of himselfe would go. For his right way is, that we should still keepe in his way; His good way is, to beat us into his right way againe, by his medicinall corrections, when we put our selves out of his right way. And that, and that onely David wishes, and we wish, That you may Turne, and Be turned; stand in that holy posture, all the yeare, all the yeares of your lives, That your Christmas may be as holy as your Easter, even your Recreations as innocent as your Devotions, and every roome in the house as free from prophanenesse as the ⁷⁸⁰ Sanctuary. And this he ends as he begun, with another Erubescant, Let them be ashamed, and that Valde velociter, Suddenly: for David saw, that if a sinner came not to a shame of sin quickly, he would quickly come to a shamelesnesse, to an impudence, to a searednesse, to an obduration in it.

Ier. 6.15

Now beloved, this is the worst curse that comes out of a holy mans mouth, even towards his enemie, that God would correct him to his amendment. And this is the worst harme that we meane to you, when we denounce the judgements of God against sin and sinners, Vt erubescatis, that we might see blood in your faces, the blood of your ⁷⁹⁰ Saviour working in that shame for sin. That that question of the Prophet might not confound you, Were they ashamed when they committed abomination? nay, they were not ashamed; Erubescere nesciebant, they were never used to shame, they knew not how to be ashamed. Therefore, sayes he, they shall fall amongst them that fall, they shall do as the world does, sin as their neighbours sin, and fall as they fall, irrepentantly here, and hereafter irrecoverably. And then, Vt conturbati sitis, that you may be troubled in your hearts, and not cry Peace, Peace, where there is no peace, and flatter your selves, because you are in a true Religion, and in the right way; for a Child⁸⁰⁰ may drowne in a Font, and a Man may be poysoned in the Sacrament, much more perish, though in a true Church. And also Vt revertamini, that you may returne againe to the Lord, returne to that state of purenesse, which God gave you in Baptisme, to that state, which God gave you the last time you received his body and blood so as became you. And then lastly, Vt erubescatis velociter, that you may come to the beginning of this, and to all this quickly, and not to defer it, because God defers the judgement. For to end this with S. Augustines words, upon this word Velociter, Quandocunque venit, celerrimè venit, quod desperatur esse venturum: How late soever it come, that comes⁸¹⁰ quickly, if it come at all, which we beleevd would never come. How long soever it be, before that judgement come, yet it comes quickly, if it come before thou looke for it, or be ready for it. Whosoever labours to sleepe out the thought of that day, His damnation sleepeth not, sayes the Apostle. It is not onely, that his damnation is not dead, that there shall never be any such day, but that it is no day asleepe: every midnight shall be a day of judgement to him, and keepe him awake; and when consternation, and lassitude lend him, or conterfait to him a sleep, as S. Basil sayes of the righteous, Etiam somnia justorum preces sunt, That even their Dreames are prayers, so this incorrigible sinners Dreames shall be, not onely presages of his future,⁸²⁰ but acts of his present condemnation.

Apoc. 20.6. *BLESSED AND HOLY IS HE THAT

6.51]

IN THE first book of the Scriptures, that of Genesis, there is danger in departing from the letter; In this last book, this of the Revelation, there is as much danger in adhering too close to the letter. The literall sense is alwayes to be preserved; but the literall sense is not alwayes to be discerned: for the literall sense is not alwayes that, which the very Letter and Grammer of the place presents, as where it is literally said, That Christ is a Vine, and literally, That his flesh is bread, and literally, That the new Ierusalem is thus situated, thus built, thus furnished: But the literall sense of every place, is the principall intention of the Holy Ghost, in that place: And his principall intention in many places, is to expresse things by allegories, by figures; so that in many places of Scripture, a figurative sense is the literall sense, and more in this book then in any other. As then to depart from the literall sense, that sense which the very letter presents, in the book of Genesis, is dangerous, because if we do so there, we have no history of the Creation of the world in any other place to stick to; so to binde our selves to such a literall sense in this book, will take from us the consolation of many spirituall happinesses, and bury us in the carnall things of this world.

¹⁰ The first error of being too allegoricall in Genesis, transported divers of the ancients beyond the certain evidence of truth, and the second error of being too literall in this book, fixed many, very many, very ancient, very learned, upon an evident falshood; which was, that because here is mention of a first Resurrection, and of raigning with Christ a thousand years after that first Resurrection, There should be to all the Saints of God, a state of happinesse in this world, after Christs comming, for a thousand yeares; In which happy state, though some of them have limited themselves in spirituall things, that they should enjoy a kinde of conversation with Christ, and an impeccability, and a quiet serving of God without any reluctations, or concupiscences, or persecutions; yet others have dreamed on, and enlarged their dreames to an enjoying of all these worldly happineses, which they, being formerly persecuted, did formerly want in this world, and then should have them for a thousand yeares together in recompence. And even this branch of that error, of possessing the things of this world, so long, in this world, did very many, and very good, and very great men, whose names are in honour, and justly in the Church of God, in those first times stray into; and flattered themselves with an imaginary intimation of some such thing, in these words, Blessed and holy is he, that hath part in the first Resurrection.

Thus far then the text is literall, That this Resurrection in the text, is different from the generall Resurrection. The first differs from the last: And thus far it is figurative, allegoricall, mysticall, that it is a spirituall Resurrection, that is intended. But wherein spirituall? or of what spirituall Resurrection? In the figurative exposition of those places of Scripture, which require that way oft to be figuratively expounded, that Expositor is not to be blamed, who not destroying the literall sense, proposes such a figurative sense, as may exalt our devotion, and advance our edification; And as no one of those Expositors did ill, in proposing one such sense, so neither do those Expositors ill, who with those limitations, that it destroy not the literall sense, that it violate not the analogy of faith, that it advance devotion, do propose another and another such sense. So doth that preacher well also, who to the same end, and within the same limit, makes his use of both, of all those expositions; because all may stand, and it is not evident in such figurative speeches, which is the literall, that is, the principall intention of the Holy Ghost.

Of these words of this first Resurrection (which is not the last, of the body, but a spirituall Resurrection) there are three expositions authorized by persons of good note in the Church. First, that this first Resurrection, is a Resurrection from that low estate, to which persecution had brought the Church; and so it belongs to this whole State, and Church, and Blessed are we who have our part in this first Resurrection. Secondly, that it is a Resurrection from the death of sin, of actuall, and habituall sin; so it belongs to every particular penitent soul; and Blessed art thou, blessed am I, if we have part in this first Resurrection. And then thirdly, because after this Resurrection, it is said, That we shall raaign with Christ a thousand yeares, (which is a certain for an uncertain, a limited, for a long time) it hath also been ⁷⁰ taken for the state of the soul in heaven, after it is parted from the body by death; for though the soul cannot be said properly to have a Resurrection, because properly it cannot die, yet to be thus delivered from the danger of a second death, by future sin, to be removed from the distance, and latitude, and possibility of tentations in this world, is by very good Expositors called a Resurrection; and so it belongs to all them who are departed in the Lord; Blessed and holy is he that hath part in this first Resurrection. And then the occasion of the day, which we celebrate now, being the Resurrection of our Lord and Saviour Christ Jesus, invites me to propose a fourth sense, or rather ⁸⁰ use of the words; not indeed as an exposition of the words, but as a convenient exaltation of our devotion; which is, that this first Resurrection should be the first fruits of the dead; The first Rising, is the first Riser, Christ Jesus: for as Christ sayes of himself, that He is the Resurrection, so he is the first Resurrection, the root of the Resurrection, he upon whom our Resurrection, all ours, all our kindes of Resurrections are founded; and so it belongs to State and Church, and particular persons, alive, and dead; Blessed and holy is he that hath part in this first Resurrection.

And these foure considerations of the words; A Resurrection from ⁹⁰ persecution, by deliverance; a Resurrection from sin, by grace; a Resurrection from tentation to sin, by the way of death, to the glory of heaven; and all these, in the first Resurrection, in him that is the roote of all, in Christ Jesus, These foure steps, these foure passages, these foure transitions will be our quarter Clock, for this houres exercise.

First then, we consider this first Resurrection, to be a Resurrection from a persecution for religion, for the profession of the Gospell, to a forward glorious passage of the Gospell. And so a learned Expositor in the Romane Church carries the exposition of this whole ¹⁰⁰ place (though not indeed the ordinary way, yet truly not incommodiously, not improperly) upon that deliverance, which God afforded his Church, from those great persecutions, which had otherwise supplanted her, in her first planting, in the primitive times. Then sayes he (and in part well towards the letter of the place) The devill was chained for a thousand yeares, and then we began to raign with Christ for a thousand yeares; reckoning the time from that time, when God destroyed Idolatry more fully, and gave peace and rest, and free exercise of the Christian religion, under the Christian Emperours, till Antichrist in the height of his rage shall come, and let this thousand yeares prisoner Satan loose, and so interrupt our thousand yeares raign with Christ, with new persecutions. In that persecution was the death of the Church, in the eye of the world; In that deliverance by Christian Emperours was the Resurrection of the Church; And in Gods protecting her ever since is the chaining up of the devill, and our raigning with Christ for those thousand yeares.

And truly, beloved, if we consider the low, the very low estate of Christians in those persecutions, tryed ten times in the fire, ten severall and distinct persecutions, in which ten persecutions, God may seem to have had a minde to deale eavenly with the world, and to lay ¹²⁰ as much upon his people whom he would try then, as he had laid upon others, for his people before, and so to equall the ten plagues of Ægypt, in ten persecutions, in the primitive Church; if we consider that low, that very low estate, we may justly call their deliverance a Resurrection. For as God said to Jerusalem, I found thee in thy blood, and washed thee, so Christ Jesus found the Church, the Christian Church in her blood, and washed her, and wiped her; washed her in his own blood, which washes white, and wiped her with the garments of his own righteousness, that she might be acceptable in the sight of God, and then wiped all teares from her eyes, ¹³⁰ took away all occasions of complaint, and lamentation, that she might be glorious in the eyes of man, and chearefull in her own; such was her Resurrection.

and 9]

We wonder, and justly, at the effusion, at the pouring out of blood, in the sacrifices of the old Law; that that little countrey scarce bigger then some three of our Shires, should spend more cattle in some few dayes sacrifice at some solemnities, and every yeare in the sacrifices of the whole yeare, then perchance this kingdome could give to any use. Seas of blood, and yet but brooks, tuns of blood, and yet but basons, compared with the sacrifices, the sacrifices of the blood of ¹⁴⁰ men, in the persecutions of the Primitive Church. For every Oxe of the Jew, the Christian spent a man, and for every Sheep and Lamb, a Mother and her childe; and for every heard of cattle, sometimes a towne of Inhabitants, sometimes a Legion of Souldiers, all martyred at once; so that they did not stand to fill their Martyrologies with names, but with numbers, they had not roome to say, such a day, such a Bishop, such a day, such a Generall, but the day of 500. the day of 5000. Martyrs, and the martyrdome of a City, or the Martyrdome of an Army; This was not a red Sea, such as the Jews passed, a Sinus, a Creek, an Arm, an Inlet, a gut of a Sea, but a red Ocean, that over-¹⁵⁰ flowed, and surrounded all parts; and from the depth of this Sea God raised them; and such was their Resurrection. Such, as that they which suffered, lay, and bled with more ease, then the executioner stood and sweat; and embraced the fire more fervently, then he blew it; and many times had this triumph in their death, that even the executioner himself, was in the act of execution converted to Christ, and executed with them; such was their Resurrection.

When the State of the Jews was in that depression, in that conculation, in that consternation, in that extermination in the captivity of Babylon, as that God presents it to the Prophet in that Vision, [Ezek. 37.3] ¹⁶⁰ in the field of dry bones, so, Fili hominis, Son of man, as thou art a reasonable man, dost thou think these bones can live, that these men can ever be re-collected to make up a Nation? The Prophet saith, Domine tu scis, Lord thou knowest; which is, not only thou knowest whether they can, or no, but thou knowest clearly they can; thou canst make them up of bones again, for thou madest those bones of earth before. If God had called in the Angels to the making of man at first, and as he said to the Prophet, Fili hominis, Son of man, as thou art a reasonable man, so he had said to them, Filii Dei, as you are the Sons of God, illumined by his face, do you think, that this ¹⁷⁰ clod of red earth can make a man, a man that shall be equall to you, in one of his parts, in his soul, and yet then shall have such another part, as that he, whom all you worship, my essentiall Son shall assume, and invest that part himself, can that man made of that body, and that soul, be made of this clod of earth? Those Angels would have said, Domine tu scis, Lord thou must needs know, how to make as good creatures as us of earth, who madest us of that which is infinitely lesse then earth, of nothing, before. To induce, to facilitate these apprehensions, there were some precedents, some such thing had been done before. But when the Church was newly conceived,

¹⁹⁰ But beloved, the expressing the pressing of their depressions, does but chafe the Wax; the Printing of the seale, is the reducing to your memory, your own case: and not that point in your case, as you were for a few yeares under a sensible persecution of fire, and prisons; that was the least part of your persecution; for it is a cheap purchase of heaven, if we may have it for dying; To sell all we have to buy that field where we know the treasure is, is not so hard, as not to know it; To part with all, for the great Pearle, not so hard a bargain, as not to know that such a Pearle there might have beene had; we could not say heaven was kept from us, when we might have it ²⁰⁰ for a Fagot, and when even our enemies helpt us to it: but your greater affliction was, as you were long before, in an insensiblenesse, you thought your selves well enough, and yet were under a worse persecution of ignorance, and of superstition, when you, in your Fathers, were so farre from expecting a resurrection, as that you did not know your low estate, or that you needed a Resurrection; And yet God gave you a Resurrection from it, a reformation of it.

Now, who have their parts in this first resurrection? or upon what conditions have you it? We see in the fourth verse, They that are beheaded for the witnesse of Iesus; that is, that are ready to be so, ²¹⁰ when the glory of Jesus shall require that testimony. In the meane time, as it followes there, They that have not worshipped the Beast; that is, not applied the Honour, and the Allegiance due to their Sovereign, to any forraign State; nor the Honor due to God, that is, infallibility, to another Prelate; That have not worshipped the Beast, nor his Image, sayes the Text; that is, that have not been transported with vain imaginations of his power, and his growth upon us here, which hath been so diligently Painted, and Printed, and Preached, and set out in the promises, and practises of his Instruments, to delude slack, and easie persons: And then, as it is added there, *That have*²²⁰ not received his mark upon their foreheads; That is, not declared themselves Romanists apparently; nor in their hands, sayes the Text; that is, which have not under-hand sold their secret endeavours, though not their publike profession, to the advancement of his cause. These men, who are ready to be beheaded for Christ, and have not worshipped the Beast, nor the Image of the Beast, nor received his mark upon their foreheads, nor in their hands, these have their parts in this first resurrection. These are blessed, and holy, sayes our Text; Blessed, because they have meanes to be holy, in this resurrection; For the Lamb hath unclasped the book; the Scriptures are open;²³⁰ which way to holinesse, our Fathers lacked; And then, our blessednesse is, that we shall raigne a thousand yeares with Christ: Now since this first resurrection, since the reformation we have raigned so with Christ, but 100. yeares: But if we persist in a good use of it, our posterity shall adde the Cypher, and make that 100. 1000. even to the time, when Christ Jesus shall come againe, and as he hath given us the first, so shall give us the last resurrection; and to that come Lord Jesus, come quickly; and till that, continue this.

Mat. 13.44

Gregor.

This is the first resurrection, in the first acceptation, a resurrection from persecution, and a peaceable enjoying of the Gospell: And in²⁴⁰ a second, it is a resurrection from sin; and so it hath a more particular appropriation to every person. So S. Augustine takes this place, and with him many of the Fathers, and with them, many of the sons of the Fathers, better sons of the Fathers, then the Romane Church will confesse them to be, or then they are themselves, The Expositors of the Reformed Church: They, for the most part, with S. Augustine, take this first resurrection, to be a resurrection from sin. Inter abjectos abjectissimus peccator: No man falls lower, then he that falls into a course of sin; Sin is a fall; It is not onely a deviation, a turning out of the way, upon the right, or the left hand, but it is a sinking, a ²⁵⁰ falling: In the other case, of going out of the way, a man may stand upon the way, and inquire, and then proceed in the way, if he be right, or to the way, if he be wrong; But when he is fallen, and lies still, he proceeds no farther, inquires no farther. To be too apt to conceive scruples in matters of religion, stops, and retards a man in the way; to mistake some points in the truth of religion, puts a man for that time in a wrong way; But to fall into a course of sin, this makes him unsensible of any end, that he hath to goe to, of any way that he hath to goe by. God hath not removed man, not with-drawne man from this Earth; he hath not given him the Aire to flie in, as to Birds, ²⁶⁰ nor Spheares to move in, as to Sun and Moone; he hath left him upon the Earth; and not onely to tread upon it, as in contempt, or in meere Dominion, but to walk upon it, in the discharge of the duties of his calling; and so to be conversant with the Earth, is not a falling. But as when man was nothing but earth, nothing but a body, he lay flat upon the earth, his mouth kissed the earth, his hands embraced the earth, his eyes respected the earth; And then God breathed the breath of life into him, and that raised him so farre from the earth, as that onely one part of his body, (the soles of his feet) touches it, And yet man, so raised by God, by sin fell lower to ²⁷⁰ the earth againe, then before, from the face of the earth, to the womb, to the bowels, to the grave; So God, finding the whole man, as low as he found Adams body then, fallen in Originall sin, yet erects us by a new breath of life, in the Sacrament of Baptisme, and yet we fall lower then before we were raised, from Originall into Actuell, into Habituell sins; So low, as that we think not, that we need, know not, that there is a resurrection; and that is the wonderfull, that is the fearfull fall.

Though those words, Quomodo cecidisti de Cælo, Lucifer, How art thou fallen from heaven O Lucifer, the Son of the morning? be ²⁸⁰ ordinarily applied to the fall of the Angels, yet it is evident, that they are literally spoken of the fall of a man: It deserves wonder, more then pity, that man, whom God had raised, to so Noble a heighth in him, should fall so low from him. Man was borne to love; he was made in the love of God; but then man falls in love; when he growes in love with the creature, he falls in love: As we are bid to honour the Physitian, and to use the Physitian, but yet it is said in the same Chapter, He that sinneth before his Maker, let him fall into the hands of the Physitian; It is a blessing to use him, it is a curse to rely upon him, so it is a blessing to glorifie God, in the right use of his creatures, ²⁹⁰ but to grow in love with them, is a fall: For we love nothing that is so good as our selves; Beauty, Riches, Honour, is not so good as man; Man capable of grace here, of glory hereafter. Nay as those things, which we love, in their nature, are worse then we which love them, so in our loving them, we endeavour to make them worse then they in their own nature are; by over-loving the beauty of the body, we corrupt the soule, by overloving honour, and riches, we deflect, and detort these things, which are not in their nature ill, to ill uses, and make them serve our ill purposes: Man falls, as a fall of waters, that throwes downe, and corrupts all that it embraces. Nay beloved, when ³⁰⁰ a man hath used those wings, which God hath given him, and raised himselfe to some heighth in religious knowledge, and religious practise, as Eutichus, out of a desire to hear Paul preach, was got up into a Chamber, and up into a window of that Chamber, and yet falling asleep, fell downe dead; so we may fall into a security of our present state, into a pride of our knowledge, or of our purity, and so fall lower, then they, who never came to our heighth. So much need have we of a resurrection.

Essay 14.12

V. 15

Mors

So sin is a fall, and every man is affraid of falling, even from his temporall station; more affraid of falling, then of not beeing raised.
³¹⁰ And Qui peccat, quatenus peccat, fit seipso deterior: In every sin a man falls from that degree which himselfe had before; In every sin, he is dishonoured, he is not so good a man, as he was; impoverished, he hath not so great a portion of grace as hee had; Infatuated, hee hath not so much of the true wisdom of the feare of God, as he had; disarmed, he hath not that interest and confidence in the love of God, that he had: and deformed, he hath not so lively a representation of the Image of God, as before. In every sin, we become prodigals, but in the habit of sin, we become bankrupts, affraid to come to an account. A fall is a fearfull thing, that needs a raising, a help; but sin ³²⁰ is a death, and that needs a resurrection; and a resurrection is as great a work, as the very Creation it selfe. It is death in semine, in the roote, it produces, it brings forth death; It is death in arbore, in the body, in it selfe; death is a divorce, and so is sin; and it is death in fructu, in the fruit thereof; sin plants spirituall death, and this death produces more sin, Obduration, Impenitence, and the like.

Be pleased to returne, and cast one halfe thought upon each of these: Sin is the roote of death; Death by sin entred, and death passed upon all men, for all men have sinned. It is death because we shall dye for it. But it is death in it selfe, We are dead already, dead in it;

Rom. 5.12

³³⁰ Thou hast a name, that thou livest, and art dead, was spoken to a whole Church. It is not evidence enough, to prove that thou art alive, to say, I saw thee at a Sermon; that spirit, that knowes thy spirit, he that knowes whether thou wert moved by a Sermon, melted by a Sermon, mended by a Sermon, he knows whether thou be alive or no.

That which had wont to be said, That dead men walked in Churches, is too true; Men walk out a Sermon, or walk out after a Sermon, as ill as they walked in; they have a name that they live, and are dead: But the houre is come, and now is, when the dead shall heare the voyce of the Son of God: That is, at these houres they may

³⁴⁰ heare, if they will, and till they doe heare, they are dead. Sin is the root of death, the body of death, and then it is the fruit of death.

S. Augustine confesses of himselfe, that he was Allisus intra parietes in celebritate solemnitatum tuarum, that in great meetings upon solemne dayes, in the Church, there, within the walls of Gods house, Egit negotium procurandi fructus mortis, he was not buying and selling doves, but buying and selling soules, by wanton lookes, cheapning and making the bargaine of the fruits of death, as himselfe expresses it. Sin is the root, and the tree, and the fruit of death; The mother of death, death it selfe, and the daughter of death; and from this death,

August.

³⁵⁰ this threefold death, death past in our past sins, present death in our present insensiblenesse of sin, future death in those sins, with which sins God will punish our former, and present sins, (if he proceed meerly in justice) God affords us this first resurrection.

How? Thus. Death is the Divorce of body and soule; Resurrection is the Re-union of body and soule: And in this spirituall death, and resurrection, which we consider now, and which is all determined in the soule it selfe, Grace is the soule of the soule, and so the departing of grace, is the death, and the returning of grace is the resurrection of this sinfull soule. But how? By what way, what meanes? Consider ³⁶⁰ Adam; Adam was made to enjoy an immortality in his body; He induced death upon himselfe: And then, as God having made Marriage for a remedy against uncleannesse, intemperate men make even Marriage it selfe an occasion of more uncleannesse, then if they had never married; so man having induced and created death, by sin, God takes death, and makes it a means of the glorifying of his body, in heaven. God did not induce death, death was not in his purpose; but veluti medium opportunum, quo vas confractum rursus fingere- Cyril. Alex. tur, As a means, whereby a broken vessell might be made up againe, God tooke death, and made it serve for that purpose, That men by ³⁷⁰ the grave might be translated to heaven.

So then, to the resurrection of the body, there is an ordinary way, The grave; To the resurrection of the soule, there is an ordinary way too, The Church. In the grave, the body that must be there prepared for the last resurrection, hath wormes that eat upon it: In the Church, the soule that comes to this first resurrection, must have wormes, The worme, the sting, the remorse, the compunction of Conscience; In those that have no part in this first resurrection, the worme of conscience shall never die, but gnaw on, to desperation; but those that have not this worme of conscience, this remorse, this compunc-³⁸⁰ tion, shall never live. In the grave, which is the furnace, which ripens the body for the last resurrection, there is a putrefaction of the body, and an ill savour: In the Church, the wombe where my soule must be mellowed for this first resurrection, my soul, which hath the savour of death in it, as it is leavened throughout with sin, must stink in my nostrils, and I come to a detestation of all those sins, which have putrified her. And I must not be afraid to accuse my selfe, to condemne my selfe, to humble my selfe, lest I become a scorne to men;
 August. Nemo me derideat ab eo medico ægrum sanari, à quo sibi præstitum est ne ægrotaret; Let no man despise me, or wonder at me, that I am ³⁹⁰ so humbled under the hand of God, or that I fly to God as to my Physitian when I am sick, since the same God that hath recovered me as my Physitian when I was sick, hath been his Physitian too, and kept him from being sick, who, but for that Physitian, had been as ill as I was: At least he must be his Physitian, if ever he come to be sick, and come to know that he is sick, and come to a right desire to be well. Spirituall death was before bodily; sinne before the wages of sin; God hath provided a resurrection for both deaths, but first for the first; This is the first resurrection, Reconciliation to God, and the returning of the soule of our soule, Grace, in his Church, by his ⁴⁰⁰ Word, and his seales there.

Now every repentance is not a resurrection; It is rather a waking out of a dreame, then a rising to a new life: Nay it is rather a startling in our sleep, then any awaking at all, to have a sudden remorse, a sudden flash, and no constant perseverance. Awake thou that sleepest, sayes the Apostle, out of the Prophet: First awake, come to a sense of thy state; and then arise from the dead, sayes he, from the practise of dead works; and then, Christ shall give thee light: life, and strength to walk in new wayes. It is a long work, and hath many steps; Awake, arise, and walke, and therefore set out betimes; At the ⁴¹⁰ last day, in those, which shall be found alive upon the earth, we say there shall be a sudden death, and a sudden resurrection, In raptu, in transitu, in ictu oculi, In an instant, in the twinkling of an eye; but do not thou trust to have this first Resurrection In raptu, in transitu, in ictu oculi, In thy last passage upon thy death-bed, when the twinckling of the eye, must be the closing of thine eyes: But as we assign to glorified bodies after the last Resurrection, certain Dotes, (as we call them in the Schoole) certaine Endowments, so labour thou to finde those endowments, in thy soule here, if thou beest come to this first Resurrection.

⁴²⁰ Amongst those Endowments we assigne Subtilitatem, Agilitatem; The glorified bodie is become more subtile, more nimble, not encumbred, not disable for any motion, that it would make; So hath that soule, which is come to this first Resurrection, by grace, a spirituall agility, a holy nimblenesse in it, that it can slide by tentations, and passe through tentations, and never be polluted; follow a calling, without taking infection, by the ordinary tentations of that calling. So have those glorified bodies Claritatem, a brightnesse upon them, from the face of God; and so have these soules, which are come to this first resurrection, a sun in themselves, an inherent light, ⁴³⁰ by which they can presently distinguish betweene action and action; what must, what may, what must not bee done. But of all the endowments of the glorified body, we consider most, Impassibilitatem, That

Ephes. 5.14

Rom. 8.[35]

that body shall suffer nothing; and is sure that it shall suffer nothing. And that which answers that endowment of the body most in this soule, that is come to this first resurrection, is as the Apostle speaks, That neither persecution, sicknesse, nor death, shall separate her from Christ Iesus. In Heaven we doe not say, that our bodies shall deuest their mortality, so, as that naturally they could not dye; for they shall have a composition still; and every compounded thing may perish:

⁴⁴⁰ but they shal be so assured, and with such a preservation, as they shall alwaies know they shall never dye. S. Augustine saies well, Assit motio, absit fatigatio, assit potestas vescendi, absit necessitas esuriendi; They have in their nature a mortality, and yet be immortal; a possibility and an impossibility of dying, with those two divers relations, one to nature, the other to preservation, will consist together. So in this soule, that hath this first Resurrection from sin, by grace, a conscience of her owne infirmity, that she may relapse, and yet a testimony of the powerfullnesse of Gods Spirit, that easily she shall not relapse, may consist well together. But the last scale of this ⁴⁵⁰ holy confidence is reserved for that, which is the third acceptance of this first Resurrection; not from persecutions in this world, nor from sin in this world, but from all possibility of falling back into sin, in the world to come; and to this, have divers Expositors referred these words, this first resurrection. Blessed and holy is he, that hath part in this first Resurrection.

Now, a Resurrection of the soule, seemes an improper, an impertinent, an improbable, an impossible forme of speech; for, Resurrection implies death, and the soule does not dye in her passage to Heaven. And therefore Damascen makes account, that he hath ⁴⁶⁰ sufficiently proved the Resurrection of the body (which seems so incredible) if he could prove any Resurrection; if there be any Resurrection at all, saies he, it must be of the body, for the soule cannot dye, therefore not rise. Yet have not those Fathers, nor those Expositors, who have in this text, acknowledged a Resurrection of the soule, mistaken nor miscalled the matter. Take Damascens owne definition of Resurrection: Resurrectio est ejus quod cecidit secunda surrectio: A Resurrection is a second rising to that state, from which any thing is formerly fallen. Now though by death, the soule do not fall into any such state, as that it can complaine, (for what can that 470 lack, which God filſ?) yet by death, the ſoule falſ from that, for which it was infused, and poured into man at firſt; that is, to be the forme of that body, the King of that Kingdome; and therefore, when in the generall Reſurrection, the ſoule returnes to that ſtate, for which it was created, and to which it hath had an affection, and a deſire, even in the fulneſſe of the Joyes of Heaven, then, when the ſoule returnes to her office, to make up the man, becauſe the whole man hath, therefore the ſoule hath a Reſurrection; not from death, but from a deprivation of her former ſtate; that ſtate, which ſhe was made for, and is ever enclined to.

480 But that is the laſt Reſurrection; and ſo the ſoule hath part even in that laſt Reſurrection; But we are in hand with the firſt Reſurrection of the ſoule; and that is, when that ſoule, which was at firſt breath'd from God, and hath long ſuffered a baniſhment, a cloſe imprisonment in this body, returnes to God againe; The returning of the ſoule to him, from whom it proceeded at firſt, is a Reſurrection of the ſoule. Here then eſpecially, I feele the ſtrainneſſe of time; two conſiderations open themſelves together, of ſuch a largeneſſe, as all the time from Moses his In principio, when time began, to the Angels Affidavit, in this booke, That ſhall ſay and ſwear, that time 490 ſhall be no more, were too narrow to contemplate theſe two Hemispheres of Man, this Evening, and Morning of Mans everlaſting day; The miſeries of man, in this baniſhment, in this emprisonment, in this grave of the ſoule, the body, And the glory, and exaltation of that ſoule in her Reſurrection to Heaven. That ſoule, which being borne free, is made a ſlave to this body, by comming to it; It muſt act, but what this body will give it leave to act, according to the Organs, which this body affords it; and if the body be lame in any limme, the ſoule muſt be lame in her operation, in that limme too; It muſt doe, but what the body will have it doe, and then it muſt 500 ſuffer, whatſoever that body puts it to, or whatſoever any others will put that body to: If the body oppreſſe it ſelfe with Melancholy, the ſoule muſt be ſad; and if other men oppreſſe the body with injury, the ſoule muſt be ſad too; Conſider, (it is too immense a thing to conſider it) reflect but one thought, but upon this one thing in the ſoule, here, and hereafter, In her grave, the body, and in her Reſurrection in Heaven; That is the knowledge of the ſoule.

Here saies S. Augustine, when the soule considers the things of this world, Non veritate certior, sed consuetudine securior; She rests upon such things as she is not sure are true, but such as she sees, are 510 ordinarily received and accepted for truths: so that the end of her knowledge is not Truth, but opinion, and the way, not Inquisition, but ease: But saies he, when she proceeds in this life, to search into heavenly things, Verberatur luce veritatis, The beames of that light are too strong for her, and they sink her, and cast her downe, Et ad familiaritatem tenebrarum suarum, non electione sed fatigatione convertitur; and so she returnes to her owne darknesse, because she is most familiar, and best acquainted with it; Non electione, not because she loves ignorance, but because she is weary of the trouble of seeking out the truth, and so swallowes even any Religion to escape 520 the paine of debating, and disputing; and in this lazinesse she sleeps out her lease, her terme of life, in this death, in this grave, in this body.

But then in her Resurrection, her measure is enlarged, and filled at once; There she reads without spelling, and knowes without thinking, and concludes without arguing; she is at the end of her race, without running; In her triumph, without fighting; In her Haven, without sayling: A free-man, without any prentiship; at full yeares, without any wardship; and a Doctor, without any proceeding: She knowes truly, and easily, and immediately, and entirely, and ever-530 lastingly; Nothing left out at first, nothing worne out at last, that conduces to her happinesse. What a death is this life? what a resurrection is this death? For though this world be a sea, yet (which is most strange) our Harbour is larger then the sea; Heaven infinitely larger then this world. For, though that be not true, which Origen is said to say, That at last all shall be saved, nor that evident, which Cyriel of Alexandria saies, That without doubt the number of them that are saved, is far greater then of them that perish, yet surely the number of them, with whom we shall have communion in Heaven, is greater then ever lived at once upon the face of the earth: And of 540 those who lived in our time, how few did we know? and of those whom we did know, how few did we care much for? In Heaven we shall have Communion of Joy and Glory with all, alwaies; Vbi non intrat inimicus, nec amicus exit, Where never any man shall come in that loves us not, nor go from us that does.

Aug.

Beloved, I thinke you could be content to heare, I could be content to speake of this Resurrection, our glorious state, by the low way of the grave, till God by that gate of earth, let us in at the other of precious Stones. And blessed and holy is he, who in a rectified conscience desires that resurrection now. But we shall not depart far ⁵⁵⁰ from this consideration, by departing into our last branch, or conclusion, That this first Resurrection may also be understood to be the first riser Christ Jesus; and Blessed and holy is he that hath part in that first Resurrection.

This first Resurrection is then without any detorting, any violence, very appliable to Christ himself, who was Primitiæ dormientium, in that, that action, That he rose again, he is become (sayes the Apostle) the first fruits of them that sleep: He did rise, and rise first; others rose with him, none before him: for S. Hierome taking the words as he finds them in that Euangelist, makes this note, That ⁵⁶⁰ though the graves were opened, at the instant of Christs death, (death was overcome, the City opened the gates) yet the bodies did not rise till after Christs Resurrection. For, for such Resurrections as are spoken of, That women received their dead raised to life again, and such as are recorded in the old and new Testament, they were all unperfect and temporary resurrections, such, as S. Hierome sayes of them all, Resurgebant iterum morituri; They were but reprieved, not pardoned; They had a Resurrection to life, but yet a Resurrection to another death. Christ is the first Resurrection; others were raised; but he only rose; they by a forraine, and extrinsique, he by his ⁵⁷⁰ owne power.

But we call him not the first, in that respect onely; for so he was not onely the first, but the onely; he alone rose by his owne power; but with relation to all our future Resurrections, he is the first Resurrection. First, If Christ be not raised, your faith is in vaine, saies the Apostle; You have a vaine faith if you beleeeve in a dead man. He might be true Man, though he remained in death; but it concernes you to beleeeve, that he was the Son of God too; And he was declared to be the Son of God, by the Resurrection from the dead. That was the declaration of himselfe, his Justification; he was justified by the ⁵⁸⁰ Spirit, when he was proved to be God, by raising himselfe. But thus our Justification is also in his Resurrection. For, He was raised from the dead, for our Iustification: how for ours? That we should be also in the likenesse of his Resurrection. What is that? that he hath told us before; Our Resurrection in Christ is, that we should walke in newnesse of life.

So that then Christ is the first Resurrection, first, Efficiently, the onely cause of his owne Resurrection; First, Meritoriously, the onely cause of our Resurrection; first, Exemplarily, the onely patterne, how we should rise, and how we should walke, when we are up; and 590 therefore, Blessed and happy are we, if we referre all our resurrections to this first Resurrection Christ Jesus. For as Iob said of Comforters, so miserable Resurrections are they all without him.

If therefore thou need and seeke this first Resurrection, in the first acceptation, a Resurrection from persecutions, and calamities, as they oppresse thee here, have thy recourse to him, to Christ. Remember that at the death of Christ, there were earthquakes; the whole earth trembled; There were rendings of the Temple; Schismes, Convulsions, distractions in the Church will be: But then, the graves opened in the midst of those commotions; Then when thou thinkest thy selfe 600 swallowed, and buried in affliction, as the Angell did his, Christ Jesus shall remove thy grave stone, and give thee a resurrection; but if thou thinke to remove it by thine owne wit, thine owne power, or the favour of potent Friends, Digitus Dei non est hic, The hand of God is not in all this, and the stone shall lye still upon thee, till thou putrifie into desperation, and thou shalt have no part in this first Resurrection.

If thou need, and seek this first resurrection, in the second acceptation, from the fearfull death of hainous sin, have thy recourse to him, to Christ Jesus, and remember the waight of the sins that lay upon 610 him: All thy sins, and all thy Fathers, and all thy childrens sins, all those sins that did induce the first flood, and shall induce the last fire upon this world; All those sins, which that we might take example by them to scape them, are recorded, and which, lest we should take example by them, to imitate them, are left unrecorded; all sins, of all ages, all sexes, all places, al times, all callings, sins heavy in their substance, sins aggravated by their circumstances, all kinds of sins, and all particular sins of every kind, were upon him, upon Christ Jesus; and yet he raised his holy Head, his royall Head, though under thornes, yet crowned with those thornes, and triumphed in this first ⁶²⁰ Resurrection: and his body was not left in the Grave, nor his soule in Hell. Christs first tongue was a tongue that might be heard, He spoke to the Shepheards by Angels; His second tongue was a Star, a tongue which might be seene; He spoke to the Wisemen of the East by that. Hearken after him these two waies; As he speakes to thine eare, (and to thy soul, by it) in the preaching of his Word, as he speakes to thine eye, (and so to thy soule by that) in the exhibiting of his Sacraments: And thou shalt have thy part in this first Resurrection. But if thou thinke to overcome this death, this sense of sin, by diversions, by worldly delights, by mirth, and musique, and ⁶³⁰ society, or by good works, with a confidence of merit in them, or with a relation to God himselfe, but not as God hath manifested himselfe to thee, not in Christ Jesus, The stone shall lye still upon thee, till thou putrifie into desperation, and then hast thou no part in this first Resurrection.

If thou desire this first Resurrection in the third acceptation, as S. Paul did, To be dissolved, and to be with Christ, go Christs way to that also. He desired that glory that thou doest; and he could have laid down his soul when he would; but he staid his houre, sayes the Gospel. He could have ascended immediatly, immediatly in time, ⁶⁴⁰ yet he staid to descend into hell first; and he could have ascended immediatly of himselfe, by going up, yet he staid till he was taken up.
 Thou hast no such power of thine own soul and life, not for the time, not for the means of comming to this first Resurrection by death; Stay therefore patiently, stay chearfully Gods leasure till he call; but not so over-chearfully, as to be loath to go when he calls. Reliefe in persecution by power, reconciliation in sin by grace, dissolution, and transmigration to heaven by death, are all within this first Resurrection: But that which is before them all, is Christ Jesus.

And therefore, as all that the naturall man promises himselfe with-⁶⁵⁰ out God, is impious, so all that we promise our selves, though by God, without Christ, is frivolous. God, who hath spoken to us by his Son, works upon us by his Son too; He was our Creation, he was our Redemption, he is our Resurrection. And that man trades in the world without money, and goes out of the world without recommendation, that leaves out Christ Jesus. To be a good Morall man, and refer all to the law of Nature in our hearts, is but Diluculum, The dawning of the day; To be a godly man, and refer all to God, is but Crepusculum, A twilight; But the Meridionall brightnesse, the glorious noon, and heighth, is to be a Christian, to pretend to no spirituall, no⁶⁶⁰ temporall blessing, but for, and by, and through, and in our only Lord and Saviour Christ Jesus; for he is this first Resurrection, and Blessed and holy is he, that hath part in this first Resurrection.

Number 3.

Preached at Saint Dunstons Aprill 11. 1624.

The first Sermon in that Church, as Vicar thereof.

DEUT. 25.5. IF BRETHREN DWELL TOGETHER, AND ONE OF THEM DIE, AND HAVE NO CHILDE, THE WIFE OF THE DEAD SHALL NOT MARY WITHOUT, UNTO A STRANGER; HER HUSBANDS BROTHER SHALL GOE IN UNTO HER, AND TAKE HER TO HIM TO WIFE, AND PERFORME THE DUTY OF AN HUSBANDS BROTHER UNTO HER.

FROM THE beginning God intimated a detestation, a dislike of singularity; of beeing Alone. The first time that God himselfe is named in the Bible, in the first verse of Genesis, hee is named Plurally, Creavit Dii, Gods, Gods in the plurall, Created Heaven and Earth. God, which is but one, would not appeare, nor bee presented so alone, but that hee would also manifest more persons. As the Creator was not Singular, so neither were the creatures; First, he created heaven and earth; both together; which were to be the generall parents, and out of which were to bee produced all other creatures;
¹⁰ and then, he made all those other creatures plurally too; Male, and Female created hee them; And when he came to make him, for whose sake (next to his own glory) he made the whole world, Adam, he left not Adam alone, but joyned an Eve to him; Now, when they were married, we know, but wee know not when they were divorced; we heare when Eve was made, but not when shee died; The husbands death is recorded at last, the wives is not at all. So much detestation hath God himselfe, and so little memory would hee have kept of any singularity, of being alone. The union of Christ to the whole Church is not expressed by any metaphore, by any figure, so oft in the Scripture, as by this of Mariage: and there in that union with Christ to the whole Church, neither husband, nor wife can ever die; Christ is immortall as hee is himselfe, and immortall, as hee is the head of the Church, the Husband of that wife: for that wife, the Church is immortall too; for as a Prince is the same Prince, when he fights a battle, and when hee triumphs after the victory: so the militant, and the triumphant Church is the same Church. There can bee no Widower, There can bee no Dowager, in that case; Hee cannot, shee cannot die. But then this Metaphore, this spirituall Mariage, holds not onely betweene Christ and the whole Church, in which case there³⁰ can be no Widow, but in the union between Christs particular Ministers, and particular Churches; and there, in that case, the husband of that wife may die; The present Minister may die, and so that Church be a Widow; And in that case, and for provision of such Widows, wee consider the accommodation of this Law, If brethren dwell together, and one of them die, and have no childe, the wife of the dead shall not mary without, unto a stranger, &c.

This law was but a permissive law; rather a dispensation, then a law: as the permitting of usury to bee taken of strangers, and the permitting of divorces in so many cases, were. At most it was but a⁴⁰ Iudiciall law, and therefore layes no obligation, upon any other nation, then them, to whom it was given, the Iews. And therefore wee enquire not the reasons of that law, (the reasons were determined in that people) wee examine not the conveniencies of the law; (the conveniencies were determined in those times) wee lay hold onely upon the Typique signification, and appliablenesse of the law, as that secular Mariage there spoken of, may be appliable to this spirituall Mariage, the Mariage of the Minister to the Church: If Brethren dwell together, &c.

Divisio

From these words then, wee shall make our approaches, and application, to the present occasion, by these steps; First, there is a mariage, in the case. The taking, and leaving of a Church, is not an indifferent, an arbitrary thing; It is a Mariage, and Mariage implies,

Honour: It is an honourable estate, and that implies Charge, it is a burdensome state; There is Honos, and Onus, Honour, and labour, in Mariage; You must bee content to afford the honour, wee must bee content to endure the labour. And so in that point, as our Incumbencie upon a Church, is our Mariage to that Church, wee shall as farre, as the occasion admits, see what mariage includes, and what it excludes; what it requires, what it forbids. It is a mariage, and a ⁶⁰ mariage after the death of another: If one dye, sayes the Text; Howsoever the Romane Church in the exercise of their Tyranny, have forbidden Church-men to mary, then when they have Orders, and forbidden Orders to bee given to any, who have formerly beene married, if they married Widowes, God is pleased here, to afford us, some intimation, some adumbration, a Typicall and exemplar knowledge of the lawfulnessse of such mariages, hee maries after the death of a former husband; and then farther, a brother maries the wife of his deceased brother. Now into the reasons of the law, literally given, and literally accepted, wee looke not; It is enough, that God hath a ⁷⁰ care of the preservation of names and families and inheritances in those distinctions, and in those Tribes, where hee layd them then; but for the accommodation of the law to our present application, it must bee a brother, a spirituall brother, a professor of the same faith, that succeeds in this mariage, in this possession, and this government of that widow Church. It must be a brother, and Frater cohabitans, says our Text, a brother that dwelt together, with the former husband; he must be of the same houshold of the faithfull, as well as professe the same faith; he must dwell in the house of God, not separate himselfe, or encourage others to doe so, for matter of Ceremonies, and disci- ⁸⁰ pline; Idolaters must not, Separatists must not be admitted to these mariages, to these widow Churches. And then it is a surrendring to a brother dead without Children: In this spirituall procreation of children, we all dye without children of our own; Though by our labours, when God blesses them, you become children, yet you are Gods children, not ours; we nurse you by his word, but his Spirit begets you by the same word; we must not challenge to us, that which God onely can doe. And then being thus married to this widow, taking the charge of this Church, he must, says our text, performe the duty of a husbands brother. He must, it is a personall service, not to

⁹⁰ be done always by Proxy, and Delegates; He must; and he must performe; not begin well, and not persist, commence and not consummate, but performe the worke; and performe the worke, as it is a duty; It is a meer mercy in God, to send us to you, but it is a duty in us, to doe that which we are sent for, by his Word, and his Sacraments, to establish you in his holy obedience, and his rich, and honourable service. And then our duty consists in both these, that we behave our selves, as your husband, which implies a power, an authority; but a power and authority rooted in love, and exercised with love; and then that we doe all as brothers to the former husband, that as one intention of this law was, that inheritances, and temporall properties might be preserved, so our care might be through predecessor, and successor, and all, that all rights might be preserved to all men, that nothing not due, or due onely in rigor, be extorted from the people, nothing that is in truth, or in equity due, be with-held from the Minister; but that the true right of people, and Pastor, and Patron be preserved, to the preservation of love, and peace, and good opinion of one another.

monium*

First then, that which we take upon us, is a Mariage. Amongst the Jews, it was almost an ignominious, an infamous thing, to die unmarried, at least to die without children, being married. Amongst the Gentiles it was so too, all well governed States ever enlarged themselves, in giving places of command and profit, to married men. Indeed such men are most properly said to keep this world in reparations, that provide a succession of children; and for the next world, though all that are borne into this world, doe not enter into the number of Gods Saints, in heaven, yet the Saints of heaven can be made out of no other materialls, but men borne into this world. Every stone in the quarry is not sure to be employed in the building of the Church, but the Church must be built out of those stones; and therefore they ¹¹⁰ keep this world, they keep heaven it selfe in reparation, that mary in the feare of God, and in the same feare bring up the children of such a marriage. But I presse not this too literally, nor over persuasively, that every man is bound to mary; God is no acceptor of persons, nor of conditions. But being to use these words in their figurative application, I say, every man is bound to marry himselfe to a profession, to a calling: God hath brought him from being nothing, by creating him, but he resolves himselfe into nothing againe, if he take no calling upon him. In our Baptisme we make our contract with God, that we will believe all those Articles there recited; there's our ¹³⁰ contract with him; and then, pursuing this contract, in the other Sacrament, when we take his body and his blood, we are married to him. So at the same time, at our Baptisme, we make a contract in the presence of God, and his congregation, with the world; that we will forsake the covetous desires of the world, that is, the covetous proprieting of all things to our selves, the covetous living onely for our selves, there's our contract with the world, that we will mutually assist, and serve our brethren in the world; and then, when we take particular callings, by which we are enabled to perform that former contract, then we are married to the world; so every man is duly con-

Now in a Matrimoniall state, there is Onus and Honos, a burden to be born, an Honour to be received. The burden of the sinnes of the whole world, was a burden onely for Christs shoulders; but the sinnes of this Parish, will ly upon my shoulders, if I be silent, or if I be indulgent, and denounce not Gods Judgement upon those sinnes. It will be a burden to us, if we doe not, and God knowes it is a burden to us, when we do denounce those Judgements. Esay felt, and groned ¹⁵⁰ under this burden, when he cried Onus Babylonis, Onus Moab, and Onus Damasci, O the burden of Babylon, and the burden of Damascus, and so the other Prophets grone often under this burden, in contemplation of other places: It burdened, it troubled, it grieved the holy Prophets of God, that they must denounce Gods judgements, though upon Gods enemies. We reade of a compassionate Generall, that looking upon his great Army, from a hill, fell into a bitter weeping, upon this consideration, that in fiftie or sixtie yeares hence, there will not be a man of these that fight now, alive upon the earth. What ¹⁶⁰ Sea could furnish mine eyes with teares enough, to poure out, if I should think, that of all this Congregation, which lookes me in the face now, I should not meet one, at the Resurrection, at the right hand of God! And for so much as concerns me, it is all one, if none of you be saved, as if none of you be saved by my help, my means, my assistance, my preaching. If I put you upon miraculous wayes, to be saved without hearing, or upon extraordinary wayes to be saved by hearing others, this shall aggravate my condemnation, though you be saved: How much more heavy must my burden be, if by my negligence both I and you perish too? So then this calling, this marriage, is a burden every way. When at any midnight I heare a bell toll from ¹⁷⁰ this steeple, must not I say to my selfe, what have I done at any time for the instructing or rectifying of that mans Conscience, who lieth there now ready to deliver up his own account, and my account to Almighty God? If he be not able to make a good account, he and I are in danger, because I have not enabled him; and though he be for himself able, that delivers not me, if I have been no instrument for the doing of it. Many, many burdens lie upon this calling, upon this marriage; but our recompense is, that marriage is as well an honourable as a painefull calling.

Honos. If I be a Father, where is mine Honour? saith God: If you can Malac. 1.6 ¹⁸⁰ answer God, Why, you have it in your Prophets, They have it, that satisfieth him, that dischargeth you. For, he that receiveth them, receiveth him: But if Christ, who repeats that complaint, in every one of the foure Evangelists, finde it repeated in every one of his Prophets too, in every one of us, That a Prophet hath no honour in his own Countrie, that a Pastor is least respected of his own flock, you have not your Quietus est, for the honour due to God; God never discharges the honour due to him, if it be not paid into their hands, whom he sendeth for it, to them upon whom he hath directed it. Would the King believe that man, to honour him, that violateth his [Joh. 4.44] ¹⁹⁰ Image, or that calumniateth his Ambassadour? Every man is the Image of God; every Creature is the Ambassadour of God; The Heavens, (and as well as the Heavens, the Earth) declare the glory of God; but the Civill Magistrate, and the Spirituell Pastor, who have married the two Daughters of God, The State and the Church, are the Images and Ambassadours of God, in a higher and more peculiar sense, and for that marriage are to be honoured. And then Honour implieth that, by which Honour subsisteth, maintenance; and they which withdraw that injuriously, or with-hold that contentiously, dishonour God, in the dishonour of his servants, and so make this mar-[Psa. 19.1] ²⁰⁰ riage, this calling onely burdensome and not honourable.

So then the interest of your particular Minister, and the particular Church, being such as between Man and Wife, a marriage, we consider the uses of marriage in Gods first intention, and apply them to this marriage. Gods first intentions in marriage were two. In adjutorium, for mutuall helpers, and in prolem, for procreation, and education of Children. For both these are we made Husbands of Churches; In prolem, to assist in the regeneration of Children, for the inheritance of Heaven; and in adjutorium, to be helpers to one another. And therefore if the husband, the Pastor, put the wife, his flock in a

²¹⁰ Circumcision, to pare themselves to the quick, to take from their necessary means to sustain their families, to satisfie him; the wife will say as Zipporah said to Moses, Sponsus sanguinum, a bloody husband art thou, that exactest and extortest more then is due. In that case the Husband is no helper. But if we be alwayes ready to help your children over the threshold, (as Saint Augustine calls Baptisme, Limen Ecclesie) alwayes ready to Baptize the Children; if we be alwayes ready to help you in all your spirituall diseases, to that Cordially, that Balsamum, the body and blood of Christ Jesus; If we be alwayes ready to help you in all your bodily distresses, ready even at your last gasp to

²³⁰ making that a marriage; they are not mutuall helpers to one another. These were Gods two principall intentions in marriage, in adjutorium, in prolem. But then mans fall induced a third, in remedium, That for a remedy against burning, and to avoid fornication, every man should have his own wife, every woman her own husband. And so in remedium, for a remedy against spirituall fornication, of running after other men in other places, out of disaffection to their own Pastor, or over affecting another, God hath given every wife, her own husband, Every Church her own Pastor. And to all these purposes, our function is a marriage.

Defuncti ²⁴⁰ It is a marriage, it deserves the honour, it undertakes the burden of Levit. 21.14 that state; and then it is a marriage of a widow, of a Church left in widow-hood by the death of her former husband. In the Law literally God forbad the High Priest to marry a widdow. The Romane Church continues that literally, and more; they extend it; that which was in figure, enjoined to the High Priest onely, they in fact extend to all Priests; no man that ever married a widow, may be a priest, though she be dead, when he desires orders. There is no question but there is a more exemplary sanctity required in the Priest, then in other persons, and more in those, who are in high places in the Church, then ²⁵⁰ in those of inferiour Jurisdictions, and the name and title of Virginity, hath ever been exhibited as an Embleme, as a Type of especiall Sanctity. And as such the Apostle uses it when he saith, That he would 2 Cor. 11.2 present the Church of Corinth, as a chaste Virgine to Christ; That is, as chaste as a Virgin, though married, for so he saith in the words immediately before, That he had espoused them to a husband: As [Heb. 13.4] marriage is an honourable state, though in poverty, so is the bed undefiled with strange lust, a chaste bed even in marriage. And in the accommodation of the Figure to the present occasion, our marriage to severall Churches, if we might marry no widowes, (no Churches, ²⁶⁰ which had been wives to former husbands) we should finde few Virgins, that is, Churches newly erected for us. But when the wife of a former husband is left a widow, Nubat in Domino, saith the Apostle, 1 Cor. 7.39 In Gods name let her marry.

But the former husband must be dead: The husbands absence makes not the wife a widow; nor doth the necessary, and lawfull absence of the Pastor, make the Church vacant. The sickness of the husband makes not a widow; The bodily weaknesse nay the spirituall weaknes of the Pastor in case that his parts and abilities, and faculties, be grown but weak, do not make his Church vacant. If the Pastor be ²⁷⁰ suspended, or otherwise censured, this is but as a separation, or as a divorce; and as the wife is not a widow, upon a divorce, so neither is the Church vacant, upon such censures. And therefore for them that take advantages upon the weaknesses, or upon the disgrace, or upon the povertie of any such incumbent, and so insinuate themselves into his Church, this is intrusion, this is spirituall adultery, for the husband is not dead, though he be sick. Nay if they would remove him by way of preferment, yet that is a supplantation; when Jacob had Esau by the heel, whether he kept him in, till he might be strong enough to goe out before him, or whether he pushed him out, before he would have gone,

Gen. 25.26

²⁸⁰ Jacob was a supplanter. Some few cases are put when a wife becomes as a widow, her husband living; but regularly it is by death. In some few cases, Churches may otherwise be vacant, but regularly it is by death. And then Esto vidua in Domo Patris, saith Judah to Thamar, Remain a widow at thy fathers house: Then the Church remaineth in the house, in the hands of her Father, the Bishop of that Dioces, till a new husband be lawfully tendred unto her: And till that time, as our Saviour Christ recommended his most blessed Mother, to Saint John, but not as a wife, so that Bishop delivers that Church, to the care and administration of some other during her widowhood, till by due

²⁹⁰ course she become the wife of another.

Thus our calling is a mariage; It should have honour; It must have labour; and it is a lawfull mariage upon a just and equitable vacancy of the place, without any supplantation; upon death; And then it is upon death of a brother; If brethren dwell together, and one of them die, and have no childe, the wife, &c. Aswell Saint Gregory, as Saint Augustine before, interpret this of our elder, our eldest brother Christ Iesus. That hee being dead, we mary his wife, the Church, and become husbands to her. But Christ, in that capacity, as he is head of the Church, cannot die. That to which, the application of this law, leads

³⁰⁰ us, is, That predecessor, and successor, bee brethren of the same faith, and the same profession of faith. The Sadduces put a case to Christ of a woman married successively to seven men; let seven signifie infinite; still those seven were brethren. How often soever any wife change her husband, any Church, her Pastor, God sends us still a succession of brethren, sincere, and unfeigned Preachers of the same truth, sonnes of the same father; Who is that father? God is our Father; Have we not all one Father, says the Prophet? Yes, we have, and so a worme, and we, are brethren, by the same father, and mother, the same God, the same Earth. Hath not the raine a father? The raine hath; and the ³¹⁰ same that wee have. More narrowly, and yet very largely, Christ is our father; One of his names is, The everlasting Father; And then after these, after God, after Christ, the King is our father; See, my father, the skirt of thy robe, in my hand, says David to his King Saul; Now if any husband should be offered to any widow, any Pastor to any vacant Church, who were not our brother by all these fathers, in a right beliefe in God, the Father of all men, in a right profession of Christ Iesus, the Father of all Christians, in a right affection, and allegiance to the King, the Father of all Subjects, Any that should incline to a forain father, an imaginary universall father, he of whom³²⁰ his Vice-fathers, his Junior fathers, the Iesuites (for all the Jesuits are Fathers) says, That the Fathers of the Church are but sons, and not fathers, to him; They that say to a stock, to the Image of the beast, Thou art my father, who, (not in a sense of humiliation, as Iob speaks the words) but of pride, say to corruption, Thou art my father, that is, that prostrate themselves to all the corruptions of a prostitute Church: If any so inclined of himself, or so inclinable if occasion should invite him, or rather tempt him, be offered for a husband to any widow, for a Pastor to any vacant Church, he is not within the accommodation of this law, hee is not our brother, by the whole blood,³³⁰ who hath not a brotherhood rooted in the same religion, and in the allegiance to the same Sovereign.

Cohabitans

He must be a brother, and Frater Cohabitans, a brother dwelling with the former brother. As he is a brother, we consider the unity of faith: As he dwels in the same house, we consider the unity of discipline; That as he beleeves, and professes the same articles of faith, so by his own obedience, and by his instructing of others, hee establish the same government; A Schismatique is no more a brother to this purpose, then an Heretique. If we look well, we shall see, that Christ provided better for his garments, then for his flesh; he suffered his³⁴⁰ flesh to be torn, but not his seamlesse garment. There may bee, in many cases, more mischief, in disobeying the uniformity of the discipline of the Church, then in mistaking in opinion, some doctrine of the Church. Wee see in Gods institution of his first Church, whom he called brethren: Those who were instructed, and cunning in the songs of the Church, they are called brethren; To oppose the orders of the Church solemnly ordained, or customarily admitted, for the advancement of Gods glory, and the devotion of the Congregation, forfeits this brotherhood, or at least discontinues the purpose and use of it; for, howsoever they may bee in a kinde, brothers, if they succeed in the ³⁵⁰ profession of the same faith, yet wee see where the blessednesse is settled, Blessed are they that dwell in thy house; And we see, where the goodnesse, and the pleasantnesse is settled, Behold, how good, and how pleasant a thing it is, for brethren to dwell together in unity: So that, if they be not brothers in the same faith, and brothers in the same household of the faithfull, and brothers in the same allegiance, If they advance not the truth of the Church, and the peace of the Church, and the head of the Church, fomentors of Error, and of Schisme, and Sedition, are not husbands for these widows, Pastors for these Churches.

Psal. 84.4
[Psal.] 133.1

³⁶⁰ Hee must bee a brother; A brother dwelling in the same house of Christ, and then brother to one dead without children, as Tertullian expresses it in his particular elegancy Illiberis; that is, content to be his brother, in that sense, in that capacity, to claime no children, no spirituall children of his own begetting; not to attribute to himself that holy generation of the Saints of God, as though his learning, or his wit, or his labour, had saved them; but to content himselfe to have been the foster father, and to have nursed those children, whom the Spirit of God, by over-shadowing the Church, hath begot upon her, for, though it be with the word of truth, in our preaching, yet of his ³⁷⁰ own will begot he us, though by the word, says the Apostle. Saint Paul might say to the Corinthians, Though you have tenne thousand in- structors in Christ, yet have yee not many fathers, for in Christ Jesus I have begotten you through the Gospel; And hee might say of his spirituall sonne Onesimus, That he begot him in his bonds; Those, to whom he first of any presented the Gospel, That had not heard of a Christ, nor a holy Ghost, before, They, into whom, he infused a new religion, new to them, might well enough bee called his children, and hee their father; But we have no new doctrine to present, no new opinion to infuse, or miracles to amaze, as in the Romane Church, ³⁸⁰ they are full of all these: wee have no children to beget of our own: Paul was not crucified for you, nor were you baptized in the name of Paul, says Paul himself; as he sayes again, who is Paul? but a Minister by whom ye beleaved, and that also not by him, but as the Lord gave to every man; Not as Paul preached to every man, for he preached alike to every man; but as the Lord gave to every man; I have planted, says he, it is true, but he that planteth is nothing, says he also; Only they that proceed, as they proceed in the Romane Church Ex opere operato, to tie the grace of God, to the action of the man, will venter to call Gods children, their children in that sense. My prayer shal be against Hose. 9.14 ³⁹⁰ that commination, That God will not give us a miscarrying womb, nor dry breasts; that you may always suck pure milk from us, and then not cast it up, but digest it, to your spirituall growth; And I shall call upon God with a holy passion, as vehement as Rachels to Jacob, Gen. 30.1 Da mihi liberos, give me children, or I die: That God would give me children, but his children; that he by his Spirit, may give you an inward regeneration, as I, by his ordinance shall present to you, the outward means, that so being begot by himselfe, the father of life, and of light, you may be nursed, and brought up, in his service by me. That so, not attributing the work to any man, but to Gods Ordinances, ⁴⁰⁰ you doe not tie the power of God, nor the breath of life, to any one mans lips, as though there were no regeneration, no begetting, but by him; but acknowledging the other to be but an instrument, and the weakest to be that, you may remember also, That though a man can cut deeper with an Axe, then with a knife, with a heavy, then with a lighter instrument; yet God can pierce as far into a conscience, by a plain, as by an exquisite speaker.

Ille Now this widow being thus married, This Church thus undertaken, He must perform the duty of a husbands brother: First, it is a personall office, he must doe it himself. When Christ shall say, at the Judgement,

Mat. 25.43 ⁴¹⁰ I was naked, and ye cloathed me not, sick, and ye visited me not, it shall be no excuse to say, When saw we thee naked, when saw we thee sick? for wee might have seen it, wee should have seen it. When we shall come to our accompt, and see them, whose salvation was committed to us, perish, because they were uninstructed, and ignorant, dare we say then, we never saw them show their ignorance, wee never heard of it? That is the greatest part of our fault, the heaviest weight upon our condemnation, that we saw so little, heard so little, conversed so little amongst them, because we were made watchmen, and bound to see, and bound to hear, and bound to be heard; not by others, but ⁴²⁰ by our selves; My sheep may be saved by others; but I save them not, that are saved so, nor shall I my self be saved by their labour, where mine was necessarily required.

The office is personall, I must doe it, and it is perpetuall, I must perform it, sayes the text, goe through with it. Lots wife looked backe, and God never gave her leave to look forward again. That man who hath put his hand to the plow, and looks back, Christ disables him for the kingdome of God. The Galatians who had begun in the spirit, and then relapsed, before whose eyes Christ Iesus had been evidently set forth, as the Apostle speaks, fall under that reproach of the Apostle, ⁴³⁰ to bee called, and called againe, fooles, and men bewitched. If I beginne to preach amongst you, and proceed not, I shall fall under that heavy increpation from my God, you beganne, that you might for your owne glory, shew that you were in some measure, able to serve the Church, and when you had done enough for your own glory, you gave over my glory, and the salvation of their souls, to whom I sent you. God hath set our eyes in our foreheads, to look forward, not backward, not to be proud of that which we have done, but diligent in that which we are to doe. In the Creation, if God had given over his worke, the third, or fift day, where had man been? If I give over my ⁴⁴⁰ prayers, due to the Church of God, as long as God enables me to doe it service, I lose my thanks, nay, I lose the testimony of mine own conscience for all. My office is personall, and it is perpetuall, and then it is a duty. He must perform the duty of a husbands brother unto her.

It is not of curtesie, that we preach, but it is a duty, it is not a bounty given, but it is a debt paid: for, though I preach the Gospel, I have nothing to glory of, for a necessity is laid upon me, sayes Saint Paul himself. It is true, that as there is a Væ si non, Wo be unto mee, if I doe not preach the Gospel, so there is an Euge bone serve, Well done, good, and faithfull servant, to them that doe. But the Væ, is of Justice, the ⁴⁵⁰ Euge is of Mercy; If I doe it not, I deserve condemnation from God; but if I doe it, I deserve not thanks from him. Nay, it is a debt, not onely to God, but to Gods people, to you: and indeed there is more due to you, then you can claime, or can take knowledge of. For the people can claime but according to the laws of that State, and the Canons of that Church, in which God hath placed them; such preaching, as those Laws, and those Canons enioyn, is a debt which they can call for: but the Pastor himself hath another Court, another Barre in himselfe, by which hee tries himselfe, and must condemne himselfe, if hee pay not this debt, performe not this duty, as often, as him-⁴⁶⁰ self, knowes himselfe, to bee fit, and able to doe it.

It is a duty, and it is the duty of an husbands brother. Now the husband hath power, and authority over the wife. The head of the woman is the Man; and when the office of this spirituall husband is particularly expressed, thus, Reprove, Rebuke, Exhort, you see, for one word of familiarity, that is, Exhort, there are two of authority, Reprove, and Rebuke. But yet, all the authority of the husband, secular, or ecclesiasticall, temporall, or spirituall husband, is grounded, rooted in love: for, the Apostle seemes to delight himself, in the repeating of that Commandement, to the Ephesians, and to the Colossians, Husbands love your wives. ⁴⁷⁰ Moses extends himselfe no farther, in expressing all the happinesses, that Isaak and Rebecca enjoyed in one another, but this, shee became his wife, and he loved her. If shee had not beene his wife, Moses would never have proposed that love for an example; for so it is also betweene Elkanah, and his wife Hannah, 1 Sam. 1.5. Vnto Hannah he gave a double portion, for (sayes the Text) hee loved Hannah. If the Pastor love, there will bee a double labour; if the People love, there will bee double respect. But being so, hee thought hee said all, when he said they loved one another; For where the Congregation loves the Pastor, hee will forbear bitter reproofes, and ⁴⁸⁰ wounding increpations, and where the Pastor loves his Congregation, his Rebukes, because they proceed out of love, will bee acceptable, and well interpreted by them.

Fratris

It is a duty, and personall, and perpetuall; a duty, of a husband, and lastly, of a husband that is brother to the former husband; In which last circumstance, we have time to mark but this one note, that the reason of that law, which drew the brother to this marriage, was the preservation of the temporall inheritance, in that family. Even in our spirituall mariages to widow Churches, we must have a care to preserve the temporall rights of all persons; That the Parish be not ⁴⁹⁰ pressed with heavy extortions, nor the Pastor defrauded with unjust subtraction, nor the Patron damnified by usurpations, nor the Ordinary neglected by disobediences; but that people, and Pastor, and Patron, and Ordinary, continuing in possession of their severall rights, love being the root of all, the fruit of all may be peace, love being the soul of all, the body of all may be unity; which the Lord of unity, and concord, grant to us all, for his Sonne Christ Jesus sake, Amen.

PSAL. 34.11. COME YE CHILDREN, HEARKEN UNTO ME, I WILL TEACH YOU THE FEAR OF THE LORD.

THE TEXT does not call children simply, literally, but such men, and women, as are willing to come in the simplicity of children; such children, as Christ spoke of, Except ye become as little children, ye shall not enter into the Kingdome of heaven; Come ye children; come such children. Nor does the Text call such as come, and would fain be gone again; it is Come and Hearken; not such as wish themselves away, nor such as wish another man here; but such as value Gods ordinance of Preaching, though it be, as the Apostle says, but the foolishnesse of Preaching, and such, as consider the office, and¹⁰ not the person, how meane soever; Come ye children; And, when ye are come, Hearken, And, though it be but I, Hearken unto me; And, I will teach you the feare of the Lord; the most noble, the most courageous, the most magnanimous, not affection, but vertue, in the world; Come ye children, Hearken unto me, and I will teach you the feare of the Lord.

1 Cor. 1.21

To every Minister and Dispenser of the word of God, and to every Congregation belong these words; And therefore we will divide the Text between us; To you one, to us appertains the other part. You must come, and you must hearken; we must teach, and teach to *edifica-*²⁰*tion*; There is the Meum & Tuum, your part, and our part. From each Part, these branches flow out naturally; In yours, first, the capacity, as children; Then the action, you Come; Then your Disposition here, you hearken; And lastly, your submission to Gods Ordinance, you hearken even unto me, unto any Minister of his sending. In our Part, there is first a Teaching; for, else, why should you come, or hearken unto me, or any? It is a Teaching, it is not onely a Praying; And then, there is a Catholique doctrine, a circular doctrine, that walks the round, and goes the compasse of our whole lives, from our first, to our last childhood, when age hath made us children again, and it is³⁰ the Art of Arts, the root, and fruit of all true wisdom, The true feare of the Lord. Come ye children, hearken unto mee, and I will teach you the feare of the Lord.

Divisio

I Part

First then, the word, in which, in the first branch of the first part, your capacity is expressed, filii, pueri, children, is, from the Originall, which is Banim, often accepted in three notions, and so rendred; Three ways, men are called children, out of that word Banim, in the Scriptures. Either it is servi, servants; for, they are filii familiares; as the Master is Pater familias, Father of the family, (and that he is, though there be no naturall children in the family) the servants are⁴⁰ children of the family, and are very often in Scriptures called so, Pueri, children; Or it is Alumni, Nurse-children, foster-children, filii mammillares, children of the breasts; whether wee minister to them, temporall or spirituall nourishment, they are children; Or else it is filii viscerales, children of our bowels, our naturall children. And in all these three capacities, as servants, as sucking children, as sons, are you called upon in this appellation, in this compellation, children.

Servi

First, as you are servants, you are children; for, without distinction of age, servants are called so, frequently, ordinarily, in the Scriptures, Pueri. The Priest asks David, before he would give him the holy⁵⁰ bread, An vasa puerorum sancta, Whether those children, (speaking of Dauids followers) were clean from women; Here were children that were able to get children. Nay, Dauids Soldiers are often called so, pueri, children. In the first of the Kings, he takes a Muster, recenset pueros; Here were children that were able to kill men. You are his children, (of what age soever) as you are his servants; and in that capacity he calls you. You are unprofitable servants; but it is not an unprofitable service, to serve God; He can get nothing by you, but you can have nothing without him. The Centurions servants came, when he said, Come; and was their wages like yours? Had they their ⁶⁰ beeing, their ever-lasting well-beeing for their service? You will scarce receive a servant, that is come from another man, without testimony; If you put your selves out of Gods service, whither will ye goe? In his service, and his onely, is perfect freedome. And therefore as you love freedome, and liberty, bee his servants; and call the freedome of the Gospel, the best freedome, and come to the Preaching of that.

He cals you children, as you are servants, (filiī familiares) and he cals you children, as you are Alumni, nurse-children, filiī mammillares, as he requires the humility, and simplicity of little children in you. For, Cum simplicibus sermocinatio ejus, (as the vulgat reads that ⁷⁰ place) Gods secret discourse is with the single heart. The first that ever came to Christ, (so as he came to us, in blood) they that came to him so, before he came so to us, that died for him, before he died for them, were such sucking children, those whom Herod slew. As Christ thought himself bound to thank his Father, for that way of proceeding, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, that thou hast revealed these things unto babes; so Christ himself pursues the same way, Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me, for of such is the Kingdome of heaven. Of such; not onely of those who were truly, literally children, (children in age) but of such as those, ⁸⁰ (Talium est regnum cœlorum) such as come in such a disposition, in the humility, in the simplicity, in the singlenesse of heart, as children do. An habituall sinner is always in minority, always an Infant; an Infant to this purpose, all his acts, all the bands of an Infant, are void; all the outward religious actions, even the band and contract of Baptism in an habituall sinner is void, and ineffectuall. He that is in the house, and favour of God, though he be a child, (a child to this purpose, simple, supple, tractable, single-hearted) is, as Adam was in the state of Innocency, a man the first minute, able to stand upright in the sight of God. And out of one place of Esay, our Expositors have drawn, ⁹⁰ conveniently enough, both these conclusions; A child shall die 100 years old, says the Prophet; that is, (say some) a sinner though he live 100 years, yet he dies a child, in ignorance; And then, (say others, and both truly) He that comes willingly, when God cals, though he die a child in age, he hath the wisdome of 100 years upon him. There is not a graver thing, then to be such a child; to conform his will to the will of God. Whether you consider temporall or spirituall things, you are

Gods children. For, for temporall, if God should take off his hand, withdraw his hand of sustentation, all those things, which assist us temporally, would relapse to the first feeble, and childish estate, and ¹⁰⁰ come to their first nothing. Armies would be but Hospitals, without all strength; Councell-tables but Bedlams, without all sense; and Schools and Universities, but the wrangling of children, if God, and his Spirit did not inanimate our Schools, and Armies, and Councils. His adoption makes us men, therefore, because it makes us his children. But we are his children in this consideration especially, as we are his spirituall children, as he hath nursed us, fed us with his word. In which sense, the Apostle speaks of those who had embraced the true Religion, (in the same words that the Prophet had spoken before) Behold, I, and the children that God hath given me; And in the same
¹²⁰ his Apostles, be not adopted into a yonger Religion. Religio à religando; That is Religion, that binds; that binds, that is necessary to salvation. That which we affirm, our adversaries deny not; that which we professe, they confesse was always necessary to salvation. They will not say, that all that they say now, was always necessary; That a man could not be saved without beleiving the Articles of the Councell of Trent, a week before that Councell shut up. You are his children, as children are servants; and, If he be your Lord, where is his fear? you are his children, as he hath nursed you, with the milk of his word; and if he be your Father so, (your foster Father) where is his love?
¹³⁰ But he is your Father otherwise; you are not onely Filii familiares, children because servants, nor onely Filii mammillares, children because nursed by him, but you are also Filii viscerales, children of his bowells. For, we are otherwise allied to Christ, then we can be to any of his instruments, though Angels of the Church, Prophets, or Apostles; and yet, his Apostle says, of one whom he loved, of Onesimus, Receive him, that is mine owne bowells; my Sonne, says he, whom I have begotten in my bands. How much more art thou bound to receive and refresh those bowells from which thou art derived, Christ Jesus himselfe; Receive him, Refresh him. Carry that, which the wiseman¹⁴⁰ hath said, Miserere animæ tuæ, bee mercifull to thine owne soule, higher then so; and Miserere saluatoris tui, have mercy upon thine owne Saviour, put on the bowells of mercy, and put them on even towards Christ Jesus himselfe, who needs thy mercy, by beeing so torne, and mangled, and embowelled, by blasphemous oaths, and execrations. For, beloved, it is not so absurd a prayer, as it is conceived, if Luther did say upon his death bed, Oremus pro Domino nostro Jesu Christo, Let us pray for our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. Had we not need pray for him? If he complaine that Saul persecutes him, had we not need pray for him? It is a seditious affection in civill¹⁵⁰ things, to divide the King and the kingdome; to pray, to fight for the one, and leave out the other, is seditiously done. If the kingdome of Christ need thy prayers, and thy assistance, Christ needs it; If the Body need it, the Head needs it; If thou must pray for his Gospell, thou must pray for him; Nay, thou canst not pray for thy selfe, but thou must pray for him, for, thou art his bowells; when thou in thy forefathers, the first Christians in the Primitive Church, wast persecuted, Christ cryed out, why persecutest thou me? Christ made thy case his, because thou wast of his bowells. When Christ is disseised, and dispossessed, his truth profligated, and thrown out of a nation, that¹⁶⁰ professed it before, when Christ is wounded by the blasphemies of others, and crucified by thee, in thy relapses to repented sinnes, wilt thou not say to Them, to Thy selfe, in the behalfe of Christ, why persecute yee me? Wilt thou not make Christs case thine, as hee made thine his? Art not thou the bowells of Christ? If not, (and thou art not, if thou have not this sense of his suffering) thou hast no interest in his death, by thy Baptisme, nor in his Resurrection, by thy feeble halfe repentances. But in the duty of a child, as thou art a servant, in the simplicity of a child, as thou hast sucked from him, in the interest and inheritance of a child, as thou art the Son of his bowells, in all

Venite

Passing thus from the Persons to the action, Venite, Come, we must aske first, what this comming is? The whole mystery of our redemption is expressed by the Apostle in this word, venit, that Christ Jesus is come into the world. All that thou hast to do, is to come to, and to meet him. Where is he? At home; in his own house, in the Church. Which is his house, which is his Church? That to thee, in which he hath given thee thy Baptisme, if that do still afford thee, as much as is necessary for thy salvation. Come thither, to the participation of his

¹⁹⁰ an entertainment, a show, a spectacle, or company, come solemnly, with preparation, with meditation. He shall have the lesse profit, by the prayer of the Congregation, that hath not been at his private prayer before he came. Much of the mystery of our Religion lay in the venturus, that Christ was to come, all that the law and Prophets undertooke for, was that venturus, that Christ was to come; but the consummation of all, the end of the law and the Prophets, is in the venit, he is come. Do not clogge thy coming with future conditions, and contingencies, thou wilt come, if thou canst wake, if thou canst rise, if thou canst be ready, if thou like the company, the weather, the

We finde one man who was brought in his bed to Christ; but it was but one. Come, come actually, come earnestly, come early, come often; and come to meet him, Christ Jesus and no body else. Christ is come into the world; and therefore thou needest not goe out of the world to meet him; He doth not call thee from thy Calling, but in thy Calling. The Dove went up and down, from the Arke, and to the Arke, and yet was not disappointed of her Olive leafe, Thou maiest come to this place at due times, and maiest doe the businesses of the world, in other places too, and still keep thy Olive, thy peace of Conscience. If no Hereticall recusancy, (thou dost like the Doctrine) no schismaticall recusancy, (thou dost like the Discipline) no lasie recusancy, (thou forbearst not because thou canst not sit at thine ease) no proud recusancie, (that the company is not good enough for thee) if none of these detain thee, thou maist be here, even when thou art not here; God may accept thy desire; as, in many cases, thou maist be away, when thou art here; as, in particular thou art, if being here, thou do not hearken to that which is said here; for that is added to the coming, and follows in a third consideration, after the capacity, Children, and the Action, Come, The disposition, Hearken: Come ye children and hearken.

²²⁰ Upon those words of David, Conturbata sunt ossa mea, St. Basil saith well, Habet & anima ossa sua, The soul hath bones as well as the body. And in this Anatomy, and dissection of the soul, as the bones of the soul, are the constant and strong resolutions thereof, and as the seeing of the soul is understanding (The eyes of your understanding being opened) so the Hearing of the soul is hearkning; in these religious exercises, we doe not hear, except we hearken; for hearkning is the hearing of the soul. Some men draw some reasons, out of some stories of some credit, to imprint a belief of extasie, and raptures; That the body remaining upon the floore, or in the bed, the ²³⁰ soul may be gone out to the contemplation of heavenly things. But it were a strange and a perverse extasie, that the body being here, at a religious exercise, and in a religious posture, the soul should be gone out to the contemplation, and pursuit of the pleasures or profits of this world. You come hither but to your own funeralls, if you bring nothing hither but your bodies; you come but to be entered, to be laid in the earth, if the ends of your comming be earthly respects, prayse, and opinion, and observation of men; you come to be Canonized, to grow Saints, if your souls be here, and by grace here alwayes diffused, grow up to a sanctification. Bonus es Domine animæ ²⁴⁰ quærenti te, Thou art good, O Lord, to that soul that seeks thee; It is St. Augustines note, that it is put in the singular, Animæ, to that soul: Though many come, few come to him. may have been all day in the perfume and incense of preaching, and yet have receivd none of the savor of life unto life. Some things an Ape can do as wel as a Man; some things an Hypocrite as wel as a Saint. We cannot see now, whether thy soul be here now, or no; but, to morrow, hereafter, in the course of thy life, they which are near thee, and know whether thy former faults be mended, or no, know ²⁵⁰ whether thy soul use to be at Sermons, as well as thy body uses to go to Sermons. Faith comes by hearing, saith the Apostle; but it is by that hearing of the soul, Hearkening, Considering. And then, as the soul is infused by God, but diffused over the whole body, and so there is a Man, so Faith is infused from God, but diffused into our works, and so there is a Saint. Practise is the Incarnation of Faith, Faith is incorporated and manifested in a body, by works; and the way to both, is that Hearing, which amounts to this Hearkening, to a diligent, to a considerate, to a profitable Hearing. In which, one essentiall circumstance is, that we be not over affectionately transported with an opinion of any one person, but apply our selves to the Ordinance, Come, and hearken unto me, To any whom God sends with the Seale and Character of his Minister, which is our fourth and last branch in your part.

David doth not determine this in his own person, that you should hearken to him, and none but him, but that you should hearken to him in that capacity and qualification, which is common to him with others, as we are sent by God upon that Ministry; that you say to all such, Blessed art thou that comest in the Name of the Lord. St. Augustine, and not he alone, interprets this whole Psalme of Christ, that

²⁷⁰ it is a thanksgiving of Christ to his Father, upon some deliverance received in some of his Agonies, some of his persecutions; and that Christ calleth us to hearken unto him; To him, so, as he is present with us, in the Ministry of his Church. He is a perverse servant, that will receive no commandment, except he have it immediately from his Masters mouth; so is he too, that pretendeth to rest so wholly in the Word of God, the Scriptures, as that he seeks no interpretation, no exposition, no preaching, All is in the Scriptures, but all the Scriptures are not alwaies evident to all understandings. He also is a perverse servant, that wil receive no commandment by any Officer of ²⁸⁰ his Masters, except he like the man, or, if his Master might, in his opinion, have chosen a fitter man, to serve in that place. And such a perversnesse is in those hearers who more respect the man, then the Ministry, and his manner of delivering it, then the message that he delivers. Let a man so account of us, as of the Ministers of Christ, and Stewards of the mysteries of God. That is our Classis, our rank, our station, what names soever we brought into the world by our extraction from this or that family, what name soever we took in our baptisme, and contract between God and us, that name, in which we come to you, is that, The Ministers of Christ, The Stewards of the ²⁹⁰ Mysteries of God, And so let men account of us, says the Apostle. Invention, and Disposition, and Art, and Eloquence, and Expression, and Elocution, and reading, and writing, and printing, are secondary things, accessory things, auxiliary, subsidiary things; men may account us, and make account of us, as of Orators in the pulpit, and of Authors, in the shop; but if they account of us as of Ministers and Stewards, they give us our due; that's our name to you. All the Evangelists mention John Baptist and his preaching; but two of the foure say never a word of his austerity of life, his Locusts, nor his Camels haire; and those two that do, Matthew and Marke, they insist, first, ³⁰⁰ upon his calling, and then upon his actuell preaching, how he pursued that Calling, And then upon the Doctrine that he preached, Repentance, and Sanctification, and after that, they come to these secondary and subsidiary things, which added to his estimation, and assisted the passage of his Doctrine, His good life. Learning, and other good parts, and an exemplar life fall into second places; They have a first place, in their consideration who are to call them, but in you, to whom they are sent, but a second; fixe you, in the first place, upon the Calling. This Calling circumcised Moses uncircumcised lips; This made Jeremy able to speak, though he called himself a ³¹⁰ childe; This is Esays coale from the Altar, which takes away even his sinne, and his iniquity. Be therefore content to passe over some infirmities, and rest your selves upon the Calling. And when you have thus taken the simplicity of Children, (they are the persons, which was our first step) and are come to the Congregation, (that is your Action, and was our second) and have conformed your selves to hearken, (that also is the Disposition here, which was our third) And all this with a reverence to the Calling before an affection to the man, (that is your submission to Gods Ordinance, and was our fourth and last step) you have then built up our first part in your selves, and 320 laid together all those peeces which constitute your Duty, Come ye Children, and hearken unto me; And from hence we passe, to our duty, I will teach you the fear of the Lord.

2 Part
Docebo

In this second part, we made two steps; first, The manner, Docebo, I will teach; And then the Matter, Timorem Domini, I will teach you the feare of the Lord. Upon the first, we will stay no longer, but to confesse, That we are bound to teach, and that this teaching is to preach; And Væ si non, Wo be unto us, if we do not preach. Wo to them, who out of ease, or state, silence themselves; And woe to them too, who by their distemper, and Schismaticall and seditious manner 330 of preaching, occasion and force others to silence them; and think, (and think it out of a profitable, and manifold experience) That as forbidden books sell best, so silenced Ministers thrive best. It is a Duty, Docendum, we must teach, Preach; but a duty that excludes not Catechizing; for catechizing seems especially to be intended here, where he calls upon them who are to be taught, by that name, Children. It is a duty that excludes not Praying; but Praying excludes not it neither. Prayer and Preaching may consist, nay they must meet in the Church of God. Now, he that will teach, must have learnt before, many yeers before; And he that will preach, must have thought of 340 it before, many days before. Extemporall Ministers, that resolve in a day what they will be, Extemporall Preachers, that resolve in a minute, what they will say, out-go Gods Spirit, and make too much hast. It was Christs way; He tooke first Disciples to learne, and then, out of them, he tooke Apostles to teach; and those Apostles made more Disciples. Though your first consideration be upon the Calling, yet our consideration must be for our fitnesse to that Calling. Our Prophet David hath put them both together, well, O God, thou hast taught me from my youth; (you see what was his Vniversity; Moses was his Aristotle; he had studied Divinity from his youth) And hitherto have 350 I declared thy wondrous works, says he there. Hitherto? How long was that? It follows in the next verse, Now am I old, and gray headed, and yet he gave not over. Then Gods work goes well forward, when they whom God hath taught, teach others. He that can say with David, Docuisti me, O God thou hast taught me, may say with him too, Docebo vos, I will teach you. But what? that remains only, I will teach you the fear of the Lord.

There is a fear, which needs no teaching, a fear that is naturally imprinted in us. We need not teach men to bee sad, when a mischiefe is upon them, nor to feare when it is coming towards them; for, fear ³⁶⁰ respects the future, so as sadnesse does the present; fear looks upon Danger, and sadnesse upon Detriment; fear upon a sick friend, and sadnesse upon a dead. And as these need not bee taught us, because they are naturall, so, because they are naturall, they need not be un-taught us, they need not be forbidden, nor dissuaded. Our Saviour Christ had them both, fear, and sadnesse; and that man lacks Christian wisdom, who is without a provident fear of future dangers, and without Christian charity, who is without a compassionate sadnesse in present calamities. Now this fear, though but imprinted in nature, is Timor Domini, The fear of the Lord, because the Lord is the Lord ³⁷⁰ of Nature, He is the Nature of Nature, Lord of all endowments and impressions in Nature. And therefore, though for this naturall feare, you goe no farther then Nature, (for it is born with you, and it lives in you) yet the right use even of this naturall fear, is from Grace, though in the root it be a feare of nature, yet in the government thereof, in the degrees, and practise thereof, it is the feare of the Lord; Not onely as hee is Lord of Nature, (for so, you have the feare it selfe from the Lord) but as this naturall fear produces good or bad effects, as it is regulated and ordered, or as it is deserted, and abandoned, by the Spirit of the Lord; And therefore you are called hither, Come, ³⁸⁰ that you may learne the fear of the Lord, that is, the right use of naturall fear, and naturall affections, from the Law of God; For, as it is a wretched condition, to be without naturall affections, so is it a dangerous dereliction, if our naturall affections be left to themselves, and not regulated, not inanimated by the Spirit of God; for then my sadnesse will sinke into Desperation, and my fear will betray the succours which reason offereth. This I gain by letting in the fear of the Lord, into my naturall fear; that whereas the naturall object of my naturall fear is malum, something that I apprehend sub ratione mali, as it is ill, ill for me, (for, if I did not conceive it to be ill, I would ³⁹⁰ not fear it) yet when I come to thaw this Ice, when I come to discusse this cloud, and attenuate this damp, by the light and heat of

Naturalis*

Sap. 17.12

Grace, and the illustration of the Spirit of God, breathing in his word, I change my object, or at least, I look upon it in another line, in another angle, I look not upon that evill which my naturall fear presented me, of an affliction, or a calamity, but I look upon the glory that God receives by my Christian constancy in that affliction, and I look upon that everlasting blessednes, which I should have lost, if God had not laid that affliction upon me. So that though fear look upon evill, (for affliction is malum pœnæ, evill as it hath the nature ⁴⁰⁰ of punishment) yet when the feare of the Lord is entred into my naturall feare, my feare is more conversant, more exercised upon the contemplation of Good, then Evill, more upon the glory of God, and the joys of heaven, then upon the afflictions of this life, how malignant, how manifold soever. And therefore, that this feare, and all your naturall affections, (which seem weaknesses in man, and are so indeed, if they bee left to themselves, now in our corrupt and depraved estate) may advance your salvation, (which is the end why God hath planted them in you) Come and learn the fear of the Lord, Learn from the Word of God, explicated by his Minister, in his Or-⁴¹⁰ dinance upon occasions leading him thereunto, the limits of this naturall fear, and where it may become sin, if it be not regulated, and inanimated by a better fear, then it self.

*Timor semi-

There is a fear, which grows out of a second nature, Custome, and so is half-naturall, to those men that have it. The custome of the place we live in, or of the times we live in, or of the company we live in. Topical customes of such a place, Chronical customes of such an Age, Personal customes of such a company. The time, or the place, or the persons in power have advanced, and drawn into fashion and reputation, some vices, and such men as depend upon them, are afraid, ⁴²⁰ not to concur with them in their vices; for, amongst persons, and in times, and places, that are vicious, an honest man is a rebel; he goes against that State, and that Government, which is the kingdom of sin. Amongst drunkards, a sober man is a spy upon them; Amongst blasphemers, a prayer is a libell against them; And amongst dissolute and luxurious persons, a chaste man is a Bridewell, his person, his presence is a house of Correction. In vicious times and companies, a good man is unacceptable, and cannot prosper. And, because as amongst Merchants, men trade halfe upon stock, and halfe upon credit, so, in all other courses, because men rise according to the ⁴³⁰ opinion and estimation which persons in power have of them, as well as by reall goodnesse, therefore to build up, or to keep up this opinion and estimation in them upon whom they depend, they are afraid to crosse the vices of the Time, so far, as by being vertuous in their owne particular. They are afraid it will be called a singularity, and a schismaticall and seditious disposition, and taken for a Reproach, and a Rebuke laid upon their bettters, if they be not content to be as ill, as those their bettters are. Now, the fear of the Lord brings the Quo Warranto against all these priviledged sins, and priviledged places, and persons, and overthrows all these Customes, and Prescriptions.

⁴⁴⁰ The fear of the Lord is not a Topicall, not a Chronicall, not a Per-sonall, but a Catholique, a Canonicall, a Circular, an Vniversall fear; It goes through all, and over all; and when this halfe-naturall feare, this feare grown out of Custome, suggests to me, That if I be thus tender-conscienced, if I startle at an Oath, if I be sick at a Health, if I cannot conform my selfe to the vices of my bettters, I shall lose my Master, my Patron, my Benefactor, This feare of the Lord enters, and presents the infallible losse of a farre greater Master, and Patron, and Benefactor, if I comply with the other. And therefore as you were called hither, (that is to the explication of the Word of God) to learn ⁴⁵⁰ how to regulate the naturall fear, that that fear doe not deject you into a diffidence of Gods mercy, so come hither to learne the fear of God, against this half-naturall fear, that is, bee guided by the Word of God, how far you are to serve the turnes of those persons, upon whom ye depend, and when to leave their commandements un-performed.

Well; what will this feare of the Lord teach us? Valour, fortitude; feare teach valour? yes; And nothing but feare; True feare. As Moses his Serpents devoured the false serpents, so doth true fear all false fear.
There is nothing so contrary to God, as false fear; neither in his own ⁴⁶⁰ nature, nor in his love to us. Therefore Gods first Name in the Bible, and the Name which he sticks to, in all the worke of the Creation, is his Name of Power, Elohim; El, is fortis Deus, The God of Power; and it is that Name in the plurall, multiplied power, All Power; And what can he feare? God descends to many other humane affections; you shall read that God was Angry, and sory, and weary; But non

timuit Deus, God was never afraid. Neither would God that man should be. So his first blessing upon man, was to fill the earth, and to subdue the creatures, and to rule over them, and to eat what he would upon the earth; All Acts of Power, and of Confidence. As soon as hee had offended God, the first impotency that he found in himself, was fear: I heard thy voice, and I was afraid, says he. He had heard the voice of Lions, and was not afraid. There is not a greater commination of a curse, then that, They shall be in a great fear, where no fear is; Which is more vehemently expressed in another place, I will set my face against you, and you shall flye, when none pursues you; I will send a faintnesse into their hearts, and the sound of a shaken leafe, shall chase them, as a sword. False feare is a fearfull curse. To feare that all favours, and all preferments, will goe the wrong way, and that therefore I must clap on a byasse, and goe that way too, this inordinate fear is the curse of God. Dauids last counsaile to Solomon, (but reflecting upon us all) was, Be thou strong therefore, and show thy selfe a man. E Culmine corruens, ad gyrum laboris venit, The Devill fell from his place in heaven, and now is put to compasse the earth. The fearfull man that fals from his morall and his Christian constancy, from the fundamentall rules of his religion, fals into labyrinths, of incertitudes, and impertinencies, and ambiguities, and anxieties, and irresolutions. Militia, vita; our whole life is a warfare; God would not chuse Cowards; hee had rather we were valiant in the fighting of his battels; for battels, and exercise of valour, we are sure to have. God sent a Cain into the world before an Abel; An Enemy, before a Champion. Abel non suspicor qui non habet Cain; we never heare of an Abel, but there is a Cain too. And therefore think it not strange, concerning the fiery triall, as though some strange thing happened unto you; Make account that this world is your Scene, your Theater, and that God himself sits to see the combat, the wrestling. Vetuit Deus mortem Job; Job was Gods Champion, and God forbad Satan the taking away of Jobs life; for, if he die, (sayes God in the mouth of that Father) Theatrum nobis non amplius plaudetur, My Theater will ring with no more Plaudites, I shall bee no more glorified in the valour and constancy of my Saints, my Champions. God delights in the constant and valiant man, and therefore a various, a timorous man frustrates, disappoints God.

My errand then is to teach you valour; and must my way be to intimidate you, to teach you feare? yes, still there is no other fortitude, but the fear of the Lord. We told you before, sadnesse and fear differ but in the present, and future. And as for the present, Nihil aliud triste quàm Deum offendere, There is no just cause of sadnesse, but to have sinned against God, (for, sudden sadnesse arising in a good Conscience, is a sparke of fire in the Sea, it must goe out;) so ⁵¹⁰ there is no just cause of fear, but in Gods displeasure. Mens in timore Domini constituta, non invenit extra quod metuat. God is all; and if I be established in him, what thing can I fear, when there is nothing without him? nothing simply, at least nothing that can hurt me; Quæ sunt in mundo non nocent iis qui extra mundum sunt, This world cannot hurt him that made it, nor them that are laid up in him. Jonas did but change his vessell, his ship, when he entred the Whale, he was not shipwrecked, God was his Pilot there, as well as in the ship, and therefore he as confident there. It is meant of Christ, which is spoken in the person of Wisdome, Who so hearkneth unto ⁵²⁰ me, shall dwell safely, and be quiet from the feare of evill. And therefore, when you heare of warres and commotions, be not terrified; these things must come to passe, but the end is not by and by; Imaginations, and tentations, and alienations, and tribulations must come: But this is not the end; the end that God lookes for, is, that by the benefit of his fear we should stand out all these.

So then to teach you the fear of the Lord, is to teach you what it doth, that you may love it, and what it is, that you may know it. That which it doth, is, that it makes you a constant, a confident, a valiant man, That which God, who is alwayes the same, loves. How doth ⁵³⁰ it that? Thus. As he that is falne into the Kings hand for debt to him, is safe from other creditors, so is he, that fears the Lord, from other fears. He that loves the Lord, loves him with all his love; he that fears the Lord, fears him with all his fear too; God takes no half affections. Upon those words, Be not high-minded, but fear, Clement of Alexandria, hath another reading; super-time, over-feare; that is, carry thy fear to the highest place; place thy fear there, where it may be above all other fears. In the multitude of dreams, there are divers vanities, but feare thou the Lord. All fearfull things passe away as dreams, as vanities, to him that fears the Lord; They offer at him, but in vain,

- ⁵⁴⁰ if he be established with that fear. In Christ there was no bone broken; In him that feares the Lord, no constant purpose is ever shaken.
- Job 1.1 Of Job it is said, that he was perfect and upright; That is a rare wonder, but the wonder is qualified in the addition, He feared God. So
- Luke 2.25 are they put together in Simeon, Justus & timoratus, he was a just man; how should he be otherwise? He feared God. Consider your enemies, and be not deceived with an imagination of their power, but see whether they be worthy of your feare, if you feare God. The
- Iohn 16.33 World is your enemy; sed vici mundum, be of good cheare, for I have overcome the world, saith Christ. If it were not so, yet we are none
- 15.19 ⁵⁵⁰ of it; Ye are not of the world, for I have chosen you out of the world. Howsoever, the world would doe us no harm, the world would be good enough of it self, but that the Prince of the world, the Devill, is anima mundi, the soul of this lower world, he inanimates, he actuates, he exalts, the malignity of the world against us; and he is our second enemy. It was not the Apple, but the Serpent that tempted; Eve, no doubt, had looked upon the fruit before, and yet did not long. But even this enemy is not so dangerous, as he is conceived. In the life of St. Basil, we have a story, that the Devil appeared to a penitent sinner at his prayers, and told him, If you will let me alone, I will let
- ⁵⁶⁰ you alone, meddle not with me, and I will not meddle with you; He found that by this good souls prayers to God, God had weakned his power, not onely upon that man that prayed, but upon others too; and therefore he was content, to come to a cessation of armes with him, that he might turn his forces another way. Truly he might say to many of us, in a worse sense, Let me alone, and I will let you alone; tempt not me, and I will not tempt you: Our idlenes, our high diet, our wanton discours, our exposing our selves to occasion of sin, provoke and call in the Devill, when he seeks not us. The Devill possesses the world, and we possesse the Devill. But then, if the fear of
- ⁵⁷⁰ the Lord possesse us, our owne Concupiscencies, (though they be indeed our greatest enemies, because the warre that they maintain is a civill warre) shall doe us no harm, for as the Septuagint in their Translation, diminish the power of the Devill, in that name Myrmecoleon, (a disproportioned Creature, made up of a Lion and an Ant, because as St. Gregory saith upon that place) formicis Leo est, volatilibus formica, The Devill is a Lion to Ants, dasheth whole hills of them with his paw, that creep under him, but he is but an Ant to birds; they prey upon him, that flie above him. If wee feare the Lord, our concupiscencies, our carnall affections, our selves, may prove our ⁵⁸⁰ best friends, because, as the fire in the furnace did not burn the men, but it burnt off those bands, that fettered and manacled them, (for they were loose, and walked in the furnace) so our concupiscencies, if we resist them, shall burn off themselves, and file off their own rust, and our salvation shall be surer by occasion of temptations. We may prevent mortem mortificatione, everlasting death, by a disciplinary life. Mori, ne moriamur, is his rule, too, To die to the fires of lust here, lest wee die in unquenchable fires hereafter; to die daily, (as S. Paul speaks of himself) lest we die at the last day. To end this, this is the working of the fear of the Lord, it devours all other fears; ⁵⁹⁰ God will have no half-affections, God will have no partners; He that fears God fears nothing else.

This then is the operation of the feare of the Lord, this is his working; remains onely to consider what this feare of the Lord is: And, beloved in him, be not afraid of it; for, this fear of God, is the love of God. And, howsoever there may be some amongst us, whom the heighth of birth, or of place, or of spirit hath kept from fear, They never feared any thing, yet, I think, there is none, that never loved any thing. Obligations of Matrimony, or of friendship, or of blood, or of alliance, or of conversation, hath given every one of us, no doubt, ⁶⁰⁰ some sense in our selves, what it is to love, and to enjoy that which we doe love; And the fear of God, is the love of God. The love of the Lord passeth all things, saith the Wise man: The love, what is that to fear? It follows, The fear of the Lord, is the beginning of his love. As they that build Arches, place centers under the Arch, to beare up the work, till it bee dried, and setled, but, after, all is Arch, and there is no more center, no more support; so to lie at the Lords feet a while, delivers us into his arms, to accustome our selves to his fear, establishes us in his love. Be content to stop a little, even at the lowest fear, the fear of hell. When Saul was upon an expedition, and did not ⁶¹⁰ finde himself well followed, he took a yoke of Oxen, and hewed them in pieces, and proclaimed, that whosoever came not to the supply, all his Oxen should be so served; and upon this, (says the Text there) The fear of the Lord fell upon all the people, and they came out, as one man, three hundred and thirty thousand. If Sauls threatning of their worldly goods, wrought so; let Gods threatning of thy selfe, thine inwardest self, thy soul, with hell, make thee to stop even upon thy fear of the Lord, the fear of Torment. Stop upon the second fear too, the fear of privation, and losse of the sight of God in heaven; That when all wee have disputed, with a modest boldnesse, and wondred ⁶²⁰ with a holy wonder, what kinde of sight of God we shall have in heaven, then when thou shouldst come to an end, and to an answer of all these doubts, in an experimentall triall, how he shall be seen, (seen thus) thou shalt see then that thou shalt never see him. After thou hast used to hear, all thy life, blessednesse summed up into that one act, We shall see God, thou shalt never come nearer to that knowledge, thou shalt never see him; fear the Lord therefore in this second fear, fear of privation. And fear him in a third fear, the fear of the losse of his grace here in this world, though thou have it now. S. Chrysostome serves himself and us, with an ordinary comparison, ⁶³⁰ A Tyler is upon the top of the house, but he looks to his footing, he is afraid of falling. A righteous man is in a high place in Gods favour, but hee may lose that place. Who is higher then Adam, higher then the Angels? and whither fell they? Make not thou then thy assurance of standing, out of their arguments, that say it is impossible for the righteous to fall, The sins of the righteous are no sins in the sight of God; but build thy assurance upon the testimony of a good conscience, that thou usest all diligence, and holy industry, that thou maist continue in Gods favour, and fearest to lose it; for, hee that hath no fear of losing, hath no care of keeping. Accustome thy self to these fears, ⁶⁴⁰ and these fears will flow into a love. As love, and jealousie may bee the same thing, so the feare and love of God will be all one; for, jealousie is but a fear of losing. Brevissima differentia Testamentorum, Timor & Amor; This distinguishes the two Testaments, The Old is a Testament of fear, the New of love; yet in this they grow all one, That we determine the Old Testament, in the New, and that we prove the New Testament by the Old; for, but by the Old, we should not know, that there was to bee a New, nor, but for the New, that there was an Old; so the two Testaments grow one Bible; so in these two Affections, if there were not a jealousie, a fear of losing God, we

him. Place the affection, (by what name soever) upon the right object, God, and I have, in some measure, done that which this Text directed, (Taught you the fear of the Lord) if I send you away in either disposition, Timorous, or amorous; possessed with either, the fear, or the love of God; for, this fear is inchoative love, and this love is consummative fear; The love of God begins in fear, and the fear of God ends in love; and that love can never end, for God is love.

In which words, these shall be the three things, that we will consider now; first, The generall impotency of man, in spirituall duties, Nemo potest, no man can do this, no man can doe any thing; secondly, How, and what those spirituall duties are expressed to be, It is a profession of Jesus to be the Lord, to say it, to declare it; And thirdly, the meanes of repairing this naturall impotency, and rectify-⁴⁰ ing this naturall obliquity in man, That man by the Holy Ghost may be enabled to do this spirituall duty, to professe sincerely Jesus to be the Lord. In the first we shall see first, the universality of this flood, the generality of our losse in Adam, Nemo, none, not one, hath any, any power; which notes their blasphemy, that exempt any person from the infection of sin: And secondly, we shall see the impotency, the infirmity where it lies, It is in homine, no man; which notes their blasphemy, that say, Man may be saved by his naturall faculties, as he is man: And thirdly, by just occasion of that word, Potest, he can, he is able, we shall see also the lazinesse of man, which, though he ⁵⁰ can doe nothing effectually and primarily, yet he does not so much as he might doe; And in those three, we shall determine our first part. In the second, what this spirituall duty, wherein we are all so impotent, is, It is first, an outward act, a profession; not that an outward act is enough, but that the inward affection alone is not enough neither; To thinke it, to beleieve it, is not enough, but we must say it, professe it: And what? why, first, That Jesus is; not only assent to the history, and matter of fact, that Jesus was, and did all that is reported, and recorded of him, but that he is still that which he pretended to be; Cæsar is not Cæsar still, nor Alexander, Alexander; But ⁶⁰ Jesus is Jesus still, and shall be for ever. This we must professe, That he is; And then, That he is the Lord; He was not sent hither as the greatest of the Prophets, nor as the greatest of the Priests; His worke consists not only in having preached to us, and instructed us, nor in having sacrificed himselfe, thereby to be an example to us, to walk in those wayes after him; but he is Lord, he purchased a Dominion, he bought us with his Blood, He is Lord; And lastly, he is The Lord, not only the Lord Paramount, the highest Lord, but The Lord, the only Lord, no other hath a Lordship in our soules, no other hath any part in the saving of them, but he: And so far we must necessarily enlarge⁷⁰ our second consideration. And in the third part, which is, That this cannot be done but by the holy Ghost, we shall see, that in that But, is first implied an exclusion of all means but one; And therefore that one must necessarily be hard to be compassed, The knowledge and discerning of the holy Ghost, is a difficult thing; And yet, as this But hath an exclusion of all meanes but one, so it hath an inclusion, an admission, an allowance of that one, It is a necessary duty; nothing can effect it, but the having of the holy Ghost, and therefore the holy Ghost may be had: And in those two points, The hardnesse of it, And the possibility of it, will our last consideration be employed.

I. Part⁸⁰ For the first branch of the first part, The generality, that reaches to us all, and to us all over; to all our persons, and to all our faculties; Perdidimus per peccatum, bonum possibilitatis, sayes S. Augustine, We have lost our possession, and our possibility of recovering, by Adams sin. Adam at his best had but a possibility of standing; we are fallen from that, and from all possibility of rising by any power derived from him: We have not only by this fall broke our armes, or our legs, but our necks; not our selves, not any other man can raise us; Every thing hath in it, as Physitians use to call it, Naturale Balsamum, A naturall Balsamum, which, if any wound or hurt which that creature⁹⁰ hath received, be kept clean from extrinsique putrefaction, will heale of it self. We are so far from that naturall Balsamum, as that we have a naturall poyson in us, Originall sin: for that, originall sin, (as it hath relation to God, as all sin is a violating of God) God being the God of mercy, and the God of life, because it deprives us of both those, of mercy, and of life, in opposition to mercy, it is called anger and wrath (We are all by nature the children of wrath) And in opposition to life, it is called death, Death enters by sin, and death is gone over all men; And as originall sin hath relation to our souls, It is called that indeleble foulnesse, and uncleannesse which God discovers in us all, (Though ¹⁰⁰ thou wash thee with nitre, and take thee much sope, yet thine iniquity is marked before me, saith the Lord) And which every man findes in himself, as Iob did, If I wash my self in Snow-water, and purge my hands never so cleane, yet mine own clothes shall make me filthy. As it hath relation to our bodies, so it is not only called Lex carnis, A law which the flesh cannot disobey, And Lex in membris, A law written and imprinted naturally in our bodies, and inseparably inherent there, but it is a law that hath got Posse comitatus, All our strength, and munition into her own hands, all our powers, and faculties to execute her purposes against us, and (as the Apostle expresses it fully) Hath ¹¹⁰ force in our members, to bring forth fruits unto death.

Jer. 2.22

Job 9.[30]

Rom. 7.5

Consider our originall weaknesse, as God lookes upon it, so it is inexcusable sin; consider it, as our soules suffer by it, so it is an indeleble foulnesse; consider it as our bodies contribute to it, and harbour it, and retain it, and so it is an unquenchable fire, and a brand of hell it self; It hath banished me out of my self, It is no more I that do any thing, but sin that dwelleth in me: It doth not only dwell, but reign in these mortall bodies; not only reign, but tyrannize, and lead us captives under the law of sin, which is in our members. So that we have utterly lost Bonum possibilitatis, for as men, we are out of all ¹²⁰ possibility, not only of that victorious, and triumphant gratulation and acclamation to our selves, as for a delivery, I thank God through Iesus Christ, but we cannot come to that sense of our misery, as to cry out in the Apostles words, immediately preceding, O wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from the body of this death?

Ver. 23

Ver. ult.

Now as this death hath invaded every part and faculty of man, understanding, and will, and all, (for though originall sin seem to be contracted without our will, yet Sicut omnium natura, ita omnium voluntates fuere originaliter in Adam, sayes S. Augustine, As the whole nature of mankinde, and so of every particular man, was in ¹³⁰ Adam, so also were the faculties, and so the will of every particular man in him) so this death hath invaded every particular man; Death went over all men, for as much as all men had sinned. And therefore they that do blasphemously exempt some persons from sin, they set them not above the Law, but without the Law: They out-law them, in taking from them the benefit of the new Law, the Gospel, and of the author of that Law, Christ Jesus, who came a Physitian to the sick, and was sent only to save sinners; for them that are none, it is well that they need no Redeemer, for if they did, they could have no part in ours, for he came only to redeem sinners, and they are none. God¹⁴⁰ brought his Son out of Ægypt, not out of Goshen in Ægypt; not out of a privileged place in Ægypt, but out of Ægypt; God brought his Son Christ Jesus out of the Virgin Mary without sin, but he brought not her so, out of her mother. If they might be beleaved that the blessed Virgin, and Iohn Baptist, and the Prophet Ieremy were without all sin, they would goe about at last to make us beleieve, that Ignatius were so too. For us, in the highest of our sanctification, still let us presse with that, Dimitte nobis debita nostra, O Lord forgive us our trespasses, and confesse that we needed forgiveness, even for the sins which we have not done; *Dimissa fateor, & quæ mea sponte*¹⁵⁰ feci, & quæ te duce, non feci, sayes S. Augustine, I confesse I need thy mercy, both for the sins which I have done, and for those, which if thy grace had not restrained me, I should have done. And therefore if another think he hath scaped those sins that I have committed, Non me derideat ab eo medico ægrum sanari, à quo ei præstitum ne ægrotaret; Let him not despise me, who am recovered, since it is the same physitian who hath wrought upon us both, though by a diverse method, for he hath preserved him, and he hath recovered me: for, for himselfe, we say still with the same Father, Perdiderat bonum possibilitatis, As well he as I, had lost all possibility of standing, or rising¹⁶⁰ after our fall.

August.

potest*

This was our first branch, The universall impotency; And our second is, That this is In homine, In man, no man (as man) can make this profession, That Iesus is the Lord: and therefore, we consider first, wherein, and how far man is disabled. In every Age, some men have attributed to the power of nature, more then a naturall man can doe, and yet no man doth so much as a naturall man might doe. For the over-valuing of nature, and her power, there are impressions in the Fathers themselves, which (whether mis-understood by the Readers, or by the Authors) have led and prevailed much. When *Iustin*¹⁷⁰ Martyr sayes, Ratio pro fide Græcis & Barbaris, That rectified reason did the same office in the Gentiles, as faith did in the Christians; when Clement sayes, Philosophia per sese justificavit Græcos, That the Gentiles to whom the Law and Gospell was not communicated, were justified by their Philosophy; when Chrysostome sayes, Satis fuit Gentibus abstinuisse ab Idololatria, It was sufficient for the Gentiles, if they did not worship false gods, though they understood not the true; when S. Augustine sayes, Rectè facis, nihil quærere ampliùs, quàm quod docet ratio, He doth well that seeks no farther, then his reason leads them, these impressions in the Fathers have transported ¹⁸⁰ later men farther; so far, as that Andradius in the Romane Church, saves all honest Philosophers, that lived morally well without Christ: And Tostatus takes all impediments out of their way, That originall sin is absolutely remitted to them, In prima bona operatione in charitate, In their first good morall work that they do. So that they are in an easier way then we, who are but Christians; for in the opinion of Tostatus himselfe, and that whole Church, we cannot be delivered from originall sin, but by baptisme; nothing lesse then a Sacrament would deliver us from originall sin, and any good worke shall deliver any of the Gentiles so disposed.

¹⁹⁰ In all ages, in all Churches, there have been men, who have been Ingrati gratiæ, as S. Augustine calls them, that have been unthankfull to the grace of God, and attributed that to nature, which belonged to grace. But we have an universall conclusion, God hath made of one blood all mankinde, And no man can adopt himselfe into the family of God; man is excluded, and all power in man, and all assistance from man; neither your owne reason, nor the reason of your Masters, whom you relie upon, can raise you to this knowledge: for Ægyptus homo, non Deus, The Egyptians are men, and not Gods, and their horses are flesh, and not spirit; and when the Lord shall stretch out his hand, ²⁰⁰ the helper shall fall, and he that is holpen shall fall, and they shall fall together. The Atheist and all his Philosophy, Helper and hee that is Holpen, Horse and Man, Nature and Art, Reason mounted and advanced upon Learning, shall never be able to leap over, or breake thorough this wall, No man, no naturall man can doe any thing towards a supernaturall work.

This was our second Branch, That too much is ordinarily attributed by man to man, And our third is, That too little is done by any man, and that is worse then the other. When Nebuchadnezzar had made his Image of gold of sixtie Cubits, it had been a madnesse in him, not

Act. 17.26

Quid homo facit

²¹⁰ to have celebrated the Dedication thereof, with all the pomp, and solemnity that he did: To have gone so farre, and not to have made it serve his farther uses, had been a strange impertinence. So is it a strange contemplation, to see a man set up a golden Image, to attribute even Divinity to our nature, and to imagine it to be able to doe, whatsoever the grace of God can doe, and yet with this Angelicall nature, with this celestially soule, to contribute lesse to the glory of God, then an Ant, or a plant, or a stone. As the counsell of the Philosopher Epictetus directs thee, if thou take any new action in hand, consider what Socrates would doe in that case; that is, dispose thy selfe therein,

²²⁰ according to the example, and precedent of some wise man: So if thou wilt take this new action in hand, (that which is new, but should be ordinary unto thee) if thou wilt take a view of thy sins that are past, doe but consider, if ever thou didst any sin, which Socrates, or Seneca would not have forborne. And whatsoever thou seest another can doe, by the power of that reason, and that perswasion which thou art able to minister, who are not able to infuse faith, nor inspire grace into him, but must work by thy reason, and upon his reason, why shouldst not thou be as powerfull upon thy selfe, and as strong in thine owne behalfe, and obey that counsell from thy selfe, which thou ²³⁰ thinkest another man mad, if he doe not obey, when thou givest it? Why shouldst thou pretend Reason, why another should forbear any particular sin, and not present that Reason to thy selfe, or not obey it? To love the Scriptures of God better then any other booke; to love the house of God better then any other Court; to love the Communion of Saints better then any other Conversation; to study to know the revealed will of God, rather then the secrets of any Princes; to consider the direct purposes of God against his enemies, rather then the sinister supplantations of pretenders to places in Court; briefly to Reade, to Heare, to Beleeve the Bible, is a worke within the ability of ²⁴⁰ nature, within the power of a morall man.

He that attributes more to nature, he that allowes her any ability of disposing her selfe before hand, without prevention of grace, or concurrence and co-operation after, without continuall assistance of particular graces, he sets up an Idoll, and magnifies nature beyond that which appertaines unto her. But he that goes not so farre as this, That the reason of man, and his naturall faculties, are the Instruments and

Organs that God works in by his grace, howsoever he may in discourse and in argument exalt nature, howsoever he may so give too much to her, yet he does not so much with her, as he might doe: He hath ²⁵⁰ made her a Giant, and then, as though he were afraid of her, hee runs away from her: He will not doe that which is in his power, and yet he thinks it is in his power to repent when he lists, and when he lists to apply the merits of Christ to himselfe, and to doe all those duties which are implied in our next Part, To say that Iesus is the Lord.

In this, our first duty is an outward act, Dicere, to professe Christ Iesus. Non erubesco, sayes S. Paul, I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ Iesus, for it is the power of God unto salvation: And, Qui erubuerit, sayes Christ, Whosoever shall be ashamed of me, and of my word, of him shall the Son of Man be ashamed, when he shall come in ²⁶⁰ glory. This is a necessary duty, but is it the duty of this place? for here it is not non vult, but non potest; not that he is loath to professe Iesus, but that he is not able to doe it. We see that some could say that, and say it aloud, preach it, and yet without the Holy Ghost; Some (sayes the Apostle) preach Christ through envy and strife, supposing to adde more afflictions unto my bands. Which may well be, that some Jews and Gentiles, to exasperate the State against Paul, fained themselves also to be converted to his religion, because when they had made him odious by drawing off others, they who pretended to have been drawn by him, could alwayes save themselves with recanting, and renouncing ²⁷⁰ their new profession: So they could say Dominum Iesum, That Iesus was the Lord, and never meane it. And of those twelve whom Christ chose to preach, Iudas was one, of whom Christ sayes, Have I not chosen you twelve, and one of you is a devill? So that this devill Iudas, and that devill that made him a devill, the devill himself, could say as much as this, Iesus I know, and Paul I know; They said it, they cryed it, Thou art the Christ, the Son of God, and that incessantly, Till Iesus rebuked them, and suffered them not to say, That they knew him to be The Christ.

But besides that, even this confessing of Christ, is not Sine omni ²⁸⁰ impulsu Spiritus sancti, Altogether without any motion of the holy Ghost (for the holy Ghost, even in these cases, had a purpose to draw testimonies for Christ, out of the mouthes of his adversaries) this is not the professing required here; When Tiberius had a purpose to canonize Christ Jesus, and to admit him into the number of the Romane Gods, and to make him beholden to him for that honour, he therefore proposed it to the Senate, that so that honour, which Jesus should have, might bee derived from him, And when the Senate had an inclination of themselves to have done Christ that honour, but yet forbore it, because the intimation came not from themselves, but ²⁹⁰ from the Emperour, who still wrought and gained upon their privileges, neither of these, though they meant collaterally and obliquely to doe Christ an honour, neither of them did say Iesum Dominum, that is, professe Jesus, so as is intended here, for they had their owne ends, and their own honors principally in Contemplation.

There is first an open profession of the tongue required; And therefore the Holy Ghost descended in fiery tongues, Et lingua propria Spiritui Sancto, sayes S. Gregory, The tongue is the fittest Instrument for the Holy Ghost to worke upon, and to worke by, Qui magnam habet cognationem cum Verbo, sayes he, The Son of God is the Word, ³⁰⁰ and the Holy Ghost proceeds from him, And because that faith that unites us to God, is expressed in the tongue, howsoever the heart be the center in which the Holy Ghost rests, the tongue is the Spheare, in which he moves: And therefore, sayes S. Cyril, as God set the Cherubim with a fiery sword, to keep us out of Paradise, so he hath set the Holy Ghost in fiery tongues to let us in againe. As long as Iohn Baptist was unborne, Zachary was dumbe; when hee was borne, Zachary spoke; Christ is not borne in us, we are not regenerate in him, if we delight not to speake of his wondrous mercyes, and infinite goodnesse to the sons of men; as soone as he is borne in us, his Spirit ³¹⁰ speakes in us, and by us; in which, our first profession is Iesum esse, That Jesus is, That there is a Jesus.

Iesus
 Esay 4.2

This is to professe with Esay, That he is Germen Iehovæ, The Bud of the Lord, The Blossome of God himselfe; for this Profession is a two-edged sword; for it wounds the Ariens on one side, That Jesus is Jehovah, (because that is the name that signifies the very essence of God) And then it wounds the Jews on the other side, because if Jesus be Germen Iehovæ, The Bud, the Blossome, the Off-spring of God, then there is a plurality of Persons, Father and Son in the God-head. So that it is a Compendiary and Summary Abridgement, and Cate-

sion of his everlasting Essence, that is, his God-head. It hath been denied that he was such as he was pretended to be, that is, borne of a Virgin; for the first Heretiques of all, Cerinthus, and Ebion, who occasioned S. Iohns Gospel, affirmed him to be a meere man, made by ordinary generation, between Ioseph and Mary. It hath been denied, that he was such a man, as those Heretiques allowed him to bee, for Apelles his Heresie was, That he made himselfe a Body out of the Elements, as hee came downe from Heaven, through them. It hath been denied, that he had any Body at all; Cerdon and Marcion said, ³³⁰ That he lived and dyed, but in Phantasmate, in apparance, and onely in a forme and shape of a Body assumed; but, in truth, no Body, that did live or dye, but did onely appeare, and vanish. It hath beene denied that that Body which hee had, though a true and a naturall Body did suffer, for Basilides said, That when he was led to Execution, and that on the way, the Crosse was laid upon Simon of Cyren, Christ cast a mist before their eyes, by which they tooke Simon for him, and crucified Simon, Christ having withdrawne himselfe invisibly from them, as at other times he had done. It hath been denied, (though ³⁴⁰ he had a true Body, and suffered truly therein) that he hath any Body now in Heaven, or shall returne with any, for hee that said hee made his Body of the Elements as hee came downe from Heaven, sayes also that hee resolved that Body into those Elements againe, at his returne. It hath beene denied, That hee was, That he is, That he shall be; but this Profession, that Jesus is, includes all, for, He of whom that is alwayes true, Est, He is, He is Eternall, and He that is Eternall, is God: This is therefore a Profession of the God-head of Christ Jesus.

Now, in the next, as we professe him to be Dominus, A Lord, we professe him to be God and man, we behold him as he is a mixt person, and so made fit to be the Messias, the Anointed high Priest, King of ³⁵⁰ that Church, which he hath purchased with his blood, And the anointed King of that Kingdome which he hath conquered with his Crosse. As he is Germen Iehovæ, The off-spring of Jehovah, so he must necessarily be Jehovah; and that is the name, which is evermore translated The Lord; So also as he is Jehovah, which is the fountaine of all Essence and of all Beeing, so he is Lord, by his interest, and his concurrence, in our Creation; It is a devoute exercise of the soule, to consider, how absolute a Lord he is, by this Title of Creation; If the

King give a man a Creation by a new Title, the King found before in that man, some vertuous and fit disposition, some preparation, some ³⁶⁰ object, some subject of his favour. The King gives Creations to men, whom the Universities, or other Societies had prepared; They Created persons whom other lower Schooles had prepared; At lowest, he that deales upon him first, finds a man, begotten and prepared by Parents, upon whom he may worke. But remember thy Creator, that called thee, when thou wast not, as though thou hadst beene, and brought thee out of nothing; which is a condition (if we may call it a condition, to be nothing, not to be) farther removed from Heaven, then hell it selfe: Who is the Lord of life, and breathed this life into thee, and swears by that eternall life, which he is, that he would have this life [Ezek. ³⁷⁰ of thine immortall, As I live, saith the Lord, I would not the death 33.11] of a sinner.

This Contemplation of Jesus, as a Lord, by Creating us, is a devout, and an humble Contemplation; but to contemplate him as Lord by Redeeming us, and breeding us in a Church, where that Redemption is applied to us, this is a devout, and a glorious Contemplation. As he is Lord over that which his Father gave him, (his Father gave him all power in Heaven and in earth, and Omne Iudicium, His Father put all Judgement into his hands, all judiciary and all military power was his; He was Lord Judge, and Lord of Hosts) As he is Lord over Acts 20.28 ³⁸⁰ his owne purchase, Quod acquisiuit sanguine, That Church which he purchased with his owne blood: So he is more then the Heretiques of our time have made him, That he was but sent as a principall Prophet to explaine the Law, and make that cleare to us in a Gospel; Or as a Priest, to sacrifice himselfe, but not for a Ransome, not for a Satisfaction, but onely for a lively example, thereby to incline us to suffer for Gods glory, and for the edification of one another. If we call him Dominum, A Lord, we call him Messiam, Vnctum, Regem, anointed with the oyle of gladnesse by the Holy Ghost, to bee a cheerefull conquerour of the world, and the grave, and sin, and hell, and anointed in ³⁹⁰ his owne blood, to be a Lord in the administration of that Church, which he hath so purchased. This is to say that Jesus is a Lord; To professe that he is a person so qualified, in his being composed of God and Man, that he was able to give sufficient for the whole world, and did give it, and so is Lord of it.

Dominus.
The Lord

When we say Iesus est, That Jesus is, There we confesse his eternity, and therein, his Godhead: when we say Iesus Dominus, that he is a Lord, therein we confesse a dominion which he hath purchased; And when we say Iesum Dominum, so, as that we professe him to be the Lord, Then we confesse a vigilancy, a superintendency, a residence, and a permanency of Christ, in his Dominion, in his Church, to the worlds end. If he be the Lord, in his Church, there is no other that rules with him, there is no other that rules for him. The temporall Magistrate is not so Lord, as that Christ and he are Collegues, or fellow-Consuls, that if he command against Christ, he should be as soone obeyed as Christ; for a Magistrate is a Lord, and Christ is the Lord, a Magistrate is a Lord to us, but Christ is the Lord to him, and to us, and to all, None rules with him, none rules for him; Christ needs no Vicar, he is no non-resident; He is nearer to all particular Churches at Gods right hand, then the Bishop of Rome, at his left. Direct lines, and direct beames doe alwaies warme better, and produce their effects more powerfully, then oblique beames doe; The influence of Christ Jesus directly from Heaven upon the Church, hath a truer operation, then the oblique and collaterall reflections from Rome: Christ is not so far off, by being above the Clouds, as the Bishop of Rome is, by being beyond the Hills. Dicimus Dominum Iesum, we say that Jesus is the Lord, and we refuse all power upon earth, that will be Lord with him, as though he needed a Coadjutor, or Lord for him, as though he were absent from us.

To conclude this second part, To say that Iesus is the Lord, is to confesse him to bee God from everlasting, and to have beene made man in the fulnesse of time, and to governe still that Church, which he hath purchased with his blood, and that therefore hee lookes that we direct all our particular actions to his glory. For this voice, wherein thou saiest Dominus Iesus, The Lord Iesus, must be, as the voyce of the Seraphim in Esay, thrice repeated, Sanctus, sanctus, sanctus, Holy, holy, holy; our hearts must say it, and our tongue, and our hands too, or else we have not said it. For when a man will make Jesus his companion, and be sometimes with him, and sometimes with the world, and not direct all things principally towards him; when he will make Jesus his servant, that is, proceed in all things, upon the strength of his outward profession, upon the colour, and pretence, and advantage of Religion, and devotion, would this man be thought to have said Iesum Dominum, That Iesus is the Lord? Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and doe not the things I speake to you? saies Christ; Christ places a tongue in the hands; Actions speake; and Omni tuba clarior per opera Demonstratio, sayes S. Chrysostome, There is not onely a tongue, but a Trumpet, in every good worke. When Christ sees a disposition in his hearers, to doe according unto their professing, then only he gives allowance to that that they say, Dicitis me Dominum, & bene dicitis,

⁴⁴⁰ You call me Lord, and you doe well in doing so, doe ye therefore, as I have done to you. To call him Lord, is to contemplate his Kingdome of power, to feele his Kingdome of grace, to wish his Kingdome of glory. It is not a Domine usque quò, Lord how long before the Consummation come, as though we were weary of our warfare: It [is] not a Domine si fuisses, Lord if thou hadst beene here, our brother had not died, as Martha said of Lazarus, as though, as soon as we suffer any worldly calamity, we should thinke Christ to be absent from us, in his power, or in his care of us; It is not a Domine vis mandemus, Lord wilt thou that we command fire from Heaven to consume these

Iohn 11.21

Luke 9.54

⁴⁵⁰ Samaritans, as though we would serve the Lord no longer, then he would revenge his owne and our quarrel; for, (that we may come to our last part) to that fiery question of the Apostles, Christ answered, You know not of what spirit you are; It is not the Spirit of God, it is not the Holy Ghost, which makes you call Iesus the Lord onely to serve your own ends, and purposes; and No man can say, that Iesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost.

3 Part
Difficultas

For this Part, we proposed onely two Considerations, first that this But, excluding all meanes but one, that one must therefore necessarily be difficult, and secondly that that But, admitting one meanes, that one ⁴⁶⁰ must therefore necessarily be possible; so that there is a difficulty, but yet a possibility in having this working by the Holy Ghost. For the first, of those hereticall words of Faustus the Manichæan, That in the Trinity, the Father dwelt In illa luce inaccessibili, In that light which none can attaine to, And the Son of God dwelt in this created light, whose fountaine and roote is the Planet of the Sun, And the Holy Ghost dwelt in the Aire, and other parts illumined by the Sun, we may make this good use, that for the knowledge of the Holy Ghost, wee have not so present, so evident light in reason, as for the knowledge of the other blessed Persons of the glorious Trinity. For, for the Son, ⁴⁷⁰ because he assumed our nature, and lived and dyed with us, we conceive certaine bodily impressions, and notions of him; and then naturally, and necessarily, as soon as we heare of a Son, we conceive a Father too. But the knowledge of the Holy Ghost is not so evident, neither doe we bend our thoughts upon the consideration of the Holy Ghost, so much as we ought to doe. The Arians enwrapped him in double clouds of darknesse, when they called him Creaturam Creaturæ; That Christ himselfe, from whom (say they) the Holy Ghost had his Creation, was but a Creature, and not God, and so the Holy Ghost, the Creature of a Creature. And Maximus ille Gigas, (as Saint ⁴⁸⁰ Bernard calls Plato) That Giant in all kinde of Learning, Plato, never stopped at any knowledge, till he came to consider the holy Ghost: Vnum inveni, quod cuncta operatur, I have (saies Plato) found One, who made all things; Et unum per quod cuncta efficiuntur, And I have found another, by whom all things were made; Tertium autem non potui invenire, A Third, besides those two, I could never finde.

Though all the mysteries of the Trinity be things equally easie to faith, when God infuses that, yet to our reason, (even as reason serves faith, and presents things to that) things are not so equall, but that S. Basil himselfe saw, that the eternall generation of the Son, was too ⁴⁹⁰ hard for Reason; but yet it is in the proceeding of the Holy Ghost, that he clearely professes his ignorance: Si cuncta putarem nostra cogitatione posse comprehendere, vereretur fortè ignorantiam profiteri, If I thought that all things might bee knowne by man, I should bee as much afraid, and ashamed, as another man, to be ignorant; but, saies he, since we all see, that there are many things whereof we are ignorant, Cur non de Spiritu sancto, absque rubore, ignorantiam faterer? Why should I be ashamed to confesse mine ignorance in many things concerning the Holy Ghost?

There is then a difficulty, no lesse then an impossibility, in searching ⁵⁰⁰ after the Holy Ghost, but it is in those things which appertain not to us; But in others, there is a possibility, a facility and easinesse. For, there are two processions of the holy Ghost, Æterna, and Temporaria, his proceeding from the Father, and the Son, and his proceeding into us. The first we shall never understand, if we reade all the books of the world, The other we shall not choose but understand, if we study our own consciences. In the first, the darknesse, and difficulty is recompenced in this, That though it be hard to finde any thing, yet it is but little that we are to seek; It is only to finde that there is a holy Ghost, proceeding from Father, and Son; for in searching farther, ⁵¹⁰ the danger is noted by S. Basil, to be thus great, Qui quomodo interrogas, & ubi ut in loco, & quando ut in tempore, interrogabis; If thou give thy curiosity the liberty to ask How the holy Ghost proceeded, thou wilt ask where it was done, as though there were severall roomes, and distinct places, in that which is infinite, And thou wilt ask when it was done, as though there were pieces of time, in that which is eternall: Et quæres, non ut fidem, sed ut infidelitatem invenias, (which is excellently added by that Father) The end of thy enquiring will not be, that thou mightest finde any thing to establish thy believe, but to finde something that might excuse thine unbelieve; All ⁵²⁰ thy curious questions are not in hope that thou shalt receive satisfaction, but in hope that the weaknesse of the answer may justifie thy infidelity.

Thus it is, if we will be over curious in the first, the eternall proceeding of the Holy Ghost. In the other, the proceeding of the holy Ghost into us, we are to consider, that as in our naturall persons, the body and soul do not make a perfect man, except they be united, except our spirits (which are the active part of the blood) do fit this body, and soule for one anothers working; So, though the body of our religion may seem to be determined in these two, our Creation, which is commonly attributed to the Father, Tanquam fonti Deitatis, As the fountaine of the Godhead, (for Christ is God of God) And ⁵³⁰ our Redemption, which belongs to the Son, yet for this body there is a spirit, that is, the holy Ghost, that takes this man, upon whom the Father hath wrought by Creation, and the Son included within his Redemption, and he works in him a Vocation, a Justification, and a sanctification, and leads him from that Esse, which the Father gave him in the Creation, And that Bene esse which he hath in being admitted into the body of his Son, the visible Church, and Congregation, to an Optimè esse, to that perfection, which is an assurance of the inhabitation of this Spirit in him, and an inchoation of eternall blessednesse here, by a heavenly and sanctified conversation, without ⁵⁴⁰ which Spirit No man can say, that Iesus is the Lord, because he is not otherwise in a perfect obedience to him, if he embrace not the means ordained by him in his Church.

So that this Spirit disposes, and dispenses, distributes, and disperses, and orders all the power of the Father, and all the wisdom of the Son, and all the graces of God. It is a Center to all; So S. Bernard says upon those words of the Apostle, We approve our selves as the Ministers of God; But by what? By watching, by fasting, by suffering, by the holy Ghost, by love unfained. Vide, tanquam omnia ordi-

[2 Cor. 6.4]

⁵⁵⁰ constituit Spiritum Sanctum: As the heart is in the midst of the body, so between these vertues of fasting and suffering before, and love unfained after, the Apostle places the holy Ghost, who only gives life and soule to all Morall, and all Theologicall vertues. And as S. Bernard observes that in particular men, so doth S. Augustine of the whole Church; Quod in corpore nostro anima, id in corpore Christi, Ecclesia, Spiritus Sanctus; That office which the soule performes to our body, the holy Ghost performes in the body of Christ, which is the Church.

And therefore since the holy Ghost is thus necessary, and thus neare, ⁵⁶⁰ as at the Creation the whole Trinity was intimated in that plurall word, Elohim, creavit Dii, but no person of the Trinity is distinctly named in the Creation, but the holy Ghost, The Spirit of God moved upon the waters, As the holy Ghost was first conveyed to our knowledge in the Creation, so in our Regeneration, by which we are new creatures, though our Creation, and our Redemption be religious subjects of our continuall meditation, yet let us be sure to hold this that is nearest us, to keep a neare, a familiar, and daily acquaintance, and conversation with the holy Ghost, and to be watchfull to cherish his light, and working in us. Homines docent quærere, solus ipse, qui ⁵⁷⁰ docet invenire, habere, frui; Men can teach us wayes how to finde some things; The Pilot how to finde a Lande, The Astronomer how to finde a Star; Men can teach us wayes how to finde God, The naturall man in the book of creatures, The Morall man in an exemplar life, The Jew in the Law, The Christian in generall in the Gospell, But Solus ipse, qui docet invenire, habere, frui, Only the holy Ghost enables us to finde God so, as to make him ours, and to enjoy him. First you must get more light then nature gives, for, The naturall man per-

ceiveth not the things of the Spirit: When that light is so mended, that you have some sparkes of faith, you must also leave the works of the flesh, For, Fleshly men have not the Spirit: When the Spirit offers it self in approaches, Resist it not, as Stephen accuses them to have done, Act. 7. When it hath prevailed, and sealed you to God, Grieve not the holy Spirit, by whom ye are sealed unto Redemption. For this preventing the Spirit, by trusting to nature, and morality, this infecting the Spirit, by living ill in a good profession, this grieving of the Spirit, by neglecting his operations, induces the last desperate work of Quenching the Spirit, which is a smothering, a suffocating of that light, by a finall obduration.

Spiritus ubi vult spirat, sayes our Saviour Christ; which S. Augustine, (and indeed most of the Fathers) interpret of the holy Ghost, and not of the winde, though it may also properly enough admit that interpretation too. But The holy Ghost, sayes he, breathes where it pleases him; Et vocem ejus audis, sayes Christ, You heare the voice of the holy Ghost; for, (sayes S. Augustine upon those words of Christ) Sonat psalmus, vox est Spiritus sancti, When you heare a Psalme sung, you heare the voice of the holy Ghost; Sonat Euangelium, sonat sermo Divinus, You heare the Gospell read, you heare a Sermon preached, still you heare the voice of the holy Ghost; And yet, as Christ sayes in that place, Nescis unde venit, Thou knowest not from whence that voice comes, Thou canst finde nothing in thy self, why the holy Ghost should delight to entertain thee, and hold discourse with thee, in so familiar, and so frequent, and so importunate a speaking to thee; Nescis unde venit, Thou knowest not from whence all this goodnesse comes, but meerly from his goodness; So also, as Christ adds there, Nescis quò vadat, Thou knowest not whither it goes, how long it will last and goe with thee. If thou carry him to darke and foule corners, if thou carry him back to those sins, of which, since he began to speake to thee, at this time, thou hast felt some remorse, some detestation, he will not goe with thee, he will give thee over. But as long as he, The Spirit of God, by your cherishing of him, staies with you, when Jesus shall say to you, (in your consciences) Quid vos dicitis? Whom doe you say that I am? You can say Iesus Dominus, We say, we professe, That thou art Iesus, and that Iesus is the Lord: If he proceed, Si Dominus, ubi timor? If I be Lord, where is my feare? You shall shew your feare of him, even in your confidence in him, In timore Domini, fiducia fortitudinis, In the feare of the Lord, is an assured strength: You shall not only say Iesum Dominum, professe Jesus to be the Lord, but Veni Domine Iesu, You shall invite, and sollicite Jesus to a speedy judgement, and be able, in his right, to stand upright in that judgement. This you have, if you have this Spirit; and you may have this Spirit, if you resist it not, now; For, As when Peter spake, the holy Ghost fell upon all that heard, So in the Ministry of his weaker instruments, he conveyes, and diffuses, and seales his gifts upon all, which come well disposed to the receiving of him, in his Ordinance.

MAT. 3.17. AND LO, A VOYCE CAME FROM HEAVEN, SAYING, THIS IS MY BELOVED SONNE, IN WHOM I AM WELL PLEASED.

IT HATH been the custome of the Christian Church to appropriate certaine Scriptures to certaine Dayes, for the celebrating of certaine Mysteries of God, or the commemorating of certaine benefits from God: They who consider the age of the Christian Church, too high or too low, too soone or too late, either in the cradle, as it is exhibited in the Acts of the Apostles, or bed-rid in the corruptions of Rome, either before it was come to any growth, when Persecutions nipped it, or when it was so over-growne, as that prosperity and outward splendor swelled it, They that consider the Church so, will¹⁰ never finde a good measure to direct our religious worship of God by, for the outward Liturgies, and Ceremonies of the Church. But as soon as the Christian Church had a constant establishment under Christian Emperours, and before the Church had her tympany of worldly prosperity under usurping Bishops, in this outward service of God, there were particular Scriptures appropriated to particular dayes. Particular men have not liked this that it should be so: And yet that Church which they use to take for their patterne, (I meane Geneva) as soone as it came to have any convenient establishment by the labours of that Reverend man, who did so much in the rectify-²⁰ ing thereof, admitted this custome of celebrating certaine times, by the reading of certaine Scriptures. So that in the pure times of the Church, without any question, and in the corrupter times of the Church, without any infection, and in the Reformed times of the Church, without any suspition of back-sliding, this custome hath beene retained, which our Church hath retained; and according to which custome, these words have been appropriated to this day, for the celebrating thereof, And lo, A voice came, &c.

Divisio

In which words we have pregnant and just occasion to consider, first, the necessity of the Doctrine of the Trinity; Secondly, the way ³⁰ and meanes by which we are to receive our knowledge and understanding of this mystery; And thirdly, the measure of this knowledge, How much we are to know, or to inquire, in that unsearchable mystery: The Quid, what it is; the Quomodo, How we are to learne it; and the Quantum, How farre we are to search into it, will be our three Parts. We consider the first of these, the necessity of that knowledge to a Christian, by occasion of the first Particle, in the Text, And; A Particle of Connexion, and Dependance; and we see by this Connexion, and Dependance, that this revealing, this manifestation of the Trinity, in the text, was made presently after the Baptisme of ⁴⁰ Christ; and that intimates, and inferres, That the first, and principall duty of him, who hath ingrafted himself into the body of the Christian Church, by Baptisme, is to informe himself of the Trinity, in whose name he is Baptized. Secondly, in the meanes, by which this knowledge of the Trinity is to be derived to us, in those words, (Lo, a voyce came from heaven, saying) we note the first word, to be a word of Correction, and of Direction; Ecce, Behold, leave your blindness, look up, shake off your stupidity, look one way or another; A Christian must not goe on implicitly, inconsiderately, indifferently, he must look up, he must intend a calling: And then, Ecce againe,
⁶⁰ of God, in respect of that knowledge, with which we must know him) And then, continue this first way of knowledge, to the last, and

[Rom. 10.14] powerfulllest prooffe of all, which is the power of miracles, not this weake beginning, not this powerfull end, not this Alpha of Creatures, not this Omega of miracles, can imprint in us that knowledge, which is our saving knowledge, nor any other meanes then a voyce; for this knowing is beleeving, And, how should they beleeve, except they heare? sayes the Apostle. It must be Vox, A voyce, And Vox de cælis, A voyce from heaven: For, we have had voces de terra, voyces of men, who have indeed but diminished the dignity of the Doctrine of the ⁷⁰ Trinity, by going about to prove it by humane reason, or to illustrate it by weak and low comparisons; And we have had voces de Inferis, voyces from the Devill himselfe, in the mouthes of many Heretiques, blasphemously impugning this Doctrine; Wee have had voces de profundis, voyces fetched from the depth of the malice of the Devill, Heretiques; And voces de medio, voyces taken from the ordinary strength of Morall men, Philosophers; But this is vox de Excelsis, onely that voyce that comes from Heaven, belongs to us in this mystery: And then lastly, it is vox dicens, a voyce saying, speaking, which is proper to man, for nothing speaks but man; It is Gods voyce, but ⁸⁰ presented to us in the ministry of man; And this is our way; To behold, that is, to depart from our own blindnesse, and to behold a way, that is shewed us; but shewed us in the word, and in the word of God, and in that word of God, preached by man. And after all this, we shall consider the measure of this knowledge, in those last words, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; For, in that word, Meus, My, there is the Person of the Father; In the Filius, there is the Person of the Son; and in the Hic est, This is, there is the Person of the Holy Ghost, for that is the action of the Holy Ghost, in that word, He is pointed at, who was newly baptized, and upon whom ⁹⁰ the Holy Ghost, in the Dove, was descended, and had tarried. But we shall take those words in their order, when we come to them.

First then, we noted the necessity of knowing the Trinity, to be pregnantly intimated in the first word, Et, And: This connects it to the former part of the history, which is Christs Baptisme, and presently upon that Baptisme, this manifestation of the holy Trinity. Consider a man, as a Christian, his first element is Baptisme, and his next is Catechisme; and in his Catechisme, the first is, to beleeve a Father, Son, and holy Ghost. There are in this man, this Christian, Tres nativitates, sayes S. Gregory, three births; one, Per generationem, so we are borne of our naturall mother; one Per regenerationem, so we are borne of our spirituall Mother, the Church, by Baptisme; and a third, Per Resurrectionem, and so we are borne of the generall Mother of us all, when the earth shall be delivered, not of twins, but of millions, when she shall empty her selfe of all her children, in the Resurrection. And these three Nativities our Saviour Christ Jesus had; Of which three, Hodie alter salvatoris natalis, sayes S. Augustine, This day is the day of Christs second birth, that is, of his Baptisme. Not that Christ needed any Regeneration; but that it was his abundant goodnesse, to sanctifie in his person, and in his exemplar action, that Element, which should be an instrument of our Regeneration in Baptisme, the water, for ever. Even in Christ himselfe, Honoratior secunda, sayes that Father, The second birth, which he had at his Baptisme, was the more honourable birth; for, Ab illa se, Pater qui putabatur, Ioseph excusat, At his first birth, Ioseph, his reputed Father, did not avow him for his Son; In hac se, Pater qui non putabatur, insinuat, At this his second birth, God, who was not known to be his Father before, declares that now: Ibi laborat suspicionibus Mater, quia professioni deerat Pater, There the Mothers honour was in question, because Ioseph could not professe himselfe the Father of the childe; Hic honoratur genetrix, quia filium Divinitas protestatur, Here her honour is repaired, and magnified, because the Godhead it selfe, proclaimes it selfe to be the Father.

If then, Christ himselfe chose to admit an addition of dignity at his Baptisme, who had an eternall generation in heaven, and an innocent conception without sin, upon earth, let not us undervalue that dignity, which is afforded us by Baptisme, though our children be borne within the Covenant, by being borne of Christian Parents; for the Covenant gives them Ius ad rem, a right to Baptisme; children of Christian parents may claime Baptisme, which aliens to Christ cannot doe; but yet they may not leave out Baptisme: A man may be within a generall pardon, and yet have no benefit by it, if he sue it not out, if he plead it not; a childe may have right to Baptisme, and yet be without the benefit of it, if it be neglected.

Christ began at Baptisme; Naturall things he did before; He fled into Ægypt, to preserve his life from Herods Persecution, before: And a miraculous thing he did before; He overcame in disputation, the Doctors in the Temple, at twelve yeares old; but yet, neither of these neither, before his Circumcision, which was equivalent to Baptisme, to this purpose; but before he accepted, or instituted Baptisme, he ¹⁴⁰ did some naturall, and some miraculous things. But his ordinary work which he came for, his preaching the Gospel, and thereby raising the frame for our salvation, in his Church, he began not, but after his Baptisme: And then, after that, it is expresly, and immediatly recorded, That when he came out of the waters, he prayed; and then, the next thing in the history is, that he fasted, and upon that, his temptation in the wilderness. I meane no more in this, but this, That no man hath any interest in God, to direct a prayer unto him, how devoutly soever, no man hath any assurance of any effect of his endeavours in a good life, how morally holy soever, but in relation to ¹⁵⁰ his Baptisme, in that seale of the Covenant, by which he is a Christian: Christ took this Sacrament, his Baptisme, before he did any other thing; and he took this, three yeares before the institution of the other Sacrament of his body and blood: So that the Anabaptists obtrude a false necessity upon us, that we may not take the first Sacrament, Baptisme, till we be capable of the other Sacrament too; for, first in nature, Prius nascimur, quàm pascimur, we are borne before we are fed; and so, in Religion, we are first borne into the Church, (which is done by Baptisme) before we are ready for that other food, which is not indeed milk for babes, but solid meat for stronger

John 1.6

They that have told us, that the Baptisme, that Christ took of Iohn, was not the same Baptisme, which we Christians take in the Church, speak impertinently; for Iohn was sent by God to baptize; and there is but one Baptisme in him. It is true, that S. Augustine calls Iohns Baptisme, Præcursorium ministerium, as he was a fore-runner of Christ, his Baptisme was a fore-running Baptisme; It is true, that Iustin Martyr calls Iohns Baptisme, Euangelicæ gratiæ præludium, A Prologue to the grace of the Gospel; It is true, that more of the Fathers have more phrases of expressing a difference between the

was in the relation; Iohn baptized In Christum moriturum, Into Christ, who was to dye, and we are baptized In Christum mortuum, Into Christ who is already dead for us. Damascen expresses it fully, Christus baptizatur suo Baptismo: Christ was baptized with his own Baptisme; It was Iohns Baptisme, and yet it was Christs too. And so we are baptized with his Baptisme, and there neither is, nor was any other; And that Baptisme is to us, Ianua Ecclesiæ, as S. Augustine ¹⁸⁰ calls it, The Doore of the Church, at that we enter, And Investitura Christianismi, The investing of Christianity, as S. Bernard calls it, There we put on Christ Jesus; And, (as he, whom wee may be bold to match with these two floods of spirituall eloquence, for his Eloquence, that is Luther, expresses it) Puerpera regni Cælorum, The Church in Baptisme, is as a Woman delivered of child, and her child is the Kingdome of Heaven, and that kingdome she delivers into his armes who is truly Baptized. This Sacrament makes us Christians; this denominates us, both Civilly, and Spiritually; there we receive our particular names, which distinguish us from one another, and ¹⁹⁰ there we receive that name, which shall distinguish us from the Nations, in the next World; at Baptisme wee receive the name of Christians, and there we receive our Christian names.

When the Disciples of Christ, in generall, came to be called Christians, wee finde, it was a name given upon great deliberation; Barnabas had Preached there, who was a good Man, and full of the Holy Ghost, and of faith, himselfe. But he went to fetch Paul too, a Man of great gifts, and power in Preaching; and both they continued a yeare Preaching in Antioch, and there, first of all, the Disciples were called Christians: Before they were called Fideles, and Fratres, and ²⁰⁰ Discipuli; The Faithfull, and the Brethren, and the Disciples, and (as S. Chrysostome sayes) De via, Men that were in the way; for, all the World besides, were beside him, who was The Way, the Truth, and the Life. But, (by the way) we may wonder, what gave S. Chrysostome occasion of that opinion or that conjecture, since in the Ecclesiastique Story (I thinke) there is no mention of that name, attributed to the Christians: And in the Acts of the Apostles, it is named but once; when Saul desired Letters to Damascus, to punish them, whom he found to be of That way. Where we may note also, the zeale of S. Paul, (though then, in a wrong cause) against them,

²¹⁰ who were of That way, that is, That way inclined; And our stupidity, who startle not at those men, who are not onely inclined another way, a crosse way, but labour pestilently to incline others, and hope confidently to see all incline that way againe. Here then at Antioch, they began to be called Christians; not onely out of Custome, but, as it may seeme, out of decree. For, if there belong any credit to that Councell, which the Apostles are said to have held at Antioch, (of which Councell there was a Copy, whether true or false, in Origens Library, within two hundred yeares after Christ) one Canon in that Councell is, Vt credentes in Iesum, quos tunc vocabant Galilæos, ²²⁰ vocarentur Christiani, That the followers of Christ, who, till then, were called Galileans, should then be called Christians. There, in generall, we were all called Christians; but, in particular, I am called a Christian, because I have put on Christ, in Baptisme.

Now, in considering the infinite treasure which we receive in Baptisme, insinuated before the text, That the Heavens opened, that is, The mysteries of Religion are made accessible to us, we may attaine to them; And then, The Holy Ghost descends, (And he is a Comforter, whilst we are in Ignorance, and he is a Schoolemaster to teach us all truths) And he comes as a Dove, that is, Brings peace of conscience with him, and he rests upon us as a Dove, that is, Requires simplicity, and an humble disposition in us, That not onely as Elias opened and shut Heaven, Vt pluviam aut emitteret, aut teneret, That he might poure out or withhold the raine; but (as that Father, S. Chrysostome pursues it) Ita apertum, ut ipse conscendas, & alios, si velles, tecum lebares, Heaven is so opened to us in baptisme, as that we our selves may enter into it, and by our good life, lead others into it too; As we consider, I say, what we have received in Baptisme, so, if we be not onely Dealbati Christiani, (as S. Augustine speaks) White-lim'd Christians, Christians on the out-side, we must consider ²⁴⁰ what we are to doe upon all this. We are baptized, In plena & adulta Trinitate, sayes S. Cyprian, not in a Father without a Son, nor in either, or both, without a Holy Ghost, but in the fulnesse of the Trinity: And this mystery of the Trinity, is Regula fidei, sayes S. Hierom, It is the Rule of our faith, this onely regulates our faith, That we beleieve aright of the Trinity; It is Dogma nostræ Religionis, sayes S. Basil, As though there were but this one Article; It is, sayes he, the foundation, the summe, it is all the Christian Religion, to beleeeve aright of the Trinity. By this wee are distinguished from the Jews, who accept no plurality of Persons; And by this we are distinguished ²⁵⁰ from the Gentiles, who make as many severall persons, as there are severall powers, and attributes belonging to God. Our Religion, our holy Philosophy, our learning, as it is rooted in Christ, so it is not limited, not determined in Christ alone; wee are not baptized in his name alone, but our study must be the whole Trinity; for, he that beleeves not in the Holy Ghost, as well as in Christ, is no Christian:

 And, as that is true which S. Augustine sayes, Nec laboriosius aliquid queritur, nec periculosius alicubi erratur, As there is not so steepy a place to clamber up, nor so slippery a place to fall upon, as the doctrine of the Trinity; so is that also true which he addes, Nec fructuo- ²⁶⁰ sus invenitur. There is not so fulfilling, so accomplishing, so abundant an Article as that of the Trinity, for it is all Christianity. And therefore let us keepe our selves to that way, of the manifestation of the Trinity, which is revealed in this text; and that way is our second part.

We must necessarily passe faster through the branches of this part, then the Dignity of the subject, or the fecundity of the words will well admit; but the clearenesse of the order must recompence the speed and dispatch. First then, in this way here is an Ecce, An awaking, an Alarum, a calling us up, Ecce, Behold. First, an Ecce correc- since the Fowles of the Heavens sow not, nor reape, and yet are plentifully fed, thou mayest do so, and thou shalt bee so; Ecce animam, Behold thou hast an immortall soule, which must have spirituall food, character of the Sacrament, and trust to that: for there is a Confirmation belongs to every mans Baptisme; not any such Confirmation as should intimate an impotency, or insufficiency in the Sacrament, but out of an obligation, that that Sacrament layes upon thee, That thou art bound to live according to that stipulation and contract, made in thy behalfe, at thy receiving of that Sacrament, there belongs a Confirmation to that Sacrament, a holy life, to make sure that salvation, sealed to thee at first. So also, if thou thinke thy selfe safe, because thou hast left that leaven, that is, Traditions of men, and livest in a Reformed, and Orthodox Church, yet, Ecce Paradisum, Behold Paradise it selfe, even in Paradise, the bed of all ease, yet there was labour required; so is there required diligence, and a laborious holinesse, in the right Church, and in the true Religion. If thou thinke thou knowest all, because thou understandest all the Articles of faith already, and all the duties of a Christian life already, yet Ecce scalam, Behold the life of a Christian is a Iacobs Ladder, and till we come up to God, still there are more steps to be made, more ways to bee gone. Briefly, to the most learned, to him that knowes most, To the most sanctified, to him that lives best, here is an Ecce correctionis, there is a farther degree of knowledge, a farther degree of goodnesse, proposed to him, then he is yet attained unto.

So it is an Ecce correctionis, an Ecce instar stimuli, God by calling us up to Behold, rebukes us because wee did not so, and provokes us to doe so now: It is also an Ecce directionis, an Ecce instar lucernæ, God by calling us up to Behold, gives us a light whereby wee may doe so, and may discern our way: whomsoever God cals, to him hee affords so much light, as that, if he proceed not by that light, hee himselfe hath winked at that light, or blown out that light, or suffered that light to wast, and goe out, by his long negligence. God does not call man with an Ecce, To behold him, and then hide himselfe from him; he does not bid him looke, and then strike him blinde. We are all borne blinde at first; In Baptisme God gives us that Collyrium, that eye-salve, by which we may see, and actually by the power of that medicine, we do all see, more then the Gentiles do. But yet, Ecce trabs in oculis, sayes Christ; Behold there is a beame in our eye, that is, Naturall infirmities. But for all this beame, when Christ bids us behold, we are able to see, by Christs light, our owne imperfections;

though we have that beame, yet we are able to see that we have it. And when this light which Christ gives us, (which is his first grace) brings us to that, then Christ proceeds to that which followes there, Projice trabem, Cast out the beame that is in thine eye, and so we become able by that succeeding grace, to overcome our former impediments: If Christ bid us behold, he gives us light, if he bid us cast out the beame, he gives us strength. There is an Ecce mutus, cast upon Zachary, Behold thou shalt be dumbe, God punished Zacharies incredulity with dumbnesse; But there is never an Ecce cæcus, Behold ³³⁰ thou shalt be blinde, That God should call man to see, and then blow out the candle, or not shew him a candle, if he were in utter darknesse; for this is an Ecce directionis, an Ecce lucernæ, God calts, and he directs, and lightens our paths; never reproach God so impiously as to suspect, that when he calts, he does not meane that we should come.

Well then, with what doth he enlighten thee? Why, Ecce vox, Behold a voyce, saying. Now, for this voyce in the Text, by whom it was heard, as also by whom the Dove that descended was seen, is sometimes disputed, and with some perplexity amongst the Fathers. Some ³⁴⁰ thinke it was to Christ alone, because two of the Euangelists, Mark and Luke, record the words in that phrase, Tu es filius, not as we reade it in our Text, This is, but, Thou art my beloved Sonne: But so, there had been no use, neither of the Dove, nor of the voyce; for Christ himselfe lacked no testimony, that he was that Sonne. Some thinke it was to Christ, and Iohn Baptist, and not to the company; Because, say they, The mysterie of the Trinity was not to be presented to them, till a farther and maturer preparation; And therefore they observe, that the next manifestation of Christ, and so of the Trinity, by a like voyce, was almost three years after this, in his Transfigura-³⁵⁰ tion, after he had manifested this doctrine by a long preaching amongst them; And yet, even then, it was but to his Apostles, and but to a few of them neither, and those few forbidden to publish too; and how long? Till his resurrection; when by that resurrection he had confirmed them, then it was time to acquaint them with the Doctrine of the Trinity. But for the Doctrine of the Trinity, as mysterious as it is, it is insinuated and conveyed unto us, even in the first verse of the Bible, in that extraordinary phrase, Creavit Dii, Gods,

Vox

 Luke 3.22]

Mat. 17.[5]

Gods in the plurall, created heaven and earth; There is an unity in the action, it is but Creavit, in the singular, and yet there is a plurality ³⁶⁰ in the persons, it is not Deus, God, but Dij, Gods: The Doctrine of the Trinity, is the first foundation of our Religion, and no time is too early for our faith, The simplest may beleieve it; and all time is too early for our reason, The wisest cannot understand it. And therefore, as Chrysostome is well followed in his opinion, so he is well worthy to be followed, That both the Dove was seen, and the voyce was heard by all the company: for, neither was necessary to Christ himselfe; And the voyce was not necessary to Iohn Baptist, because the signe which was to governe him, was the Dove; He that sent me, said, upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit come down, and tarry still, it is he ³⁷⁰ that baptizeth with the Holy Ghost. But to the company, both voyce and Dove were necessary: for, if the voyce had come alone, they might have thought, that that testimony had been given of Iohn, of whom they had, as yet, a far more reverend opinion, then of Christ; And therefore, God first points out the person, and by the Dove declares him to all, which was He, and then, by that voyce declares farther to them all, what He was. This benefit they had by being in that company, they saw, and they heard things conducing to their salvation; for, though God worke more effectually upon those particular persons in the Congregation, who, by a good use of his former graces, ³⁸⁰ are better disposed then others, yet to the most gracelesse man that is, if he be in the Congregation, God vouchsafes to speake, and would be heard.

Via Creaturæ

They that differ in the persons, who heard it, agree in the Reason; All they heard it, in all their opinions, to whom it was necessary to heare it; And it is necessary to all us, to have this meanes of understanding and beleiving, to heare. Therefore God gives to all that shall be saved, vocem, his voyce. We consider two other wayes of imprinting the knowledge of God in man; first in a darke and weake way, the way of Nature, and the book of Creatures; and secondly, in that ³⁹⁰ powerfull way, the way of Miracles. But these, and all between these, are uneffectuall without the Word. When David sayes of the Creatures, There is no speech nor language, where their voyce is not heard, (the voyce of the Creature is heard over all) S. Paul commenting upon those words, says, They have heard, All the world hath heard;

Rom. 10.18

but what? The voyce of the Creature; now that is true, so much all the world had heard then, and does heare still: But the hearing that S. Paul intends there, is such a hearing as begets faith, and that the voyce of Creature reaches not to. The voyce of the Creature alone, is but a faint voyce, a low voyce; nor any voyce, till the voyce of the ⁴⁰⁰ Word inanimate it; for then when the Word of God hath taught us any mystery of our Religion, then the booke of Creatures illustrates, and establishes, and cherishes that which we have received by faith, in hearing the Word: As a stick bears up, and succours a vine, or any plant, more precious then it selfe, but yet gave it not life at first, nor gives any nourishment to the root now: so the assistance of reason, and the voyce of the Creature, in the preaching of Nature, works upon our faith, but the roote, and the life is in the faith it selfe; The light of nature gives a glimmering before, and it gives a reflexion after faith, but the meridianall noone is in faith.

⁴¹⁰ Now, if we consider the other way, the way of power, Miracles, no man may ground his beliefe upon that, which seems a Miracle to him. Moses wrought Miracles, and Pharaohs instruments wrought the like: we know, theirs were no true Miracles, and we know Moses were; but how do we know this? By another voyce, by the Word of God, who cannot lie: for, for those upon whom those Miracles were to worke on both sides, Moses, and they too, seemed to the beholders, diversly disposed to do Miracles. One Rule in discerning, and judging a Miracle, is, to consider whether it be done in confirmation of a necessary Truth: otherwise it is rather to be suspected for an Illusion, ⁴²⁰ then accepted for a Miracle. The Rule is intimated in Deuteronomy, where, though a Prophets prophecy do come to passe, yet, if his end be, to draw to other gods, he must be slaine. What Miracles soever are pretended, in confirmation of the inventions of Men, are to be neglected. God hath not carried us so low for our knowledge, as to Creatures, to Nature, nor so high, as to Miracles, but by a middle way, By a voyce.

But it is Vox de Caelis, A voyce from heaven. S. Basil applying (indeed with some wresting and detorting) those words in the 29 Psalme, vers. 3. (The voyce of the Lord is upon the waters, the God ⁴³⁰ of glory maketh it to thunder) to this Baptisme of Christ, he sayes, Vox super aquas Ioannes, The words of Iohn at Christs Baptisme,

Via miraculorum

De Caelis

were this voyce that David intends; And then that manifestation which God gave of the Trinity, (whatsoever it were) altogether, that was the Thunder of his Majesty: so this Thunder then, was vox de Cælis, A voyce from heaven; And in this voyce the person of the Father was manifested, as he was in the same voyce at his Transfiguration. Since this voyce then is from Heaven, and is the Fathers voyce, we must looke for all our knowledge of the Trinity from thence. For, (to speake of one of those persons, of Christ) no man ⁴⁴⁰ knoweth the Sonne, but the Father; Who then, but he, can make us know him? If any knew it, yet it is an unexpressible mystery, no man could reveale it; Flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven; If any could reveale it to us, yet none could draw us to beleieve it; No man can come to me, except the Father draw him: So that all our voyce of Direction must be from thence, De Cælis, from Heaven.

Mat. 11.27

Mat. 16.17

De Inferis

We have had Voces de Inferis, voyces from Hell, in the blasphemies of Heretiques; That the Trinity was but Cera extensa, but as a Rolle of Wax spread, or a Dough Cake rolled out, and so divided into per-⁴⁵⁰ sons: That the Trinity was but a nest of Boxes, a lesser in a greater, and not equall to one another; And then, that the Trinity was not onely three persons, but three Gods too; So far from the truth, and so far from one another have Heretiques gone, in the matter of the Trinity; and Cerinthus so far, in that one person, in Christ, as to say, That Jesus, and Christ, were two distinct persons; and that into Jesus, who, sayes he, was the sonne of Ioseph, Christ, who was the Spirit of God, descended here at his Baptisme, and was not in him before, and withdrew himselfe from him againe, at the time of his Passion, and was not in him then; so that he was not borne Christ, nor suffered ⁴⁶⁰ not being Christ; but was onely Christ in his preaching, and in his Miracles; and in all the rest, he was but Jesus, sayes Cerinthus.

De Medio

We have had Voces de Inferis, de profundis, from the depth of hell, in the malice of Heretiques, And we have had Voces de medio, voyces from amongst us, Inventions of men, to expresse, and to make us understand the Trinity, in pictures, and in Comparisons: All which (to contract this point) are apt to fall into that abuse, which we will onely note in one; At first, they used ordinarily to expresse the Trinity in foure letters, which had no ill purpose in it at first, but was a re-religious ease for their memories, in Catechismes: The letters were Π⁴⁷⁰ and Υ, and Α, and Π; The Π was Πατήρ, and the Υ was Ὑἱός, and the two last belonged to the last person, for Α was Ἄγιον, and Π was Πνεῦμα, and so there was Father, Sonne, and Holy Ghost, as if we should expresse it in F, and S, and H, and G. But this came quickly thus far into abuse, as that they thought, there could belong but three letters, in that picture, to the three persons; and therefore allowing so many to Father, Sonne, and Holy Ghost, they tooke the last letter P, for Petrus, and so made Peter head of the Church, and equall to the Trinity. So that for our knowledge, in this mysterious doctrine of the Trinity, let us evermore rest, in voce de cælis, in that voyce which⁴⁸⁰ came from heaven.

But yet it is Vox dicens, A voice saying, speaking, A voice that man is capable of, and may be benefited by. It is not such a voice as that was, (which came from heaven too) when Christ prayed to God to glorifie his name, That the people should say, some, that it was a Thunder, some that it was an Angel that spake. They are the sons of Thunder, and they are the Ministeriall Angels of the Church, from whom we must heare this voice of heaven: Nothing can speak, but man: No voice is understood by man, but the voice of man; It is not Vox dicens, That voyce sayes nothing to me, that speaks not; And therefore howsoever⁴⁹⁰ the voice in the Text were miraculously formed by God, to give this glory, and dignity to this first manifestation of the Trinity in the person of Christ, yet because he hath left it for a permanent Doctrine necessary to Salvation, he hath left ordinary means for the conveying of it; that is, The same voice from heaven, the same word of God, but speaking in the ministry of man. And therefore for our measure of this knowledge, (which is our third and last Part) we are to see, how Christian men, whose office it hath been to interpret Scriptures, that is, how the Catholike Church hath understood these words, Hic est Filius, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.

⁵⁰⁰ How we are to receive the knowledge of the Trinity, Athanasius hath expressed as far as we can goe; Whosoever will be saved, hee must beleeve it; but the manner of it is not exposed so far as to his beleeve. That question of the Prophet, Quis enarrabit? who shall declare this? carries the answer with it, Nemo enarrabit, No man shall declare it. But a manifestation of the Beeing of the Trinity, they have alwayes apprehended in these words, Hic est Filius, This is my beloved Son. To that purpose therefore, we take, first, the words to be expressed by this Euangelist S. Matthew, as the voyce delivered them, rather then as they are expressed by S. Marke, and S. Luke; both ⁵¹⁰ which have it thus, Tu es, Thou art my beloved Son, and not Hic est, This is; They two being onely carefull of the sense, and not of the words, as it fals out often amongst the Euangelists, who differ oftentimes in recording the words of Christ, and of other persons. But where the same voice spake the same words againe, in the Transfiguration, there all the Euangelists expresse it so, Hic est, This is, and not Tu es, Thou art my beloved Son; And so it is, where S. Peter makes use by application of that history, it is Hic est, and not Tu es. So that this Hic est, This man, designs him who hath that marke upon him, that the holy Ghost was descended upon him, and tarried upon him; ⁵²⁰ for so far went the signe of distinction given to Iohn, The holy Ghost was to descend and tarry: Manet, sayes S. Hierome, The holy Ghost tarryes upon him, because he never departs from him, sed operatur quando Christus vult, & quomodo vult, The holy Ghost works in Christ, when Christ will, and as Christ will; and so the holy Ghost tarried not upon any of the Prophets; They spoke what hee would, but he wrought not when they would. S. Gregory objects to himselfe, that there was a perpetuall residence of the holy Ghost upon the faithfull, out of those words of Christ, The Comforter shall abide with you for ever; But as S. Gregory answers himselfe, This is not a plenary ⁵³⁰ abiding, and secundum omnia dona, in a full operation, according to all his gifts, as he tarried upon Christ: Neither indeed is that promise of Christs to particular persons, but to the whole body of the Church.

[Luke 4.21]

Now this residence of the holy Ghost upon Christ, was his unction; properly it was that, by which he was the Messias, That he was anointed above his fellowes; And therefore S. Hierome makes account, that Christ received his unction, and so his office of Messias, at this his Baptisme, and this descending of the holy Ghost upon him: And he thinks it therefore, because presently after Baptisme, he went to preach in the Synagogue, and he took for his Text those words of the Prophet Esay, The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me, that I should preach the Gospel to the poore. And when he had read the Text, he began his Sermon thus, This day is this Scripture fulfilled in your eares. But we may be bold to say, that this is mistaken by S. Hierome; for the unction of Christ by the holy Ghost, by which he was anointed, and sealed into the office of Messias, was in the over-shadowing of the holy Ghost in his conception, in his assuming our nature: This Descending now at his baptism, and this Residence, were onely to declare, That there was a holy Ghost, and that holy Ghost dwelt upon this person.

⁵⁵⁰ It is Hic, This person; And it is Hic est, This is my Son; It is not onely Fuit, He was my Son, when he was in my bosome, Nor onely Erit, He shall be so, when he shall return to my right hand againe; God does not onely take knowledge of him in Glory; But Est, He is so now; now in the exinanition of his person, now in the evacuation of his Glory, now that he is preparing himselfe to suffer scorne, and scourges, and thornes, and nailes, in the ignominious death of the Crosse, now he is the Son of the glorious God; Christ is not the lesse the Son of God for this eclipse.

Est

Hic est, This is he, who for all this lownesse is still as high as ever ⁵⁶⁰ he was, and that height is, Est Filius, He is the Son. He is not Servus, The Servant of God; or not that onely, for he is that also. Behold my servant, (sayes God of him, in the Prophet) I will stay upon him, mine elect, in whom my soule delighteth; I have put my Spirit upon him, and he shall bring forth judgement to the Gentiles. But Christ is this Servant, and a Son too: And not a Son onely; for so we observe divers filiations in the Schoole; Filiationem vestigii, That by which all creatures, even in their very being, are the sons of God, as Iob calls God Pluviae patrem, The father of the raine; And so there are other filiations, other wayes of being the sons of God. But Hic est, This ⁵⁷⁰ person is, as the force of the Article expresses it, and presses it, Ille Filius, The Son, That Son, which no son else is, neither can any else declare how he is that which he is.

This person then is still The Son, And Meus Filius, sayes God, My Son. He is the sonne of Abraham, and so within the Covenant; as well provided by that inheritance, as the son of man can be naturally. He is the Son of a Virgin, conceived without generation, and therefore ordained for some great use. He is the son of David, and therefore royally descended; But his dignity is in the Filius meus, that God avows him to be his Son; for, Vnto which of the Angels said he at any

Heb. 1.5

[Isa. 43.1] ⁵⁸⁰ time, Thou art my sonne? But to Christ he sayes in the Prophet, I have called thee by thy name: And what is his name? Meus es tu, Thou art mine. Quem à me non separat Deitas, sayes Leo, non dividit potestas, non discernit æternitas: Mine so, as that mine infinitenesse gives me no roome nor space beyond him, hee reaches as far as I, though I be infinite; My Almightynesse gives me no power above him, he hath as much power as I, though I have all; My eternity gives me no being before him, though I were before all: In mine Omnipotence, in mine Omnipresence, in mine Omniessence, he is equall partner with me, and hath all that is mine, or that is my selfe, and so he is mine.

Dilectus ⁵⁹⁰ My Son, And My beloved Son; but so we are all, who are his sons, Deliciæ ejus, sayes Solomon, His delight, and his contentment is to be with the sons of men. But here the Article is extraordinarily repeated againe, Ille dilectus, That beloved Son, by whom, those, who were neither beloved, nor Sons, became the beloved Sons of God; For, there is so much more added, in the last phrase, In quo complacui, In whom I am well pleased.

In quo Now, these words are diversly read. S. Augustine sayes, some Copies that he had seen, read them thus, Ego hodie genui te, This is my beloved Son, this day have I begotten him: And with such Copies, it ⁶⁰⁰ seemes, both Iustin Martyr, and Irenæus met, for they reade these words so, and interpret them accordingly: But these words are misplaced, and mis-transferred out of the second Psalme, where they are. And as they change the words, and in stead of In quo complacui, In whom I am well pleased, reade, This day have I begotten thee; S. Cyprian adds other words, to the end of these, which are, Hunc audite, Heare him: Which words, when these words were repeated at the Transfiguration, were spoken, but here, at the Baptisme, they were not, what Copy soever misled S. Cyprian, or whether it were the failing of his own memory. But S. Chrysostome gives an expresse ⁶¹⁰ reason, why those words were spoken at the Transfiguration, and not here: Because, saies he, Here was onely a purpose of a Manifestation of the Trinity, so farre, as to declare their persons, who they were, and no more: At the Trans-figuration, where Moses and Elias appeared with Christ, there God had a purpose to preferre the Gospel above the Law, and the Prophets, and therefore in that place he addes that, Hunc audite, Heare him, who first fulfillls all the Law, and the

Prophets, and then preaches the Gospel. He was so well pleased in him, as that he was content to give all them, that received him, power to become the Sons of God, too; as the Apostle sayes, By his grace, he ⁶²⁰ hath made us accepted in his beloved.

[Ioh. 1.12]

Eph. 1.6

Beloved, That you may be so, Come up from your Baptisme, as it is said that Christ did; Rise, and ascend to that growth, which your Baptisme prepared you to: And the heavens shall open, as then, even Cataractæ cæli, All the windowes of heaven shall open, and raine downe blessings of all kindes, in abundance; And the Holy Ghost shall descend upon you, as a Dove, in his peacefull comming, in your simple, and sincere receiving him; And he shall rest upon you, to effect and accomplish his purposes in you. If he rebuke you, (as Christ, when he promises the Holy Ghost, though he call him a Comforter, ⁶³⁰ sayes, That he shall rebuke the world of divers things) yet he shall dwell upon you as a Dove, Quæ si mordet, osculando mordet, sayes S. Augustine: If the Dove bite, it bites with kissing, if the Holy Ghost rebuke, he rebukes with comforting. And so baptized, and so pursuing the contract of your Baptisme, and so crowned with the residence of his blessed Spirit, in your holy conversation, hee shall breathe a soule into your soule, by that voyce of eternall life, You are my beloved Sonnes, in whom I am well pleased.

John 16.7

Number 7.

*Preached to the Earl of Exeter, and his company, in his Chappell at Saint Johns;

APOC. 7.9. AFTER THIS, I BEHELD, AND LOE, A GREAT MULTITUDE, WHICH NO MAN COULD NUMBER, OF ALL NATIONS, AND KINDREDS, AND PEOPLE, AND TONGUES, STOOD BEFORE THE THRONE, AND BEFORE THE LAMBE, CLOTHED WITH WHITE ROBES, AND PALMES IN THEIR HANDS.

WE SHALL have occasion by and by, to say something of the danger of Curiosity, and something of the danger of the broad way, in which, too many walk: we will not therefore fall into either of these faults, at first, we will not be over curious, nor we will not stray, nor cast our selves into that broad, and boundlesse way, by entring into those various, and manifold senses, which Expositors have multiplyed, in the handling of this place, and this part of this book; but we take the plainest way, and that in which, the best meet, and concur, that these words are spoken of the Ioyes,¹⁰ and Glory, reserved for them, who overcome the fraud, and the fury, the allurements, and the violences of Antichrist; in whom, in that name, and person of Antichrist, we consider all supplanters, and all seducers, all opposers of the kingdome of Christ, in us; for, as every man hath spontaneum dæmonem, (as S. Chrysostome speakes) a devill of his own making, (which is, some customary, and habitually sin in him) so every man hath spontaneum Antichristum, an Antichrist of his own making, some objections in the weakness of his faith, some oppositions in the perverseness of his manners, against the kingdom of Christ in himself; and as, if God would suspend the devill, ²⁰ or slumber the devill a day, I am afraid we should be as ill that day, as if the devill were awake, and in action, so if those disputed, and problematical Antichrists, Eastern and Western Antichrist, Antichrist of Rome, and Antichrist of Constantinople, Turk and Pope, were removed out of the world, we should not for all that be delivered of Antichrist, that is, of that opposition to the kingdome of Christ, which is in our selvs. This part of the book of the Revelation, is literally, and primarily, the glorious victory of them, who, in the later end of the world, having stood out the persecutions of the Antichrist, enter into the triumph of heaven: And it extends it self to all, by way of fair

We are then upon the contemplation of the joyes of heaven, which are everlasting, and must we wring them into the discourse of an houre? of the glory of heaven which is intire, and must we divide it into parts? we must; we will; we doe; into two parts; first, the number, the great number of those that shall be saved; And then, the ⁴⁰ glorious qualities, which shall be imprinted on them, who are saved: first, that salvation is a more extensive thing, and more communicable, then sullen cloystrall, that have walled salvation in a monastery, or in an ermitage, take it to be; or then the over-valuers of their own purity, and righteousness, which have determind salvation in themselves, take it to be; for, It is a great multitude, which no man can number, of all nations &c. And then, in the second place, salvation is the possession of such endowments, as naturally invite all, to the prosecution of that, which is exposed and offered to all; that we all labour here, that we may all stand hereafter, before the Throne, and

In the first of these, we shall passe by these steps; first, we shall consider the sociableness, the communicableness of God himself, who gives us the earth, and offers us heaven, and desires to have his kingdome well peopled; he would have many, he would have all, he would have every one of them have all. And then, the first word of the text, (After this) will carry us to the consideration of that which was done before; which was, first, that they which were of this number, were sealed, and then they which were so sealed before, were a great number, one hundred forty four thousand; but they who were ⁶⁰ made partakers of all this after, were innumerable, After this I beheld a great multitude, which no man could number; And therefore we shall shut up that first part with this consideration, what sense, what interpretation, may belong unto those places, where Christ says, that the way to heaven is narrow, and the gate straight: of these peeces we shall make up our first part; And for the particulars belonging to the second, we shall fitliest open them, then, when we come to the handling of them.

I Part

Our first step then in this first part, is, the sociableness, the communicableness of God; He loves holy meetings, he loves the com-
⁷⁰ munion of Saints, the houshold of the faithfull: Deliciae ejus, says Solomon, his delight is to be with the Sons of men, and that the Sons of men should be with him: Religion is not a melancholy; the spirit of God is not a dampe; the Church is not a grave: it is a fold, it is an Arke, it is a net, it is a city, it is a kingdome, not onely a house, but a house that hath many mansions in it: still it is a plurall thing, consisting of many: and very good grammarians amongst the Hebrews, have thought, and said, that that name, by which God notifies himself to the world, in the very beginning of Genesis, which is Elohim, as it is a plurall word there, so it hath no singular: they say we cannot name ⁸⁰ God, but plurally: so sociable, so communicable, so extensive, so derivative of himself, is God, and so manifold are the beames, and the emanations that flow out from him.

[Prov. 8.31]

Deus unus

It is a garden worthy of your walking in it: Come into it, but by the gate of nature: The naturall man had much to do, to conceive God: a God that should be but one God: and therefore scattered his thoughts upon a multiplicity of Gods: and he found it, (as he thought) reasonable, to think, that there should be a God of Justice, a God of Wisedome, a God of Power, and so made the severall Attributes of God, severall Gods, and thought that one God might have enough to

as he cannot conceive a vacuity, that any thing should be empty, so he cannot conceive that any one thing, though that be a God, should fill all things: and therefore strays upon a plurality of Gods, upon many Gods, though, in truth, (as Athanasius expresses it) ex multitudine numinum, nullitas numinum, he that constitutes many Gods destroys all God; for no God can be God, if he be not all-sufficient; yet naturally, (I mean in such nature, as our nature is) a man does not easily conceive God to be alone, to be but one; he thinks there should ¹⁰⁰ be company in the Godhead.

Bring it farther then so. A man that lies in the dregs of obscured, and vitiated nature, does not easily discern, unicum Deum, a God that should be alone, a God that should be but one God. Reason rectified, (rectified by the word of God) can discern this, this one God. But when by that means of the Scripture, he does apprehend Deum unicum, one God, does he finde that God alone? are there not three Persons, though there be but one God? 'Tis true the Romans mis-took infinitely, in making 300 Iupiters; Varro mis-took infinitely, in making Deos terrestres, and Deos cœlestes, sub-lunary, and super-lunary, ¹¹⁰ heavenly, and earthly Gods, and Deos marinos, and fluviatiles, Sea Gods, and River Gods, salt, and fresh-water Gods, and Deos mares, and fœminas, he Gods, and she Gods, and (that he might be sure to take in all) Deos certos & incertos, Gods, which they were sure were Gods, and Gods which might be Gods, for any thing they knew to the contrary. There is but one God; but yet was that one God ever alone? There were more generations (infinitely infinite) before the world was made, then there have been minutes, since it was made: all that while, there were no creatures; but yet was God alone, any one minute of al this? was there not alwais a Father and a Son, and a holy ¹²⁰ Ghost? And had not they, always an acquiescence in one another, an exercise of Affection, (as we may so say) a love, a delight, and a complacency towards one another? So, as that the Father could not be without the Son and the holy Ghost, so as neither Sonne, nor holy Ghost could be without the Father, nor without one another; God was from all eternity collected into one God, yet from all eternity he derived himselfe into three persons: God could not be so alone, but that there have been three persons, as long as there hath been one God.

Had God company enough of himselfe; was he satisfied in the three

3 Personæ

Creatio

Persons? We see he proceeded further; he came to a Creation; And 130 as soon as he had made light, (which was his first Creature) he took [Gen. 1.4] a pleasure in it; he said it was good; he was glad of it; glad of the Sea, glad of the Earth, glad of the Sunne, and Moone, and Starres, and he said of every one, It is good; But when he had made All, peopled the whole world, brought all creatures together, then he was very glad, and then he said, not onely, that it was good, but that it was very good: God was so far from being alone, as that he found not the fulnesse of being well, till all was made, till all Creatures met together, in an Host, as Moses calls it; then the good was extended into very good.

Angeli

Did God satisfie himselfe with this visible and discernible world; 140 with all on earth, and all between that, and him? were those four Monarchies, the four Elements, and all the subjects of those four Monarchies, (if all the four Elements have Creatures) company enough for God? was that Heptarchie, the seven kingdomes of the seven Planets, conversation enough for him? Let every Starre in the firmament, be (so some take them to be) a severall world, was all this enough? we see, God drew persons nearer to him, then Sunne, or Moon, or Starres, or any thing, which is visible, and discernible to us, he created Angels; How many, how great? Arithmetique lacks num- bers to expresse them, proportion lacks Dimensions to figure them; 150 so far was God from being alone.

Homines

And yet God had not shed himselfe far enough; he had the Levia- than, the Whale in the Sea, and Behemoth and the Elephant upon the land; and all these great heavenly bodies in the way, and Angels in their infinite numbers, and manifold offices, in heaven; But, because Angels could not propagate, nor make more Angels, he enlarged his love, in making man, that so he might enjoy all natures at once, and have the nature of Angels, and the nature of earthly Creatures, in one Person. God would not be without man, nor he would not come single, [Gen. 1.26] not alone to the making of man; but it is Faciamus hominem, Let us, 160 us, make man; God, in his whole counsail, in his whole Colledge, in his whole society, in the whole Trinity, makes man, in whom the whole nature of all the world should meet.

Christus

And still our large, and our Communicable God, affected this association so, as that having three Persons in himselfe, and having Creatures of divers natures, and having collected all natures in man, who consisted of a spirituall nature, as well as a bodily, he would have one liker himselfe, then man was; And therefore he made Christ, God and Man, in one person, Creature and Creator together; One greater then the Seraphim, and yet lesse then a worme; Sovereigne to ¹⁷⁰ all nature, and yet subject to naturall infirmities; Lord of life, life it selfe, and yet prisoner to Death; Before, and beyond all measures of Time, and yet Born at so many moneths, Circumcised at so many days, Crucified at so many years, Rose againe at so many Houres; How sure did God make himselfe of a companion in Christ, who united himselfe, in his godhead, so inseparably to him, as that that godhead left not that body, then when it lay dead in the grave, but staid with it then, as closely, as when he wrought his greatest miracles.

Beyond all this, God having thus married soule and body in one man, and man and God, in one Christ, he maries this Christ to the ¹⁸⁰ Church. Now, consider this Church in the Type and figure of the Church, the Arke; in the Arke there were more of every sort of cleane Creatures reserved, then of the uncleane; seven of those, for two of these: why should we feare, but that in the Church, there are more reserved for salvation then for destruction? And into that room (which was not a Type of the Church, but the very Church it selfe) in which they all met upon whitsunday, the holy Ghost came so as that they were enabled, by the gift of tongues, to convey, and propagate, and derive God, (as they did) to every nation under heaven: so much does God delight in man, so much does God desire to unite and asso-¹⁹⁰ ciate man unto him; and then, what shall disappoint, or frustrate Gods desires and intentions so farre, as that they should come to him, but singly, one by one, whom he calls, and wooes, and drawes by thousands, and by whole Congregations?

Be pleased to carry your considerations, upon another testimony of Gods love to the society of man, which is, his dispatch in making this match, his speed in gathering and establishing this Church; for, forwardnesse is the best argument of love, and dilatory interruptions by the way, argue no great desire to the end; disguises before, are shrewd prophecies of jealousies after: But God made hast to the consumma-²⁰⁰ tion of this Marriage, between Christ and the Church. Such words as those to the Colossians, (and such words, that is, words to such purpose, there are divers) The Gospell is come unto you, as it is into all the world; And againe; It bringeth forth fruit, as it doth in you also; And so likewise, The Gospell which is preached to every creature which is under heaven; such words, I say, a very great part of the Antients have taken so literally, as thereupon to conclude, That in the life of the Apostles themselves, the Gospell was preached, and the Church established over all the world.

Quæ Instrumenta

Now will you consider also, who did this, what persons? cunning and crafty persons are not the best instruments in great businesses, if those businesses be good, as well as great. Here God imployed such persons, as would not have perswaded a man, that grasse was green, that blood was red, if it had been denyed unto them: Persons that could not have bound up your understanding, with a Syllogisme, nor have entredred, or mollified it with a verse: Persons that had nothing but that which God himselfe calls the foolishnesse of preaching, to bring Philosophers that argued, Heretiques that wrangled, Lucians, and Julians, men that whet their tongues, and men that whet their swords against God, to God.

Doctrina*

Unbend not this bowe, slacken not these holy thoughts, till you have considered, as well as how soone, and by what persons, so to what Doctrine, God brought them. Wee aske but St. Augustins question, Quis tantam multitudinem, ad legem, carni & sanguini contrariam, induceret, nisi Deus? Who but God himselfe, would have drawne the world to a Religion so contrary to flesh and blood? Take but one piece of the Christian Religion, but one article of our faith, in the same Fathers mouth; Res incredibilis resurrectio; That this body should be eaten by fishes in the sea, and then those fishes eaten by other men, or that one man should be eaten by another man, and so become both one man, and then that for all this assimilation, and union, there should arise two men, at the resurrection, Res incredibilis, sayes he, this resurrection is an incredible thing, Sed magis incredibile, totum mundum credidisse rem tam incredibilem, That all the world should so soone believe a thing so incredible, is more incredible, then the thing it selfe. That any should believe any, is strange, but more that all such believe all, that appertains to Christianity. The Valentinians, and the Marcionites, pestilent Heretiques, grew to a great number, Sed vix duo vel tres, de iisdem, eadem docebant, says Irenæus, scarce any two or three amongst them, were of one opinion. The Acatians,

²⁴⁰ the Eunomians, and the Macedonians, omnes Arium parentem agnoscunt, sayes the same Father, they all call themselves Arians, but they had as many opinions, not onely as names, but as persons. And that one Sect of Mahomet, was quickly divided, and sub-divided into 70 sects. But so God loved the world, the society and company of good soules, ut quasi una Domus Mundus, the whole world was as one well governed house; similiter credunt quasi una anima, all beleevd the same things, as though they had all but one soule; Constanter prædicabant, quasi unum os, At the same houre there was a Sermon at Jerusalem, and a Sermon at Rome, and both so like, for fundamentall ²⁵⁰ things, as if they had been preached out of one mouth.

[Joh. 3.16]

And as this Doctrine, so incredible in reason, was thus soone, and by these persons, thus uniformly preached over all the world, so shall it, as it doth, continue to the worlds end; which is another argument of Gods love to our company, and of his loathnesse to lose us. All Heresies, and the very names of the Heretiques, are so utterly perished in the world, as that, if their memories were not preserved in those Fathers which have written against them, we could finde their names no where. Irenæus, about one hundred and eighty yeers after Christ, may reckon about twenty heresies; Tertullian, twenty or thirty yeares ²⁶⁰ after him, perchance twenty seven; and Epiphanius, some a hundred and fifty after him, sixty; and fifty yeare after that, St. Augustine some ninety: yet after all these, (and but a very few yeares, after Augustine) Theodoret sayes, that in his time there was no one man alive, that held any of those heresies: That all those heresies should rot, being upheld by the sword, and that onely the Christian Religion should grow up, being mowed down by the sword, That one graine of Corne should be cast away, and many eares grow out of that, (as Leo makes the comparison) That one man should be executed, because he was a Christian, and all that saw him executed, and the Executioner himself, ²⁷⁰ should thereupon become Christians, (a case that fell out more then once, in the primitive Church) That as the flood threw down the Courts of Princes, and lifted up the Arke of God, so the effusion of Christian blood, should destroy heresies, and advance Christianity it self; this is argument abundantly enough, that God had a love to man, and a desire to draw man to his society, and in great numbers to bring them to salvation.

Durat adhuc

Reformatio

I will not dismisſe you from this conſideration, till you have brought it thus much nearer, as to remember a later testimony of Gods love to our company, in the reformation of Religion; A miracle scarce lesse, ²⁸⁰ then the first propagation thereof, in the primitive Church. In how few yeares, did God make the number of learned Writers, the number of persons of all qualities, the number of Kings, in whose Dominions the reformed Religion was exercised, equall to the number of them, who adhered to the Roman Church?

And yet, thou must not depart from this contemplation, till thou have made thy self an argument of all this; till thou have concluded out of this, that God hath made love to thy soule, thy weake soule, thy sick, and foule, and sinfull soule, That he hath written to thee, in all his Scriptures, sent Ambassage to thee, in all his preachers, presented ²⁹⁰ thee, in all his temporall, and spirituall blessings, That he hath come to thee, even in actions of uncleannesse, in actions of unfaithfulnesse towards men, in actions of distrustfulnesse towards God, and hath checked thy conscience, and delivered thee from some sins, even then when thou wast ready to commit them, as all the rest, (That that God, who is but one in himselfe, is yet three persons, That those three, who were all-sufficient to themselves, would yet make more, make Angels, make man, make a Christ, make him a Spouse, a Church, and first propagate that, by so weake men, in so hard a doctrine, and in so short a space, over all the world, and then reforme that Church againe, so ³⁰⁰ soone, to such a heighth) as these, I say, are to all the world, so be thou thy self, and Gods exceeding goodnesse to thee, an argument, That that God who hath shewed himself so loath to lose thee, is certainly loath to lose any other soule; but as he communicates himself to us all here, so he would have us all partake of his joy, and glory hereafter; he that fills his Militant Church thus, would not have his Triumphant Church empty.

Sigillati

So far we consider the accessiblenesse, the communicablenesse, the conversation of our good, and gracious God to us, in the generall. There is a more speciall manner intimated, even in the first word of ³¹⁰ our Text, After this; After what? After he had scene the servants of God sealed; sealed: This seale seales the contract betweene God and Man: And then consider how generall this seale is: First, God sealed us, in imprinting his Image in our soules, and in the powers thereof, at our creation; and so, every man hath this seale, and he hath it, as soone as he hath a soule: The wax, the matter, is in his conception; the seale, the forme, is in his quickning, in his inanimation; as, in Adam, the waxe was that red earth, which he was made of, the seale was that soule, that breath of life, which God breathed into him. Where the Organs of the body are so indisposed, as that this soule cannot exercise

³³⁰ wouldest not burne their picture, that loved thee, wilt thou betray the picture of thy Maker, thy Saviour, thy Sanctifier, to the torments of hell? Amongst the manifold and perpetuall interpretations of that article, He descended into hell, this is a new one, that thou sentest him to hell in thy soule: Christ had his Consummatum est, from the Jewes; he was able to say at last, All is finished, concerning them; shall he never have a Consummatum est from thee; never be at an end with thee? Never, if his Image must burne eternally in thy soule, when thou art dead, for everlasting generations.

Thus then we were sealed; all sealed; all had his image in our crea- ³⁴⁰ tion, in the faculties of our soules: But then we were all sealed againe, sealed in our very flesh, our mortall flesh, when the image of the invisible God, Christ Jesus, the onely Sonne of God, tooke our nature: for, as the Tyrant wished, that all mankinde were but one body, that he might behead all mankinde at a blow, so God tooke into his mercie, all mankinde in one person: As intirely, as all mankinde was in Adam, all mankinde was in Christ; and as the seale of the Serpent is in all, by originall sinne, so the seale of God, Christ Jesus, is on us all, by his assuming our nature. Christ Jesus tooke our souls, and our bodies, our whole nature; and as no Leper, no person, how infec-³⁵⁰ tiously soever he be diseased in his body, can say, surely Christ never

tooke this body, this Leprosie, this pestilence, this rottennesse, so no Leprous soule must say, Christ never tooke this pride, this adultery, this murder upon himself; he sealed us all in soule and body, when he tooke both, and though both dye, the soule in sin daily, the body in sicknesse, perchance this day, yet he shall afford a resurrection to both, to the soule here, to the body hereafter, for his seale is upon both.

In Baptismo

These two seales then hath God set upon us all, his Image in our soules, at our making, his Image, that is his Sonne, upon our bodies and soules, in his incarnation; And both these seales he hath set upon ³⁶⁰ us, then when neither we our selves, nor any body else knew of it: He sets another seale upon us, when, though we know not of it, yet the world, the congregation does, in the Sacrament of Baptisme, when the seale of his Crosse, is a testimony, not that Christ was borne, (as the former seale was) but that also he dyled for us; there we receive that seale upon the forehead, that we should conforme our selves to him, who is so sealed to us. And after all these seales, he offers us another, and another seale, Set me as a seale upon thy heart, and as a seale upon thine arme, says Christ to all us, in the person of the spouse; in the Heart, by a constant faith, in the Arme, by declaratory ³⁷⁰ works; for then are we sealed, and delivered, and witnessed; that's our full evidence, then have we made sure our salvation, when the works of a holy life, doe daily refresh the contract made with God there, at our Baptisme, and testifie to the Church, that we doe carefully remember, what the Church promised in our behalfe, at that time: for, otherwise, beloved, without this seale upon the arme, that is, a sted-fast proceeding in the works of a holy life, we may have received many of the other seales, and yet deface them all. Grieve not the holy Ghost, whereby you are sealed, unto the day of Redemption, says the Apostle: they were sealed, and yet might resist the Spirit, and grieve the Spirit, ³⁸⁰ and quench the Spirit, if by a continuall watchfulnesse over their particular actions, they did not refresh those seales (formerly received in their Creation, in Christs incarnation, in their Baptisme, and in their beginnings of faith) to themselves, and plead them to the Church, and to the world, by such a declaration of a holy life. But these seales being so many, and so universall, that argues still, that which we especially seek to establish, that is, the Accessiblenesse, the communicablenesse, the sociableness, the affection, (shall I say) the Ambition, that God hath, to have us all.

Eph. 4.30

Now how is this extensiveness declared here, in our text? It is ³⁹⁰ declared in the great number of those who were sealed, both before, and after; to the consideration of both which, we are invited, by this phrase, which beginnes the text, After this: for, before that John saw this, there were one hundred forty foure thousand sealed; Is that then, (that one hundred forty foure thousand) intended for a small number? If it had been so, it would rather have been said, of such a Tribe but twelve thousand, and but twelve thousand of such a Tribe; but God as expressing a joy, that there were so many, repeats his number of twelve thousand, twelve times over, of Juda twelve thousand, of Levi twelve thousand, and twelve thousand of every Tribe. So that then, ⁴⁰⁰ we may justly take this number of twelve and twelve thousand, for an indefinite, and uncertain number; and as Saint Augustine does, wheresoever he finds that number of twelve, (as the twelve Thrones, where the Saints shall judge the world, and divers such) we may take that number of twelve, and twelve, pro universitate salvandorum, that that number signifies, all those who shall be saved. If we should take the number to be a certaine and exact number, so many, and no more, yet this number hath relation to the Jews onely; And of the Jews, it is true, that there is so long a time of their exclusion, so few of them doe come in, since Christ came into the world, as that we may, with Saint ⁴¹⁰ Augustine, interpret that place of Genesis, where Abrahams seed is compared both to the Starres of heaven, and to the dust of the earth, that the Stars of heaven signifie those that shall be saved in heaven, and the dust of the earth, those that perish; and the dust of the earth may be more then the Stars of heaven; though (by the way) there are an infinite number of Stars more then we can distinguish, and so, by Gods grace, there may be an infinite number of soules saved, more then those, of whose salvation, we discern the ways, and the meanes. Let us embrace the way which God hath given us, which is, the knowledge of his Sonne, Christ Jesus: what other way God may take with ⁴²⁰ others, how he wrought upon Iob, and Naaman, and such others as were not in the Covenant, let us not inquire too curiously, determine too peremptorily, pronounce too uncharitably: God be blessed, for his declaring his good-wil towards us, and his will be done his way upon others. Truly, even those places, which are ordinarily understood of the paucity of the Jews, that shall be saved, will receive a charitable interpretation, and extension. God says, in Jeremy, I will take you, one out of a City, and two out of a family; yet he says, he wil do this therefore, because he is married to them; so that this seems to be an act of his love; And therefore, I had rather take it, that God would take

3.14 a particular care of them, one by one, then that he would take in but 27.12 one and one: As it is in that place of Esay, In that day ye shall be gathered one by one, o yee children of Israel; that is, in the day of Christ, of his comming to and toward Judgement; Howsoever they come in but thinly yet, by the way, yet the Apostle pleads in their behalfe thus, Hath God cast away his people? God forbid. At this present, says he, there is a Remnant; then when they had newly crucified Christ, God had a care of them. God hath given them the spirit of slumber, says he also; it is but a slumber, not a death, not a dead sleep. Have they stumbled that they should fall? Fall utterly?

⁴⁴⁰ God forbid. But says he, as concerning the Gospell, they are enemies, for your sakes; (that is, that room might be made for you the Gentiles) but, as touching election, they are beloved for their Fathers sakes; that is, they have interest by an ancient title, which God will never disannull. And therefore a great part, of the ancient, and later men too, doe interpret divers passages of Saint Paul, of a generall salvation of the Jews, that all shall be effectually wrought upon, to salvation, before the second comming of Christ. I end this, concerning the Jews, with this note, that in all these Tribes, which yeilded to this sealing, twelve thousand a peece, the Tribe of Dan is left out, it is not ⁴⁵⁰ said, that any were sealed of the Tribe of Dan; many have enquired the reason, and satisfied themselves over easily with this, that because Antichrist was to come of that Tribe, that Tribe is forsaken. It is true, that very many of the Fathers, Irenæus, Ambrose, Augustine, Gregory, (and more then these) have thought so, that Antichrist must be of that Tribe; but yet, for all that profession, which they make in the Roman Church, of adhering to the Fathers, one amongst them, says, Incertum, be the Fathers as clear, and as unanimous as they will in it, it is a very uncertain, a very disputable thing; and another says, fabulosum est, be the Fathers as earnest, as they will, it is but a poetickall and a fabulous ⁴⁶⁰ thing, that Antichrist must come of the Tribe of Dan. But he that hath Tostat.

Oleast.

most of the markes of Antichrist upon him, of any person in the world now, is thus far of the Tribe of Dan; Dan signifies Iudgement; And he will needs be the Judge of all faith, and of all actions too; and so severe a Judge, as to give an irrevocable Judgement of Damnation, upon all that agree not with them, in all points. Certainly, this Tribe of Dan, that is, of such uncharitable Judges of all other men, that will afford no salvation to any but themselves, are in the greatest danger to be left out, at this generall seale; nothing hinders our own salvation more, then to deny salvation, to all but our selves.

⁴⁷⁰ This then which was done before, though it concerne but the Jews, was in a great number, and was a great argument, of Gods sociable application of himselfe to man, but that which was after, was more, A great multitude, which no man could number, of all nations &c. Gods mercy was not confined, nor determined upon the Iews; Other sheep have I, which are not of this fold, says Christ, them also I must bring in: I must; it is expressed, not onely as an act of his good will, but of that eternall decree, to which, he had, at the making thereof, submitted himself: I must bring them; who are they? Many shall come from the east, and from the west, and shall sit downe with ⁴⁸⁰ Abraham, Isaac and Iacob, in the kingdom of heaven; from the Eastern Church, and from the Western Church too, from the Greek Church, and from the Latine too, and, (by Gods grace) from them that pray not in Latine too, from every Church, (so it be truly, and fundamentally a Church) Many shall come; How many? a multitude that no man can number: For, the new Ierusalem, in the Revelation, (which is heaven) hath twelve gates, three to every corner of the world; so that no place can be a stranger, or lacke accesse to it: Nay, it hath (says that Text) twelve foundations, Other foundation can no man lay, then that which is layd, Christ Iesus: But that first foundation-stone being kept, though it be not hewed, nor layd alike in every ⁴⁹⁰ place, though Christ be not preached, nor presented in the same manner, for outward Ceremonies, or for problematicall opinions, yet the foundation may remaine one, though it be, in such a sort, varied; and men may come in at any of the twelve gates, and rest upon any of the twelve foundations, for they are all gates, and foundations of one and the same Ierusalem; and they that enter, are a multitude that no man can number.

Mat. 7.13 ⁵⁰⁰ If then there be this sociable, this applyable nature in God, this large and open entrance for man, why does Christ call it a straite gate, and a narrow way? Not that it is strait in it self, but that we think it so, and, indeed, we make it so. Christ is the gate, and every wound of his admits the whole world. The Church is the gate; And in omnem terram, says David, she hath opened her mouth, and her voice is gone over all the world. His word is the gate; And, thy Commandement is exceeding broad, says David too; His word and his light reaches to all cases, and all distresses. Lata porta Diabolus; saith Saint Chrysostome, The Devill is a broad gate; but he tells us how he came to be so, Non magnitudine potestatis extensus, sed superbiæ licentia dilatatus; not that God put such a power into his hands, at first, as that we might ⁵¹⁰ not have resisted him, but that he hath usurp'd upon us, and we have given way to his usurpations: so, says that Father, Angusta porta Christus, Christ is a narrow gate, but he tels us also wherein, and in what respect, Non parvitate potestatis exiguus, sed humilitatis ratione collectus; Christ is not a narrow gate, so as that the greatest man may not come in, but called narrow, because he fits himselfe to the least child, to the simplest soule, that will come in: not so strait, as that all may not enter, but so strait as that there can come in but one at once, for he that will not forsake Father and Mother, and wife, and children for him, cannot enter in. Therefore we call the Devils way broad, because ⁵²⁰ men walke in that, with all their equipage, all their sumpters, all their state, all their sinnes; and therefore we call Christs way strait, because a man must strippe himselfe of all inordinate affections, of all desires of ill getting, and of all possessions that are ill gotten. In a word, it is not strait to a mans selfe, but if a man will carry his sinfull company, his sinfull affections with him, and his sinfull possessions, it is strait, for then he hath made himselfe a Camel, and to a Camel Heaven gate is as a needles eye: But it is better comming into heaven with one eye, then into hell with two; Better comming into heaven without Master, or Mistresse, then into hell for over-humouring of ⁵³⁰ either. There, The gates are not shut all day; says the Prophet, and, there is no night there; And here, if we shut the doore, yet Christ stands at the doore and knockes; Be but content to open thy doore, be but content to let him open it, and he will enter, and be but thou content to enter into his, content to be led in by his preaching, content to be drawn in by his benefits, content to be forced in by his corrections, and he will open his: since thy God would have dyed for thee, if there had been no man born but thou, never imagine, that he who lets in multitudes, which no man can number, of all Nations, &c. would ever shut out thee, but labour to enter there; ubi non intrat

2 Part

We have but ended our first part, The assurance which we have from Gods manner of proceeding, that Religion is not a sullen, but a cheerfull Philosophy, and salvation not cast into a corner, but displayed as the Sunne, over all. That which we called at first, our second part, must not be a Part, admit it for a Conclusion; It is that, and beyond that; It is beyond our Conclusion, for it is our everlasting endowment in heaven: and if I had kept minutes enough for it, who should have given me words for it? I will but paraphrase the words of

First, stabit, you shall stand; which is not, that you shall not sit, for the Saints shal sit and judg the world; and they shall sit at the right hand of God; It is not, that you shall not sit, nor that you shall not lie, for you shall lye in Abrahams bosom: But yet you shal stand, that is, you shall stand sure, you shall never fall, you shall stand, but yet you shall but stand, that is, remaine in a continuall disposition and ⁵⁶⁰ readinesse to serve God, and to minister to him. And therefore account no abundance, no height, no birth, no place here, to exempt you from standing and labouring in the service of God, since even your glorious state in heaven is but a station, but a standing in readinesse to doe his will, and not a posture of idlenesse: you shall stand, that is, stand sure, but you shall but stand, that is, still be bound to the service of God.

Stabunt

[1 Cor. 6.2]

Stabit ante Thronum; you shall stand, and stand before the Throne; Here in the militant Church, you stand, but you stand in the porch, there, in the triumphant, you shall stand in Sancto sanctorum, in the Quire, and the Altar. Here you stand, but you stand upon Ice, ⁵⁷⁰ perchance in high and therefore in slippery places; And at the judgement you shall stand, but stand at the barre; But when you stand

Ante

Thronum

Ante Agnum

before the Throne, you stand, (as it is also added in this place) before the Lamb: who having not opened his mouth, to save his owne fleece, when he was in the shearers hand, nor to save his own life, when he was in the slaughterers hand, will much lesse open his mouth to any repentant sinners condemnation, or upbrayd you with your former crucifyings of him, in this world, after he hath nailed those sinnes to that crosse, to which those sinnes nayled him.

Stolis
[2 Sam.
10.4]

You shall stand amicti stolis, (for so it follows) covered with Robes, ⁵⁸⁰ that is, covered all over: not with Adams fragmentary raggs of fig-leaves, nor with the halfe-garments of Davids servants: Though you have often offered God halfe-confessions, and halfe-repentances, yet if you come at last, to stand before the Lambe, his fleece covers all; hee shall not cover the sinnes of your youth, and leave the sinnes of your age open to his justice, nor cover your sinfull actions, and leave your sinfull words and thoughts open to justice, nor cover your own personall sinnes, and leave the sinnes of your Fathers before you, or the sinnes of others, whose sins your tentations produced and begot, open to justice; but as he hath enwrapped the whole world in one garment, ⁵⁹⁰ the firmament, and so cloathed that part of the earth, which is under our feet, as gloriously as this, which we live, and build upon: so those sinnes which we have hidden from the world, and from our own consciences, and utterly forgotten, either his grace shall enable us, to recollect, and to repent in particular, or (we having used that holy diligence, to examine our consciences so) he shall wrap up even those sinnes, which we have forgot, and cover all, with that garment of his own righteousness, which leaves no foulnesse, no nakednesse open.

Albis
Esa. 63.2

You shall be covered with Robes, All over; and with white Robes; That as the Angels wondred at Christ coming into heaven, in his ⁶⁰⁰ Ascension, Wherefore art thou red in thine Apparell, and thy garments like him that treadeth the wine fat? They wondred how innocence it selfe should become red, so shall those Angels wonder at thy coming thither, and say, Wherefore art thou white in thine apparell? they shall wonder how sinne it selfe shall be clothed in innocence.

Palma
Exod. 15.23

And in thy hand shall be a palm, which is the last of the endowments specified here. After the waters of bitterness, they came to seventy (to innumerable) palmes; even the bitter waters were sweetned, with another wood cast in: The wood of the Crosse of Christ Jesus, refreshes all teares, and sweetens all bitternesse, even in this life: but after these ⁶¹⁰ bitter waters, which God shall wipe from all our eies, we come, to the seventy, to the seventy thousand palms; infinite seales, infinite testimonies, infinite extensions, infinite durations of infinite glory: Go in, beloved, and raise your own contemplations, to a height worthy of this glory; and chide me for so lame an expressing of so perfect a state, and when the abundant spirit of God hath given you some measure, of conceiving that glory here, Almighty God give you, and me, and all, a reall expressing of it, by making us actuall possessors of that Kingdome, which his Sonne, our Saviour Christ Jesus hath purchased for us, with the inestimable price of his incorruptible blood.

⁶²⁰ Amen.

Preached at Pauls, upon Christmas Day, in the Evening. 1624.

ESAIAH 7.14. PART OF THE FIRST LESSON, THAT EVENING. THEREFORE THE LORD SHALL GIVE YOU A SIGNE; BEHOLD, A VIRGIN SHALL CONCEIVE, AND BEARE A SON, AND SHALL CALL HIS NAME IMMANUEL.

S^{AINT} Bernard spent his consideration upon three remarkable conjunctions, this Day. First, a Conjunction of God, and Man in one person, Christ Jesus; Then a conjunction of the incompatible Titles, Maid and Mother, in one blessed woman, the blessed Virgin Mary: And thirdly a conjunction of Faith, and the Reason of man, that so beleeves, and comprehends those two conjunctions. Let us accompany these three with another strange conjunction, in the first word of this Text, Propterea, Therefore; for that joynes the anger of God, and his mercy together. God chides and rebukes the King¹⁰ Achaz by the Prophet, he is angry with him, and Therefore, sayes the Text, because he is angry he will give him a signe, a seale of mercy, Therefore the Lord shall give you a signe, Behold, a Virgin, &c. This Therefore, shall therefore be a first part of this Exercise, That God takes any occasion to shew mercy; And a second shall be, The particular way of his mercy, declared here, The Lord shall give you a signe; And then a third and last, what this signe was, Behold, a Virgin, &c.

Divisio

In these three parts, we shall walk by these steps; Having made our entrance into the first, with that generall consideration, that Gods²⁰ mercy is alwaies in season, upon that station, upon that height we shall look into the particular occasions of Gods mercy here, what this King Achaz had done to alien God, and to avert his mercy, and in those two branches we shall determine that part. In the second, we shall also first make this generall entrance, That God persists in his own waies, goes forward with his own purposes, And then what his way, and his purpose here was, he would give them a signe: and farther we shall not extend that second part. In the third we have more steps to make; First, what this sign is in generall, it is, that there is a Redeemer given. And then how, thus; First, Virgo concipiet, a Virgin shall conceive, ³⁰ she shall be a Virgin then; And Virgo pariet, a Virgin shall bring forth, she shall be a Virgin then; And Pariet filium, she shall beare a Son, and therefore he is of her substance, not only man, but man of her; And this Virgin shall call this Son Immanuel, God with us, that is, God and Man in one person. Though the Angel at the Conception tell Ioseph, That he shall call his name Jesus, and tell Mary her selfe, that she shall call his name Jesus, yet the blessed Virgin her selfe shall have a further reach, a clearer illustration, She shall call his name Immanuel, God with us: Others were called Iesus, Iosuah was so, divers others were so; but, in the Scriptures there was never any but ⁴⁰ Christ called Immanuel. Though Iesus signifie a Saviour, Ioseph was able to call this childe Iesus, upon a more peculiar reason, and way of salvation then others who had that name, because they had saved the people from present calamities, and imminent dangers; for, the Angel told Ioseph, that he should therefore be called Iesus, because he should save the people from their sins; and so, no Iosuah, no other Iesus was a Iesus. But the blessed Virgin saw more then this; not only that he should be such a Iesus as should save them from their sins, but she saw the manner how, that he should be Immanuel, God with us, God and man in one person; That so, being Man, he might suffer, and ⁵⁰ being God, that should give an infinite value to his sufferings, according to the contract passed between the Father and him; and so he should be Iesus, a Saviour, a Saviour from sin, and this by this way and meanes. And then that all this should be established, and declared by an infallible signe, with this Ecce, Behold; That whosoever can call upon God by that name Immanuel, that is, confesse Christ to bee come in the flesh, that Man shall have an Ecce, a light, a sign, a token, an assurance that this Immanuel, this Jesus, this Saviour belongs unto him, and he shall be able to say, Ecce, Behold, mine eyes have seen thy salvation.

⁶⁰ We begin with that which is elder then our beginning, and shall over-live our end, The mercy of God. I will sing of thy mercy and judgement, says David; when we fixe our selves upon the meditation and modulation of the mercy of God, even his judgements cannot put us out of tune, but we shall sing, and be chearefull, even in them. As God made grasse for beasts, before he made beasts, and beasts for man, before he made man: As in that first generation, the Creation, so in the regeneration, our re-creating, he begins with that which was necessary for that which followes, Mercy before Judgement. Nay, to say that mercy was first, is but to post-date mercy; to preferre mercy but so, ⁷⁰ is to diminish mercy; The names of first or last derogate from it, for first and last are but ragges of time, and his mercy hath no relation to time, no limitation in time, it is not first, nor last, but eternall, everlasting; Let the Devill make me so far desperate as to conceive a time when there was no mercy, and he hath made me so far an Atheist, as to conceive a time when there was no God; if I despoile him of his mercy, any one minute, and say, now God hath no mercy, for that minute I discontinue his very Godhead, and his beeing. Later Gram-marians have wrung the name of mercy out of misery; Misericordia præsumit miseriam, say these, there could be no subsequent mercy, if ⁸⁰ there were no precedent misery; But the true roote of the word mercy, through all the Prophets, is Racham, and Racham is diligere, to love; as long as there hath been love (and God is love) there hath been mercy: And mercy considered externally, and in the practise and in the effect, began not at the helping of man, when man was fallen and become miserable, but at the making of man, when man was nothing. So then, here we consider not mercy as it is radically in God, and an essentiall attribute of his, but productively in us, as it is an action, a working upon us, and that more especially, as God takes all occasions to exercise that action, and to shed that mercy upon us: for particular ⁹⁰ mercies are feathers of his wings, and that prayer, Lord let thy mercy lighten upon us, as our trust is in thee, is our birdlime; particular mercies are that cloud of Quailes which hovered over the host of Israel, and that prayer, Lord let thy mercy lighten upon us, is our net to catch, our Gomer to fill of those Quailes. The aire is not so full of

Moats, of Atomes, as the Church is of Mercies; and as we can suck in no part of aire, but we take in those Moats, those Atomes; so here in the Congregation we cannot suck in a word from the preacher, we cannot speak, we cannot sigh a prayer to God, but that that whole breath and aire is made of mercy. But we call not upon you from this

¹⁰⁰ Text, to consider Gods ordinary mercy, that which he exhibites to all in the ministry of his Church; nor his miraculous mercy, his extraordinary deliverances of States and Churches; but we call upon particular Consciences, by occasion of this Text, to call to minde Gods occasionall mercies to them; such mercies as a regenerate man will call mercies, though a naturall man would call them accidents, or occurrences, or contingencies; A man wakes at midnight full of unclean thoughts, and he heares a passing Bell; this is an occasionall mercy, if he call that his own knell, and consider how unfit he was to be called out of the world then, how unready to receive that voice,

¹²⁰ for the name of Jesus, and wounded the sons of Sceva for exorcising in the name of Jesus, with that indignation, with that increpation, Iesus we know, and Paul we know, but who are ye? If I should declare what God hath done (done occasionally) for my soule, where he instructed me for feare of falling, where he raised me when I was fallen, perchance you would rather fixe your thoughts upon my illness, and wonder at that, then at Gods goodnesse, and glorifie him in that; rather wonder at my sins, then at his mercies, rather consider how ill a man I was, then how good a God he is. If I should inquire ¹³⁰ upon what occasion God elected me, and writ my name in the book of Life, I should sooner be afraid that it were not so, then finde a reason

12.20]

23.40]

why it should be so. God made Sun and Moon to distinguish seasons, and day, and night, and we cannot have the fruits of the earth but in their seasons: But God hath made no decree to distinguish the seasons of his mercies; In paradise, the fruits were ripe, the first minute, and in heaven it is alwaies Autumne, his mercies are ever in their maturity. We ask panem quotidianum, our daily bread, and God never sayes you should have come yesterday, he never sayes you must againe to morrow, but to day if you will heare his voice, to day he will heare

[Psa. 95.7]

¹⁴⁰ you. If some King of the earth have so large an extent of Dominion, in North, and South, as that he hath Winter and Summer together in his Dominions, so large an extent East and West, as that he hath day and night together in his Dominions, much more hath God mercy and judgement together: He brought light out of darknesse, not out of a lesser light; he can bring thy Summer out of Winter, though thou have no Spring; though in the wayes of fortune, or understanding, or conscience, thou have been benighted till now, wintred and frozen, clouded and eclipsed, damped and benumbed, smothered and stu-¹⁵⁰ pified till now, now God comes to thee, not as in the dawning of the day, not as in the bud of the spring, but as the Sun at noon to illustrate all shadowes, as the sheaves in harvest, to fill all penuries, all occasions invite his mercies, and all times are his seasons.

Achaz case

If it were not thus in generall, it would never have been so in this particular, in our case, in the Text, in King Achaz; If God did not seeke occasion to doe good to all, he would never have found occasion to doe good to King Achaz. Subjects are to look upon the faults of Princes, with the spectacles of obedience, and reverence, to their place, and persons; little and dark spectacles, and so their faults, and errors are to appeare little, and excusable to them; Gods perspective glasse, ¹⁶⁰ his spectacle is the whole world; he looks not upon the Sun, in his spheare onely, but as he works upon the whole earth: And he looks upon Kings, not onely what harme they doe at home, but what harme they occasion abroad; and through that spectacle, the faults of Princes, in Gods eye, are multiplyed, farre above those of private men. Achaz had such faults, and yet God sought occasion of Mercy. Iotham, his Father, is called a good King, and yet all Idolatry was not removed in his time, and he was a good King, for all that. Achaz is called ill, both because himselfe sacrificed Idolatrously, (And the King was a commanding person) And because he made the Priest Vriah to doe so, ¹⁷⁰ (And the Priest was an exemplar person) And because he made his Son commit the abominations of the heathen; (And the actions of the Kings Son pierce far in leading others.) Achaz had these faults, and yet God sought occasion of mercy. If the evening skie be red, you promise your selves a faire day, sayes Christ; you would not doe so if the evening were black and cloudy: when you see the fields white with corne, you say harvest is ready; you would not doe so if they were white with frost. If ye consent, and obey, you shall eat the good things of the Land, sayes God in the Prophet; shall ye doe so if you refuse, and rebell? Achaz did, and yet God sought occasion of mercy. There ¹⁸⁰ arise diseases for which there is no probatum est, in all the bookes of Physitians; There is scarce any sin of which we have not had experiments of Gods mercies; He concludes with no sin, excludes no occasion, precludes no person: And so we have done with our first part, Gods generall disposition, for the Rule, declared in Achaz case for the example.

Mat. 16.2

Joh. 4.35

Esay 1.19

Our second part consists of a Rule, and an Example too: The Rule, That God goes forward in his own wayes, proceeds, as he begun, in mercy; The Example, what his proceeding, what his subsequent mercy to Achaz was. One of the most convenient Hieroglyphicks of ¹⁹⁰ God, is a Circle; and a Circle is endlesse; whom God loves, hee loves to the end: and not onely to their own end, to their death, but to his end, and his end is, that he might love them still. His hailestones, and his thunder-bolts, and his showres of bloud (emblemes and instruments of his Judgements) fall downe in a direct line, and affect and strike some one person, or place: His Sun, and Moone, and Starres, (Emblemes and Instruments of his Blessings) move circularly, and communicate themselves to all. His Church is his chariot; in that, he moves more gloriously, then in the Sun; as much more, as his begotten Son exceeds his created Sun, and his Son of glory, and of his right ²⁰⁰ hand, the Sun of the firmament; and this Church, his chariot, moves in that communicable motion, circularly; It began in the East, it came to us, and is passing now, shining out now, in the farthest West. As the Sun does not set to any Nation, but withdraw it selfe, and returne againe; God, in the exercise of his mercy, does not set to thy soule, though he benight it with an affliction. Remember that our Saviour

2 Part

Christ himselfe, in many actions and passions of our humane nature, and infirmities, smothered that Divinity, and suffered it not to worke, but yet it was alwayes in him, and wrought most powerfully in the deepest danger; when he was absolutely dead, it raised him again: If

²¹⁰ Christ slumbred the God-head in himselfe, The mercy of God may be slumbred, it may be hidden from his servants, but it cannot be taken away, and in the greatest necessities, it shall break out. The Blessed Virgin was overshadowed, but it was with the Holy Ghost that overshadowed her: Thine understanding, thy conscience may be so too, and yet it may be the work of the Holy Ghost, who moves in thy darknesse, and will bring light even out of that, knowledge out of thine ignorance, clearnesse out of thy scruples, and consolation out of thy Dejection of Spirit. God is thy portion, sayes David; David does not speak so narrowly, so penuriously, as to say, God hath given thee thy

²²⁰ portion, and thou must look for no more; but, God is thy portion, and as long as he is God, he hath more to give, and as long as thou art his, thou hast more to receive. Thou canst not have so good a Title, to a subsequent blessing, as a former blessing; where thou art an ancient tenant, thou wilt look to be preferred before a stranger; and that is thy title to Gods future mercies, if thou have been formerly accustomed to them. The Sun is not weary with sixe thousand yeares shining; God cannot be weary of doing good; And therefore never say, God hath given me these and these temporall things, and I have scattered them wastfully, surely he will give me no more; These and these spirituall

²³⁰ graces, and I have neglected them, abused them, surely he will give me no more; For, for things created, we have instruments to measure them; we know the compasse of a Meridian, and the depth of a Diameter of the Earth, and we know this, even of the uppermost spheare in the heavens: But when we come to the Throne of God himselfe, the Orbe of the Saints, and Angels that see his face, and the vertues, and powers that flow from thence, we have no balance to weigh them, no instruments to measure them, no hearts to conceive them: So, for temporall things, we know the most that man can have; for we know all the world; but for Gods mercy, and his spirituall graces, as that

²⁴⁰ language in which God spake, the Hebrew, hath no superlative, so, that which he promises, in all that he hath spoken, his mercy hath no superlative; he shewes no mercy, which you can call his Greatest

Mercy, his Mercy is never at the highest; whatsoever he hath done for thy soule, or for any other, in applying himselfe to it, he can exceed that. Onely he can raise a Tower, whose top shall reach to heaven: The Basis of the highest building is but the Earth; But though thou be but a Tabernacle of Earth, God shall raise thee peece by peece, into a spirituall building; And after one Story of Creation, and another of Vocation, and another of Sanctification, he shall bring ²⁵⁰ thee up, to meet thy selfe, in the bosome of thy God, where thou wast at first, in an eternall election: God is a circle himselfe, and he will make thee one; Goe not thou about to square eyther circle, to bring that which is equall in it selfe, to Angles, and Corners, into dark and sad suspicions of God, or of thy selfe, that God can give, or that thou canst receive no more Mercy, then thou hast had already.

This then is the course of Gods mercy, He proceeds as he begun, which was the first branch of this second part; It is alwayes in motion, and alwayes moving towards All, alwaies perpendicular, right over every one of us, and alwayes circular, alwayes communicable to ²⁶⁰ all; And then the particular beame of this Mercy, shed upon Achaz here in our Text, is, Dabit signum, The Lord shall give you a signe. It is a great Degree of Mercy, that he affords us signes. A naturall man is not made of Reason alone, but of Reason, and Sense: A Regenerate man is not made of Faith alone, but of Faith and Reason; and Signes, externall things, assist us all.

In the Creation, it was part of the office of the Sunne and Moone, to be significative; he created them for signes, as well as for seasons: hee directed the Jews to Christ, by signes, by sacrifices, and Sacraments, and ceremonies; and he entertaines us with Christ, by the ²⁷⁰ same meanes to; we know where to finde Christ; In his House, in his Church; And we know at what signe he dwels; where the Word is rightly Preached, and the Sacraments duly administred. It is truly, and wisely said, Sic habenda fides verbo Dei, ut subsidia minimè contemnamus; We must so farre satisfie our selves, with the word of God, as that we despise not those other subsidiary helps, which God in his Church hath afforded us: which is true (as of Sacraments especially) so of other Sacramentall, and Rituall, and Ceremoniall things, which assist the working of the Sacraments, though they infuse no power into the Sacraments. For, therefore does the Prophet say, when

Calvin

V. 13 ²⁸⁰ Achaz refused a signe, Is it a small thing to weary (or disobey) men, but that you will weary (disobey) God himselfe? He disobeyes God, in the way of contumacy, who refuses his signes, his outward assistances, his ceremonies which are induced by his authority, derived from him, upon men, in his Church, and so made a part, or a help, of his ordinary service, as Sacraments and Sacramentall things are.

There are signes of another sort, not fixed by Gods Ordinance, but signes which particular men, have sometimes desired at Gods hand, for a farther manifestation of Gods will, in which, it is not, otherwise, already fully manifested, and revealed. For, to seeke such signes, in ²⁹⁰ things which are sufficiently declared by God, or to seeke them, with a resolution, That I will leave a duty undone, except I receive a signe, this is to tempt God, and to seeke a way to excuse my selfe, for not doing that, which I was bound to doe, by the strength of an old commandement, and ought not to look for a new signe. But the greatest fault in this kinde, is, that if God, of his abundant goodnesse, doe give me a signe, for my clearer directions, and I resist that signe, I dispute against that signe, I turne it another way, upon nature, upon fortune, upon mistaking, that so I may goe mine owne way, and not be bound, by beleeving that signe to be from God, to goe that way, ³⁰⁰ to which God by that signe calls me. And this was Achaz case; God spoke unto him, and said, Aske a signe (that he would deliver him, from the enemy, that besieged Jerusalem) and he said, I will not aske a signe, nor tempt God; For, though St. Augustine, and some with him, ascribe this refusall of Achaz, to a religious modesty, yet St. Hierome, and with him, the greatest party, justly impute this, for a fault to Achaz: both because the signe was offered him from God, and not sought by himselfe, (which is the case that is most subject to error) And because the Prophet, who understood Gods minde, and the Kings minde to, takes knowledge of it, as of a great fault, In this, ³¹⁰ thou hast contemned, and wearied, not Man but God. For, though there be but a few cases, in which we may put God to give a signe, (for Christ calls the Pharisees an evill, and an adulterous generation, therefore, because they sought a signe) yet God gave Moses a signe, of a Rod changed into a Serpent, and a signe of good flesh changed into leprous, and leprous into good, unasked: And after, Abraham askes a signe, whereby shall I know, that I shall inherit the land?

and God gave him a signe. So Gideon, in a modest timorousnesse askes a signe, and presses God to a second signe: First, he would have all the dew upon the fleece, and then, none of the dew upon the ³²⁰ fleece. God does give signes, and when he does so, he gives also irradiations, illustrations of the understanding, that they may be discerned to be his signes; and when they are so, it is but a pretended modesty, to say, we will not tempt God to ask a sign, we will not trouble God to tell us whether this be a sign or no, but against all significations from God, goe on, as though all were but naturall accidents.

God gives signes rectè petentibus, to them that aske them upon due grounds, (so to Abraham, so to Gideon) And it is too long for this time, to put cases, when a man may or may not put God to a signe; He gives signes also Non petentibus, without being asked, to illustrate ³³⁰ the case, and to confirme the person, and so he did to Moses. Both these are high expressions of his mercy; for what binds God, to begin with man, and give him a signe before he aske; or to waite upon man, and give it him, when he asks? But the highest of all, is, to persever in his mercy so far, as to give a signe, though upon the offer thereof, it be refused; And that is Achaz case: Aske ye, says God, And, I will not, says Achaz, and then, It is not Quamvis, for all that, though thou refuse, but it is Propterea, Therefore, because thou refuset, The Lord himselfe shall give thee a signe. His fault is carried thus high: Because he had treasure to pay an army, because he had contracted with ³⁴⁰ the Assyrians to assist him with men, therefore he refuses the assistance offerd by the Prophet from God, and would faine goe his owne wayes, and yet would have a religious pretext, He will not tempt God. Nay his fault is carried thus much higher, That which we read, Non tentabo, I will not tempt, is in the Originall, Nasas; and Nasas is non Extollam, non glorificabo, I will not glorifie God so much, that is, I will not be beholden to God for this victory, I will not take him into the league for this action, I will do it of my selfe: And yet, (and then, who shall doubt of the largenesse of Gods mercy?) God proceeds in his purpose: Aske a signe, will ye not? Therefore the Lord shall give ³⁵⁰ you a signe: Because you will doe nothing for your selfe, the Lord shall doe all; which is so transcendent a mercy, as that, howsoever God afforded it to Achaz here, we can promise it to no man hereafter.

We are come to our third part, which is more peculiar to this Day:

Essay 9.6

It is, first, what the signe is in generall, And then, some more particular circumstances, Behold a Virgin shall conceive, &c. In generall then, the signe that God gives Achaz and his company, is, That there shall bee a Messias, a Redeemer given. Now, how is this future thing, (There shall be a Messias) a signe of their present deliverance from that siege? First, In the notion of the Prophet, it was not a future thing; for, as in Gods owne sight, so in their sight, to whom he opens ³⁶⁰ himselfe, future things are present. So this Prophet says, Puer datus, filius natus, unto us a child is borne, unto us a Son is given: He was not given, he was not borne in six hundred yeares after that; but such is the clearenesse of a Prophets sight, such is the infallibility of Gods declared purpose. So then, if the Prophet could have made the King beleieve, with such an assurednesse, as if he had seene it done, that God would give a deliverance, to all mankinde, by a Messias, that had beene signe enough, evidence enough to have argued thereupon, That God who had done so much a greater worke, would also give ³⁷⁰ him a deliverance from that enemy, that pressed him then: If I can fixe my selfe, with the strength of faith, upon that which God hath done for man, I cannot doubt of his mercy, in any distresse: If I lacke a signe, I seeke no other but this, That God was made man for me; which the Church and Church-writers, have well expressed by the word Incarnation, for that acknowledges, and denotes, that God was made my flesh: It were not so strange, that he who is spirit, should be made my spirit, my soule, but he was made my flesh: Therefore have the Fathers delighted themselves, in the variation of that word; so far, as that Hilarie cals it Corporationem, That God assumed my ³⁸⁰ Body; And Damascen cals it Inhumanationem, That God became this man, soule and body; And Irenæus cals it Adunationem, and Nysen Contemperationem, A mingling, says one, an uniting, saies the other, of two, of God and man, in one person. Shall I aske, what needs all this? what needed God to have put himselfe to this? I may say with S. Augustine, Alio modo poterat Deus nos liberare, sed si aliter faceret, similiter vestræ stultitiæ displiceret: What other way soever God had taken for our salvation, our curiosity would no more have beene satisfied in that way, than in this: But God having chosen the way of Redemption, which was the way of Justice, God could do

esset inimicus, saies Irenæus; As, if a man should get a battaile by the power of the Devill, without fighting, this were not a just victory; so, if God, in mans behalfe, had conquered the devill, without man, without dying, it had not beene a just conquest. I must not aske why God tooke this way, to Incarnate his Son; And shall I aske how this was done? I doe not aske how Rheubarb, or how Aloes came by this, or this vertue, to purge this, or this humour in my body: In talibus rebus, tota ratio facti, est potentia facientis: Even in naturall things,

August.

⁴⁰⁰ who infused that vertue into that creature. And therefore much more, when we come to these supernaturall points, such as this birth of Christ, we embrace S. Basils modesty, and abstinence, Nativitas ista silentio honoretur, This mysterie is not so well celebrated, with our words, and discourse, as with a holy silence, and meditation: Immo potius ne cogitationibus permittatur, Nay, (saies that Father) there may be danger in giving our selves leave, to thinke or study too much of it. Ne dixeris quando, saies he, præteri hanc interrogationem: Aske not thy selfe overcuriously, when this mystery was accomplished; be not over-vehement, over-peremptory, (so far, as to the perplexing of ⁴¹⁰ thine owne reason and understanding, or so far, as to the despising of the reasons of other men) in calculating the time, the day or houre of this nativity: Præteri hanc interrogationem, pass over this question, in good time, and with convenient satisfaction, Quando, when Christ was borne; But noli inquirere Quomodo, (saies S. Basil still) never come to that question, how it was done, cum ad hoc nihil sit quod responderi possit, for God hath given us no faculties to comprehend it, no way to answer it. That's enough, which we have in S. Iohn, Every spirit, that confesses, that Iesus is come in the flesh, is of God: ⁴²⁰ for, since it was a comming of Iesus, Iesus was before; so he was God; and since he came in the flesh, hee is now made man; And, that God and Man, are so met, is a signe to mee, that God, and I, shall never bee parted.

This is the signe in generall; That God hath had such a care of all men, is a signe to me, That he hath a care of me: But then there are signes of this signe; Divers; All these; A Virgin shall conceive, A Virgin shall bring forth, Bring forth a Son, And (whatsoever have been prophesied before) she shall call his name Immanuel.

Virgo

First, a Virgin shall be a mother, which is a very particular signe, and was seene but once. That which Gellius, and Plinie say, that a Virgin ⁴³⁰ had a child, almost 200. yeares before Christ, that which Genebrard saies, that the like fell out in France, in his time, are not within our faith, and they are without our reason; our faith stoopes not downe to them, and our Reason reaches not up to them; of this Virgin in our text, If that be true, which Aquinas cites out of the Roman story, that in the times of Constantine and Irene, upon a dead body found in a sepulchre, there was found this inscription, in a plate of gold, Christus nascetur ex Virgine, & ego credo in eum, Christ shall be borne of a Virgin, and I beleeve in that Christ, with this addition, in that inscription, O Sol, sub Irenæ, & Constantini temporibus, iterum me ⁴⁴⁰ videbis, Though I be now buried from the sight of the sun, yet in Constantines time, the sun shall see me againe; If this be true, yet our ground is not upon such testimonie; If God had not said it, I would never have beleevd it. And therefore I must have leave to doubt of that which some of the Roman Casuists have delivered, That a Virgin may continue a virgin upon earth, and receive the particular dignity of a Virgin in Heaven, and yet have a child, by the insinuation and practise of the Devill; so that there shall be a father, and a mother, and yet both they Virgins. That this Mother, in our text, was a Virgin, is a peculiar, a singular signe, given, as such, by God; never done but ⁴⁵⁰ then; and it is a singular testimony, how acceptable to God, that state of virginity is; Hee does not dishonour physick, that magnifies health; nor does hee dishonour marriage, that praises Virginity; let them embrace that state, that can; and certainly, many more might doe it, then do, if they would try whether they could, or no; and if they would follow S. Cyprians way, Virgo non tantum esse, sed & intelligi esse debet, & credi: It is not enough for a virgin to bee a virgin in her owne knowledge, but she must governe her selfe so, as that others may see, that she is one, and see, that shee hath a desire, and a disposition, to continue so still; Ita, ut nemo, cum virginem viderit, dubitet an sit ⁴⁶⁰ virgo, saies that Father, She must appeare in such garments, in such language, and in such motions, (for, as a wife may weare other clothes, so she may speake other words, then a virgin may do) as they that see her, may not question, nor dispute, whether she be a maid or no. The word in the Text, is derived à latendo, from retiring, from privatenesse: And Tertullian, who makes the note, notes withall, that Ipsa concupiscentia non latendi, non est pudica, The very concupis-cence of conversation, and visits, is not chaste: Studium placendi, publicatione sui, periclitatur, saies the same Author: Curious dressings are for publique eyes; and the Virgin that desires to publish her 470 selfe, is weary of that state: It is usefully added by him, Dum percu- titur oculis alienis, frons duratur, & pudor teritur, the eyes of others, that strike upon her, (if she be willing to stand out that battery) dry up that blood, that should blush, and weare out that chastity, which should be preserved. So precious is virginity in Gods eye, as that hee lookes upon that, with a more jealous eye, than upon other states.

This blessed Mother of God, in our text, was a Virgin: when?
Virgo concipiet, saies our Text, A Virgin shall conceive, when she conceived, she was a Virgin. There are three Heresies, all noted by S. Augustine, that impeach the virginity of this most blessed Woman: 480 The Cerinthians said she conceived by ordinary generation; Iovinian said, she was delivered by ordinary meanes; And Helvidius said, she had children after: All against all the world besides themselves, and against one another. For the first, that is enough which S. Basil sayes, that if the word Virgin in our text signified no more but adolescentu- lam, a yong woman (as they pretend) it had been an impertinent, an absurd thing for the Prophet to have made that a sign, and a wonder, that a yong woman should have a childe. This is enough, but that is abundantly enough, that S. Matthew, who spoke with the same spirit that Esay did, sayes in a word, which can admit no mis-interpre-490 tation, That that was fulfilled which Esay had said, A Virgin shall conceive; S. Matthews word without question, is a Virgin, and not a yong woman, and S. Matthew took Esaies word to be so too; and S. Matthew (at least he that spake in S. Matthew) did not, could not mistake, and mistake himself, for it was one and the same Holy Ghost that spake both. Christ sayes therefore of himself, vermis sum, I am a worm, but sayes S. Ambrose, vermis de Manna, a worm out of a pure substance, a holy Man, from a blessed Virgin; Virgo concipit, she was a Virgin then, then when she had conceived.

She was so to, In partu, then when she was delivered; Iovinian 500 denied that: A better then he (Tertullian) denied it: Virgo quantum à viro, non quantum à partu, says he, she was such a Virgin as knew

Concepit

Mat. 1.23

Ps. 22.[6]
[22 : 21 F as in Vulg.]

no man, not such a Virgin as needed no midwife: Virgo concepit, sayes he, in partu nupsit, a Virgin in her conception, but a wife in the deliverance of her Son. Let that be wrapped up amongst Tertullians errors, he had many; The text cleares it, A virgin shall conceive, a virgin shall beare a Son: The Apostles Creed cleares it, sayes S. Augustine, when it sayes, Born of the Virgin Mary; and S. Ambrose cleares it, when hee says, with such indignation, De via iniquitatis produntur dicere, virgo concepit, sed non virgo generavit, It is said, ⁵¹⁰ that there are some men so impious, as to deny that she remained a Virgin at the birth of her Son: S. Ambrose wondred there should be, scarce beleevd it to be any other then a rumour, or a slander, that there could be any so impious, as to deny that: And yet there have beene some so impious, as to charge Calvin, with that impiety, with denying her to be a Virgin then; It is true, he makes it not a matter of faith, to defend her perpetuall virginity; but that's not this case, of her Virginity in her Deliverance: And even of that, (of her perpetuall virginity) he saies thus, Nemo unquam quæstionem movebit, nisi curiosus, nemo pertinaciter insistet, nisi contentiosus rixator; He ⁵²⁰ is over-curious, that will make any doubt of it; but no man will persist in the denyall of it, but a contentious wrangler; And in that very point, S. Basil saies fully as much, as Calvin. But, at his birth, and after his birth, there is evidence enough in this text, A Virgin shall conceive, A Virgin shall bring forth, A Virgin shall call him Immanuel, In all those future, and subsequent Acts, still it is the same person, and in the same condition.

Cramerus

Filium

Pariet, & pariet filium, She shall bring forth a Son; If a Son, then of the substance of his Mother; that the Anabaptists deny; But had it not beene so, Christ had not beene true Man, and then, man were ⁵³⁰ yet unredeemed. He is her Son, but not her ward; his Father cannot dye: Her Son, but yet he asked her no leave, to stay at Jerusalem, nor to dispute with the Doctors, nor to goe about his Fathers worke: His settling of Religion, his governing the Church, his dispensing of his graces, is not by warrant from her: They that call upon the Bishop of Rome, in that voyce, Impera Regibus, command Kings and Emperors, admit of that voyce, Impera filio, to her, that she should command her Sonne. The naturall obedience of children to Parents, holds not in such civill things, as are publique; A woman may be a Queen-

Dowager, and yet a subject; The blessed Virgin Mary may be in a high ⁵⁴⁰ ranke, and yet no Sovereigne; Blessed art thou amongst women, saies the Angell to her; Amongst women, above women; but not above any person of the Trinity, that she should command her Son. Luther was awake, and risen, but he was not readie; Hee had seene light, and looked toward it, but yet saw not so clearly by it, then, when he said, That the blessed Virgin was of a middle condition, betweene Christ, and man; that man hath his conception, and his quickning (by the infusion of the soule) in originall sin; that Christ had it in neither, no sin in his conception, none in his inanimation, in the infusion of his soule; But, saies Luther, howsoever it were at the con-⁵⁵⁰ ception, certainly at the inanimation, at the quickning, she was preserved from originall sin. Now, what needs this? may I not say, that I had rather be redeemed by Christ Jesus then bee innocent? rather be beholden to Christs death, for my salvation, then to Adams standing in his innocencie? Epiphanius said enough, Par detrimentum afferunt religioni, they hurt Religion as much, that ascribe too little, to the blessed Virgin, as they who ascribe too much; much is due to her, and this amongst the rest, That she had so cleare notions, above all others, what kind of person, her Son was, that as Adam gave names, according to natures, so the Prophet here leaves it to her, to name her ⁵⁶⁰ Son, according to his office, She shall call his name Immanuel.

Luke [1.28]

Wee told you at first, that both Ioseph and Mary, were told by the Angel, that his name was to be Jesus, and we told you also, that others, besides him, had beene called by that name of Jesus: but, as, though others were called Jesus, (for Iosuah is called so, Heb. 4.8. If Jesus had given them rest; that is, If Iosuah had &c. And the son of Iosedech is called so, throughout the Prophet Aggai) yet there is observed a difference in the pointing, and sounding of those names, from this our Jesus: so though other women were called Mary, as well as the blessed Virgin, yet the Euangelists, evermore make a difference, betweene ⁵⁷⁰ her name, and the other Maries; for Her they call Mariam, and the rest Maria. Now this Jesus, in this person, is a reall, an actuall Saviour, he that hath already really, and actually accomplished our salvation;
But the blessed Virgin had a clearer illustration, then all that; for she onely knew, or she knew best, the capacity, in which he could be a Saviour, that is, as he is Immanuel, God with us; for she, and she

onely knew, that he was the Sonne of God, and not of naturall generation by man. How much is enwrapped in this name Immanuel, and how little time to unfold it? I am afraid none at all; A minute will serve to reapeate that which S. Bernard saies, and a day, a life will ⁵⁸⁰ not serve to comprehend it; (for to comprehend is not to know a thing, as far as I can know it, but to know it as far, as that thing can be knowne; and so onely God, can comprehend God.) Immanuel est verbum infans, saies the Father; He is the ancient of daies, and yet in minority; he is the Word it selfe, and yet speechlesse; he that is All, that all the Prophets spoke of, cannot speake: He addes more, He is Puer sapiens, but a child, and yet wiser then the elders, wiser in the Cradle, then they in the Chaire: Hee is more, Deus lactens, God, at whose breasts all creatures suck, sucking at his Mothers breast, and such a Mother, as is a maid. Immanuel is God with us; it is not we ⁵⁹⁰ with God: God seeks us, comes to us, before wee to him: And it is God with us, in that notion, in that termination, El, which is Deus fortis, The powerfull God; not onely in infirmity, as when hee died in our nature, but as he is Deus fortis, able and ready to assist, and deliver us, in all encumbrances; so he is with us; And with us, usque ad consummationem, till the end of the world, in his Word, and in the Sacraments: for, though I may not say, as some have said, That by the word of Consecration, in the administration of the Sacrament, Christ is so infallibly produced, as that, if Christ had never been incarnate before, yet, at the pronouncing of those words of consecra-⁶⁰⁰ tion, he must necessarily be incarnate then, yet I may say, that God is as effectually present, with every worthy receiver, as that hee is not more effectually present with the Saints in Heaven.

Cornelius

Ecce[Rom.
16.20]

And this is that, which is intimated in that word, which we seposed at first, for the last of all, Ecce, Behold; Behold, a Virgin shall conceive, &c. God does not furnish a roome, and leave it darke; he sets up lights in it; his first care was, that his benefits should be seene; he made light first, and then creatures, to be seene by that light: He sheds himselfe from my mouth, upon the whole auditory here; he powres himselfe from my hand, to all the Communicants at the table; ⁶¹⁰ I can say to you all here, The grace of our Lord Iesus Christ be with you, and remaine with you all; I can say to them all there, The Body of our Lord Iesus Christ which was given for you, preserve you to everlasting life: I can bring it so neare; but onely the worthy hearer, and the worthy receiver, can call this Lord, this Jesus, this Christ, Immanuel, God with us; onely that Virgin soule, devirginated in the blood of Adam, but restored in the blood of the Lambe, hath this Ecce, this testimony, this assurance, that God is with him; they that have this Ecce, this testimony, in a rectified conscience, are Godfathers to this child Jesus, and may call him Immanuel, God with us; for, as no ⁶²⁰ man can deceive God, so God can deceive no man; God cannot live in the darke himselfe, neither can he leave those, who are his, in the darke: If he be with thee, he will make thee see, that he is with thee; and never goe out of thy sight, till he have brought thee, where thou canst never goe out of his.

Number 9.

A Sermon Preached at Saint Dunstan's upon New-Years-day, 1624. [1624/5]

GEN. 17.24. ABRAHAM HIMSELFE WAS NINETY NINE YEARES OLD, WHEN THE FORESKIN OF HIS FLESH WAS CIRCUMCISED.

THIS is the place where Circumcision began, and this is the Day, when Circumcision ended; in this Scripture it was Instituted, in the person of Abraham; and upon this Day it was perfected and consummated in the person of Christ Jesus: for, though Circumcision were admitted in a few cases, in the Apostles time, after Christ, yet that was, as dead herbs are re-admitted into medicines in the winter, when fresh and green herbs cannot be had of that kind: So Circumcision was sometimes admitted for peace, and to avoid scandall, and the better to propagate the Church, after the vertue thereof was

¹⁰ extinguished in Christ. In the Institution thereof in this Text, we will consider Abrahams ready, and exact obedience: In the Consummation thereof, in the person of Christ, we will consider that, to which, this Circumcision had relation, that is, the spirituall Circumcision of our hearts. It is a Text well handled, and it is a Day well spent, if the Text teach us to obey God readily, and immediately, what inconveniences soever present themselves in the way, and if the celebration of the Day, teach us to come this Day, to that which is the true Circumcision, the Circumcision of the Heart. In the first, in Abraham's example, we shall passe by these steps: First, that though there be

²⁰ allowed to us an Omnia probate, a Triall of all things, and a spirit to discerne spirits; yet when once it appeares to us, to be a commandement of God, there's a fine leavied, all Titles concluded, no more claime to be made by our understanding, our reason, but a present, and an exact obedience must be given to it. Secondly, that in par-

Divisio

tical Men, and in particular cases, there may arise tentations, objections, reasons, why a Man might forbear altogether, or at least defer the execution of such a commandement, as there may have done in Abraham's case, as we shall see anon. Thirdly, that though such tentations doe arise in us out of our infirmities, yet God gives his ³⁰ Children strength to overcome those difficulties, and to oppose stronger reasons against those reasons, and so to come to a willing obedience to his will. And then lastly, the triumph that belongs to this victory; which we shall find, in considering what benefit Abraham received by this obedience in his Circumcision: And these will be the branches of our first part, rising out of the Institution of Circumcision, in the person of Abraham at that great age, First, that Gods manifest will must not be disputed, nor reasoned upon: Secondly, that Mans corrupt nature will offer reasons against it: Thirdly, that God will give the issue with the tentation, reason above that reason: And lastly, he will

First then, for our exact obedience to that which God exacts of us, it is well said by Luther, Depuerascendum est, cum agitur de obedientia Dei: when the question is, whether this, or this be commanded by God or no, when traditions and additions of men, are imposed upon us, as commandements of God, here's no Depuerascendum in this case, this is no Childs-play; then, viriliter agendum, (as the Apostle speaks) we must quit our selves like men, we must dispute like Men, (like learned men) preach like Men, (like Zealous Men) pray like men (like devout Men) resist like Men, (like valiant Men) or at least, ⁵⁰ (in cases where we may not resist) suffer like Men, (like constant Christian Men.) But when the question is, De obedientia Dei, that this is agreed to be the will of God, and all the question is, whether God might not be content to accept an obedience to some part of it, or to all of that hereafter, but not now, whether God would not forgive the debt, or at least give day for the payment of it; either when we are old, or by legacies to pious uses, when we die, when this is the question, Depuerascendum est, we must grow Children again; we must not onely, not argue, not dispute against it (which are acts of men, of strong and able understandings) but we must return to the first weak-

quæstio, Quare; saies Luther also, It is a Dangerous and Infectious Monosyllable, How or Why: If I will aske a reason, why God commands such a thing; first, Periculosum est, It is Dangerous; for, I have nothing to answer me, but mine owne reason, and that affords not Lead enough, nor Line enough, to sound the depth of Gods proceedings, nor length enough, nor strength enough to reach so farre, and therefore I may mistake the reason, and goe upon false grounds. So, Periculosum est, It is a Dangerous question, and a lost question, be-⁷⁰ cause I can have no certaine answer; and it is an infectious question too, for here is one coale of the Devils fire, of his pride, kindled in me; as the Devil said, Similis ero Altissimo, I will be like the Highest, and see whether I may not stand by my selfe, without any Influence from God, without any Dependance upon God: so, in our case, I will be so farre equall to God, as that I will measure his actions by my reason, and not doe his Commandements till I know why he commanded them: And then, when the infection is got into a House, who can say, it shall end here in this Person, and kill no more; or it shall end this weeke, and last no longer? So if that infectious inquisition, that Quare, ⁸⁰ (Why should God command this or this particular?) be entred into me, all my Humilitie is presently infected, and I shall looke for a reason, why God made a world, or why he made a world no sooner then 6000. yeares agoe, and why he saves some, and why but some, and I shall examine God upon all the Interrogatories that I can frame, upon the Creed (why I should believe a Sonne of a Virgin without a Man, or believe the Sonne of God to descend into Hell) Or frame upon the Pater Noster, (why I should worship such a God, that must be prayed to, not to leade me into temptation) Or frame upon the Ten Commandements, why after all is done and heapt, for any sinfull ⁹⁰ action, yet I should be guilty of all, for coveting in my heart another mans horse or house. And therfore Luther pursues it farther, with words of more vehemence, Odiosa & exitialis vocula, Quare, It is an Execrable and Damnable Monosyllable, Why; it exasperates God, it ruins us: For, when we come to aske a reason of his actions, either we doubt of the goodnesse of God, that he is not so carefull of us, as we would be; or of his power, that he cannot provide for us, so well as we could doe; or of his wisdome, that he hath not grounded his Commandements so well as we could have advised him: whereas Saint

Augustine saies justly, Qui rationem quærit voluntatis Dei, aliquid majus Deo quærit, He that seekes a reason of the will of God, seekes for something greater then God. It was the Devill that opened our eies in Paradise, it is our parts to shut them so farre, as not to gaze upon Gods secret purposes. God guided his Children as well by a Pillar of Cloud, as by a Pillar of Fire, and both, Cloud and Fire, were equally Pillars: There is as much strength in, and as safe relying upon some ignorances, as some knowledges; for God provided for his people, as well in this, that he hid Moses body from them, as that he revealed other Mysteries to them, by him. All is well summ'd and collected by Saint Augustine, Dominus cur jusserit, viderit; faciendum est à serviente, quod jusserit: Why God commands any thing, God himselfe knowes; our part is, not to enquire why, but to doe what he commands.

This is the Rule: 'Tis true, there should not be: but yet is there not sometimes, in the minds and mouths of good and godly men, a Quare, a reasoning, a disputing against that which God hath commanded or done? The murmuring of the Children in the Desert, had still this Quare, Quare eduxisti, Wherefore have you brought us hither to die here, in this miserable place, where there is no Seed, no Figges, no Vines, no Pomegranates, no Water? Saul had this Quare, this rebellious inquisition, upon that Commandement of God against the Amalekites, Slay both Man and Woman, Infant and Suckling, Oxe and Sheep, Camell and Asse: And from this Quare, from this disputation of his, arose that conclusion, That it were better to spare some for Sacrifice, then to destroy all: But though his pretence had a religious colour, that would not justifie a slacknesse in obeying the manifested will of God; for, for this, God repented that he made him King, and told him that he had more pleasure in Obedience, then in Sacrifice. But, to come to better men then the Israelites in the Wildernesse, or Saul in his Government, Job, though he, and his Friends held out long, (They sate upon the ground seven daies and seven nights, and none spoke a word) yet at last fell into these Quares, Why did I not die in the birth? or, why sucked I the breast? Peter himselfe had this reluctance; and though that were out of piety, yet he was chidden for it, Quare lavas, saies he, Lord, doest thou wash my feet? thou shalt never wash my feet: till Christ was faine to say, If I wash thee not, thou shalt have no part with me.

Upon this common infirmitie, inherent in the best men that may (and not unlikely) be, that when God commanded Abraham, at that great age to circumcise himselfe, there might arise such Quares, such 140 scruples and doubts, as there, in Abrahams minde, (for, as Saint Paul saies of himselfe, If any man thinke he hath whereof to trust in the flesh, much more I, Circumcised, an Hebrew, an Israelite, a Pharisee, a Zealous Servant in the persecution, and in righteousness unblameable) So if any man might have taken this libertie to have disputed with God, upon his precepts, Abraham might have done it; for, when Phil. 3.[4 and 5]

 God called him out to number the Starres, (which was, even to Art, impossible) and promised him, that his seed should equall them, (which was, in Nature, incredible) for all this Incredibilitie and Impossibilitie, Abraham believed, and this was accounted to him for 150 Righteousnesse: And Abraham had declared his easie, and forward, and implicit faith in God, when God called him, and he went out, not knowing whither he went: And therefore when God offered him a new seale, Circumcision, Abraham might have said, Quare sigillum? What needs a seale betweene thee and me? I have used to take thy word before, and thou hast tried me before: But Abraham knew that Obedience was better then wit or disputation; for, though Obedience and good works, do not beget faith, yet they nurse it; Per ea augefcit fidei, & pinguescit, saies Luther, Our faith grows into a better state, and into a better liking, by our good works.

160 Againe, when Abraham considered, that it was, Mandatum in re turpi, That this Circumcision, in it selfe, was too frivolous a thing; and, in that part of the Bodie, too obscene a thing, to be brought into the fancy of so many Women, so many young Men, so many Strangers to other Nations, as might bring the Promise and Covenant it selfe into scorne, and into suspicion, that should require such a seale to it as that was, he might have come to this, Quare tam turpe, quare tam sordidum? why does God command me so base and uncleane a thing, so scornfull and mis-interpretable a thing, as Circumcision, and Circumcision in that part? Againe, when he considered, that to Circum-

before, to the rescue of Lot, with 318. borne and brought up in his House) he must make his House a Spittle of so many impotent Persons, unable to helpe one another for many daies, (for such was the effect of Circumcision, as we see in their Story, when Simeon and Levi came upon the Sichemites three daies after they had beene, by their perswasion, circumcised, the Sichemites were unable to resist or defend themselves, and so were slaine: Yea the sorenesse and incommodity upon Circumcision was so great, as that the very Commandement it selfe of Circumcision, was forborne in the Wildernesse, because they were then put to suddaine removes, which presently after a Circumcision, they could not have perform'd) Might not Abraham have come to his Quare tam molestum? Why will God command me so troublesome and incommodious a thing as this? And (to contract this) when he considered, That one principall reason of the Commandement of Circumcision, was, that that marke might be alwaies a remembrance to them against intemperance and incontinency, Might not Abraham have come to his Quare mihi? What use is there of this, in my Body, which is now dried up and withered by 99. yeares? What¹⁸⁰ Quares, what reluctations Abraham had, or whether he had any or no, is not expressed; but very religious and good men, sometimes, out of humane infirmities, have them: But then, God brings them quickly about to Christ's Veruntamen, Yet not my will, but thine be done; and he delivers them from the tentation, and brings them to an intire obedience to his will, which is that which we proposed for the next Branch in this part.

Tu qui vas figuli, sayes the Apostle; whensoever any disputation against a commandement of God, arises in Gods children, the Spirit of God smothers that spirit of Rebellion with that, Tu qui vas figuli, wilt thou who art but the vessell, dispute with the potter, that fashioned thee? If Abraham had any such doubts, of a frivolousnesse in so base a seale, of an obscenity in so foule a seale, of an incommodiousnesse in so troublesome a seale, of a needlesnesse in so impertinent a seale; if he had these doubts, no doubt but his forwardnesse in obeying God, did quickly oppose these reasons to those, and overcome them: That that part of the body is the most rebellious part; and that therefore, onely that part Adam covered, out of shame, for all the other parts he could rule: Ad hominis inobedientiam redarguendam, suâ inobedi- entiâ quodammodo caro testimonium perhibet, to reproach Mans rebellion to God, God hath left one part of Mans body, to rebell against him; for though the seeds of this rebellion be dispersed through all the body, yet, In illa parte magis regnat additamentum Leviathan, sayes Saint Bernard, the spawns of Leviathan, the seed of sinne, the leven of the Devil, abounds and reignes most in that part of the body; it is sentiva peccati, saies the same Father, the Sewar of all sinne; not onely because all sinne is deriv'd upon us, by generation, and so implied, and involv'd in originall sinne; but because, almost all other sinnes have relation to this: for, Gluttony is a preparation to this sinne in our selves; Pride and excesse is a preparation to it, in others, whom²¹⁰ we would enveigle and allure, by our bravery; Anger and malice inclines us to pursue this sinfull and inordinate love, quarrelsomly, so, as, that then, we doe not quarrell for wayes, and walls in the street, but we quarrell for our way to the Devil; and when we cannot go fast enough to the Devil, by wantonnesse in the chamber, we will quarrell with him, who hinders us of our Damnation, and find a way, to go faster in the field, by Duells, and unchristian Murder, in so foule a cause, as unlawfull lust. In this rebellious part, is the root of all sinne, and therefore did that part need this stigmaticall marke of Circumcision, to be imprinted upon it. Besides, (for the Jewes in particular)²²⁰ they were a Nation prone to Idolatry, and most, upon this occasion, if they mingled themselves with Women of other Nations: And therefore, Dedit est signum, ut admoverentur de generatione pura, saies Saint Chrysostome, God would be at the cost even of a Sacrament, (which is the greatest thing that passes between God and Man next to his Word) to defend them thereby against dangerous alliances, which might turne their hearts from God; God imprinted a marke in that part, to keep them still in mind of that law, which forbade them²³⁰ foraigne Marriages, or any company of strange Women: Custodia pietati servandæ, ne macularent paternam Nobilitatem, lest they should degenerate from the Nobility of their race, God would have them carry this memoriall about them, in their flesh. And God foresaw that extreme Idolatry, that grosse Idolatry, which that Nation would come to, and did come to, when Maachah the Mother of Asa worshipped that Idol, which Saint Hierome calls Belphegor, and is not fit to be nam'd by us; and therefore, in foresight of that Idolatry, God gave this marke, and this mutilation upon this part. If Abraham were surprized with any suggestions, any half-reasons against this commandement, he might quickly recollect himself, and see, that Circumcision was first, Signum memorativum, & monimentum isti fœderis, ²⁵⁰ it was a signe of the Covenant between God and Abraham; the Covenant was the Messias, who being to come, by a carnall continuance of Abrahams race, the signe and seale was conveniently placed in that part. And that was, secondly, Signum representativum, it represented Baptisme, In Christ you are circumcised, saies the Apostle, in that you are buried with him, through Baptisme: And then, that was Signum Distinctivum; for, besides that it kept them from Idolatry, as the Greeks called all Nations, whom they despised, Barbares, Barbarians, so did the Jewes, Incircumcisos, Uncircumcised: And that was a great threatning in the Prophet, Thou shalt die the death of the ²⁶⁰ Uncircumcised; that is, without any part in the everlasting promise, and Covenant. But yet, the principall dignity of this Circumcision, was, that it was Signum figurativum, it prefigured, it directed to that Circumcision of the heart; Circumcise the foreskin of your heart, for the Lord your God is God of Gods, and Lord of Lords. And for all the other reasons that could be assigned, of Remembrance, of Representation, of Distinction, Caret ubique ratione Judaica carnis Circumcisio, (sayes Lactantius) Nisi quod est Circumcisionis figura, quæ est Cor Mundum: The Jewish Circumcision were an absurd and unreasonable thing, if it did not intimate and figure the Circumcision of the ²⁷⁰ heart: And that is our Second part of this Exercise: But before we come to that, we are to say a word of the fourth branch of this part, That as there is no Quare to be made nor admitted against God, (which was our first part) If Man, out of his infirmity, doe fall into that, (which was our Second) God provides and furnishes them with Reasons against those Reasons, (which was our third.) And then, God rewards their fighting of that battaile, (which is his owne worke) with victories, and crownes, and blessings here; (which must be our fourth branch.)

Of Examples of this, the Booke of God is full: but we contract our-²⁸⁰ selves onely to that, which God did to Abraham at this time, in contemplation of this obedience. We consider Abraham at the end of one Age, he was almost one hundred, ninety nine when he was Circumcised; and now was entring into another age, (for he liv'd seventy five yeares after this:) this therefore was as the Eve of his New years-day, and God presents him thus many New-years-gifts: First, he gives him a new Name; in which change of his Name, from Abram, to Abraham, (besides that he was chang'd from Pater Magnus, to Pater Multitudinis, from the Father of a great possession and family, to the Father of a great succession and posterity, for that dimin-²⁹⁰ishes any Greatnesse, to have no posterity to leave that to) this also arises to be noted, that Gods Name Jehovah, having in that two Letters of one kind, two HH, God divides with his Servant, God affords one of those letters to the dignifying of Abrahams name, he adds an H of his owne Name to his: Jehovah is his essentiall name; and in communicating any beame of that Essence, any letter of that Name, we become semen Dei, the seed of God; and filiu Dei, the Sonnes of God; and participes divinæ naturæ, Partakers of the Divine nature; and idem spiritus cum Domino, the same spirit with the Lord; and Hearers of that voice; Ego dixi Dii estis, I have said you are Gods:

³⁰⁰If we were carefull to answer our old name, the name of Christians, in our conformity to Christ, and performance of Christianly duties, that were well, and other Names needed not, as remembrancers unto us: But God does give us new Names and additions of Offices, and Titles in Schoole, or Court, or Common-wealth, as new testimonies of his love, and rebuks of our former negligences, and Remembrancers of our present Duties in those places, and Encouragers to a more carefull proceeding in them. Secondly, God gave Abraham a new Wife: in which, the blessing was, that he tooke not from him that virtuous and obedient Wife which he had before, Sara, but now ³¹⁰he made her a Wife unto him, and he supplied that onely defect which was in her, Barrennesse, and so made her fully a Wife, a Mother. Thirdly, he gave him a new Sonne; for, God who purposed to blesse all Nations in Abraham's seed, would not onely repaire and furnish his old house, (that is, blesse Ismael with temporall blessings) but he would build him a new house, raise him up a new Sonne, Isaac: He would not onely fulfill that petition of Abrahams, Oh that Ismael might live in thy sight! not onely preserve Ismael, which signifies, Exauditionem Domini, that the Lord had heard that prayer, in the behalf of Ismael; but he would give him an Isaac, which signi-

³²⁰ fies, Risum, lætitiā, that is, he would give him a new, and true occasion of joy. Fourthly, he gave him a new promise; that as in Adam he had promised a Messias, in semine mulieris, in the seed of the Woman; now he contracts that promise to Abraham, in semine tuo, in thy seed shall all Nations be blessed; and so makes Abraham, not onely a Partner with his other Children, in the Salvation of that Messias, but he makes Abraham a meanes to derive that Salvation upon others also, In semine tuo, thou shalt not onely be blessed in the Seed of the Woman, but all Nations shall be blessed in thy seed. And lastly, he gives him a new seale; not onely that seale, under which he was ³³⁰ wont to deale with him, not onely an inward seale in his heart, but he gives him a new seale, a visible seale, the seale of Circumcision. This being then the Dignity of Gods precepts, that they require a present, and an exact obedience, without any counter-disputing; this being the infirmity of mans nature, that he is ever ready to object and oppose reasons, according to flesh and blood, against Gods precepts; this being the overflowing measure of Gods mercy to his Children, to give them the issue with the tentation; Reason above that Reason, victory at last, and alacrity in the performance of that precept; and this being his infinite bounty, to give us such rewards and retribu-³⁴⁰ tions for those victories, of which, onely his goodnesse, and his strength, was the Author in us, when we doe performe those duties, (all which we have seen in Abrahams obedience to a fleshly Circumcision) that Circumcision being come to an end in the Circumcision of Christ, performed this day: Let us come to this Circumcision, of which, that was but a Figure, a Spirituall Circumcision, the Circumcision of the heart, and God shall give us new Names (new Demonstrations, that our names are written in the Booke of life) and new Marriages (refresh his promise in the Prophet, that he will marry himselfe to us for ever) and new Sonnes, new Isaacks (assurance of ³⁵⁰ new Joyes, Essentiall and Accidentall, in the Kingdome of Heaven, and inchoative here in the way) and new promises, and new seales (new obligations of his Blessed Spirit) that that Infallibility of salvation which we have conceived, is well grounded.

[Hos. 2.19]

We have done with our first part, with that which was occasioned by the Institution of Circumcision in Abraham; we passe to that, which is occasioned by the celebrating of this Day, in which this legall

2 Part

Circumcision taking an end, in the Person of Christ, we come aptly to consider Spirituell Circumcision, by which onely we can be made conformable to our patterne and example, Christ Jesus: In which, ³⁶⁰ we will charge your memory but with these two considerations; First, Quid sit, what this spirituell Circumcision is, (for in that is implied the Quomodo, how this Circumcision is to be wrought and effected) And Secondly, the Ubi, what part of a Man is to be circumcised in this Circumcision, for that implies Integritatem, that it is the whole Man in every part.

Quid
Gal. 5.[16]

Briefly then, Spirituell Circumcision is to walke in the spirit; for then, saies the Apostle, ye shall not fulfill the lusts of the flesh; no Circumcision can bring us to this, that we shall not have them, for they are borne in us, and they will live in us, whilst we live; but this ³⁷⁰ is this Circumcision, not to fulfill them. Neither was Abraham's race, which was to be circumcised, more numerous, more plentiful, more manifold, then is this issue of the flesh, Sinne: How suddaine, and how large a pedigree! A Child, at the first minute, when the soule enters, is as good a Sinner, that is, as absolute a Sinner, and hath as good title to Damnation, by being conceived in sinne, as the eldest man; nay, he is as old a Sinner as the eldest man that is; nay, as the eldest man that ever was; for, he sinn'd in Adam, and, though conceived but this night, sinn'd 6000 yeares agoe. In young Men, vanity begets excesse; excesse, licentiousnesse; licentiousnesse, envy, hatred, ³⁸⁰ quarrels, murders; so that here is generation upon generation, here are risen Grandfather and Great-grandfather-sinnes quickly, a forward generation: And then they grow suddainly to be habits, and they come to prescribe in us: Prescription is, when there is no memory to the contrary; and we cannot remember when that sinfull custome begun in us: yea, our sinnes come to be revered in us, and by us; our sinnes contract a majestie, and a state, and they grow sacred to us; we dare not trouble a sinne, we dare not displace it, nor displease it; we dare not dispute the prerogative of our sinne, but we come to thinke it a kinde of sedition, a kinde of innovation, and a troubling ³⁹⁰ of the state, if we begin to question our Conscience, or change that security of sinne which we sleepe in, and we thinke it an easier Reformation to repent a sinne once a yeare, at Easter, when we must needs Receive, then to watch a sinne every Day.

There is scarce any sinne, but that in that place of the Apostle to the Galatians, it comes within the name of workes of the flesh; for, though he names divers sinnes, which are literally and properly workes of the flesh, (as Adultery, fornication, uncleannesse, wantonnesse) yet those sinnes that are against a mans owne selfe, (as Gluttony and Drunkennesse) those that are against other men, (as ⁴⁰⁰ Contentions and Murders) those that are directed upon new Gods (as Idolatri) those that are Contracts with the Devil (as Witchcraft) those that are offences to the Church (as Heresy) are all called by Saint Paul in that place, workes of the flesh: So that the object of this Spirituell Circumcision is all that concernes the flesh, the world, the Devil, or God, or man, or the Church; in every one of these we may finde somewhat to circumcise. But because abundance and superfluity begets these workes of the flesh, (for though we carry the Serpent about us, yet he does not sting, nor hisse, till he be warme: As long as poverty and wretchednesse freezes our Concupiscences, they ⁴¹⁰ are not so violent) therefore spirituall Circumcision is well expressed by Saint Bernard, Moralis Circumcisio est, victum & vestitum habentem, esse contentum; A cutting off of these superfluities, is this morall, that is, this spirituall Circumcision.

Now for some understanding of these superfluities, we must consider, that sometimes a poore man, that hath no superfluity in his estate, is yet wastfull in his minde, and puts himselfe to superfluous expences, in his diet, in his apparell, and in all things of outward shew and ostentation: And on the other side, a covetous man, that hath a superfluous estate, yet starves himselfe, and denies himselfe ⁴²⁰ all conveniences for this life: Here's a superfluous confidence in the one, that he cannot want, though he throw away money; and here's a superfluous feare in the other, that he shall want, if he give himselfe bread; and here's worke for this spirituall Circumcision on both sides: But then the Circumcision is not necessarily to be applied to the riches of the rich man, so as that every rich man must necessarily cast away his riches (a Godly man may be rich) nor necessarily applied so to all outward expences of the free and liberall minded man, as that he should shut up doores, and weare ragges; for, a Godly man may fare in his diet, and appeare in his garments, according to that ⁴³⁰ Degree which he holds in that state: But the superfluity is, and (consequently the Circumcision is to be) in the Affection, in our Confidence, that whatsoever we wast, by one meanes or other, we shall have more; or in our diffidence, that if we lay not up all, we shall never have enough. These be the inordinate affections that must be Circumcised: But how? for that's intended in this part. We need enquire no farther, for the meanes of this spirituall Circumcision, then to the very word which the Holy Ghost hath chosen for Circumcision here, which is Mul and Namal; for that word hath in other places of Scripture, three significations, that expresse much of the manner, how this Circumcision is to be wrought: It signifies, Purgare, to purge, to discharge the Conscience: (and that is, by Confession of our sinnes) It signifies, Mundare, to cleanse and purify the Conscience: (and that is, by Contrition and Detestation of that sinne) And it signifies, Succidere, to cut downe, to weed and root out whatsoever remains in our possession, that is unjustly got (and that is) by Restitution.

Purgare

Now for the first of these, the purging; the proper use and working of purging Physick, is, not that that Medicine pierces into those parts of the Body, where the peccant humour lies, and from which parts, Nature, of her selfe, is not able to expell it: the substance of the ⁴⁵⁰ Medicine does not goe thither, but the Physick lies still, and draws those peccant humours together; and being then so come to an unsupportable Masse, and burden, Nature her selfe, and their owne weight expels them out. Now, that which Nature does in a naturall body, Grace does in a regenerate soule, for Grace is the nature and the life of a regenerate man. As therefore the bodily Physick goes not to that part of the body that is affected; we must not stay till our Spirituall Physick (the Judgements of God) worke upon that particular sinne, that transports us: That God should weaken me with a violent sicknesse, before I will purge my selfe of my licentiousnesse; ⁴⁶⁰ Or strike me with poverty, and losse of my stocke, before I will purge my selfe of my usury; or lay me flat with disgraces and dis-favours of great Persons, before I will purge my selfe of my Ambition; or evict my land from me, by some false title, that God, in his just Judgement, may give way to, to punish my sinnes, before I will purge my selfe of my oppression, and racking of Tenants: But before these violent Medicines come, if thou canst take Gods ordinary Physick, administred in the Word and Sacraments; if thou canst but endure that qualme of calling thy selfe to an account, and an examination; if thou canst draw all thy sinnes together, and present them to thine owne 470 Conscience, then their owne waight will finde a vent, and thou wilt utter them in a full and free Confession to thy God, and that is Circumcision; as Circumcision consists in the purging of the Conscience, to be mov'd upon hearing the Word preached, and the denouncing of his Judgements in his Ordinance, before those Judgements surprize thee, to recollect thy sinnes in thine owne memory, and poure them out in a true Confession.

The next step in this Circumcision, (as they are intimated in that word, which the Holy Ghost uses here) is Mundare, to cleanse; and this is a Contrition for those sinnes, and a Detestation of those sinnes, 480 which I have thus gathered in my Memory, and poured out in my Confession. A house is not clean, though all the Dust be swept together, if it lie still in a corner, within Dores; A Conscience is not clean, by having recollected all her sinnes in the Memory, for they may fester there, and Gangreen even to Desperation, till she have emptied them in the bottomlesse Sea of the blood of Christ Jesus, and the mercy of his Father, by this way of Confession. But a house is not clean neither, though the Dust be thrown out, if there hang Cobwebs about the Walls, in how dark corners soever. A Conscience is not clean, though the sins, brought to our memory by this Examination, 490 be cast upon Gods mercy, and the merits of his Sonne, by Confession, if there remaine in me, but a Cobweb, a little, but a sinfull delight in the Memory of those sins, which I had formerly committed. How many men sinne over the sinnes of their youth again, in their age, by a sinfull Delight in remembring those sinnes, and a sinfull Desire, that their Bodies were not past them? How many men sin over some sins, but imaginarily, (and yet Damnably) a hundred times, which they never sinned actually at all, by filling their Imaginations, with such thoughts as these, How would I be revenged of such an Enemy, if I were in such a place of Authority? How easily 500 could I overthrow such a wastfull young Man, and compasse his Land, if I had but Money, to feed his humours? Those sinnes which we have never been able to doe actually, to the harme of others, we doe as hurtfully to our owne Souls, by a sinfull Desire of them, and a sinfull Delight in them. Therefore is there a cleansing required in this Circumcision; such a cleansing as God promises, I will cleanse their blood, that is, the fountaine, the work of all corrupt Desires, and sinfull Delights. Now there is no clensing of our blood, but by his blood; and the infusion, and application of his blood, is in the seale of the Sacrament; so that that soule onely is so clensed, as is required⁵¹⁰ in this spirituall circumcision, that preserves it selfe alwayes, or returnes speedily, to a disposition of a worthy receiving of that holy and blessed Sacrament: He that is now in that disposition, as that, in a rectified Conscience, he durst meet his Saviour at that Table, and receive him there, (which cannot be done without Contrition, and Detestation of former sins) hath admitted this spirituall Circumcision, so far, as is intended in the second signification of this word, which is, To clense.

Joel 3.[21]

Succidere

[Verse 16]

But then there is a third action, which is, succidere, to cut up, to root out all, from whence this sinne may grow up againe, as the word⁵²⁰ is used in Job 18. His root shall be dried beneath, and all his branches shall be cut downe. In this Circumcision, we must cut the root, the mother-sinne, that nourishes all our sinnes, and the branches too, that if one sinne have begot another, there be a fall of all our woods, of our timber wood, (our growne and habituall sinnes) and of our under-woods, (those lesser sinnes which grow out of them.) It is a cutting downe, and a stubbing up, which is not done, till we have shak'd off all, that we have gotten by those Sinnes: It is not the Circumcision of an Excessive use of that sinne, that will serve our turne, but such a Circumcision, as amounts to an Excession, a cutting off the root, and⁵³⁰ branch, the sinne, and the fruits, the profits of that sinne. I must not think to bribe God, by giving him some of the profit of my sinne, to let me enjoy the rest: for, was God a venturer with me in my sinne? Or did God set me to Sea, that is, put me into this world, to see what I could get by Usury, by Oppression, by Extortion, and then give him a part to charitable uses? As this word signifies Excedere, to cut off all that is grown out of sinne, so from this word Namal, comes Nemâla, which is Formica, an Ant, which the Hebrewes derive from this word, out of this reason, That as an Ant doth gnaw all the Corne it layes up, upon one side, so that it may never grow againe, so this⁵⁴⁰ spirituall Circumcision must provide, that that sinne take no new roote: but as long as thou makest profit, or takest pleasure in any thing sinfully gotten, thy sinne growes; so that this Circumcision is not perfected but by restitution and satisfaction of all formerly damned. These then be all the waies that are presented in these significations and use of this word, which the holy Ghost hath chosen here, purging by Consideration and Confessing, cleansing by Contrition and Detesting, preventing of future growth by Satisfaction in Restoring. A little remains to be said (though it be also implied in that which hath been said) of the Ubi, the place where this Circumcision is to be applied. The Scripture speaks of uncircumcised hearts, and uncircumcised lips, and uncircumcised eares; And our eyes in looking, and coveting, and our hands in reaching to that which is not ours, are as farre uncircumcised as eares, or lips, or hearts: Therefore we are to carry this Circumcision all over; we must Circumcise, sayes Saint Bernard, In carne, peccatum, the flesh, the body, the substance of the sinne, in cute, operimentum, in the skin, all covers, and palliations, and disguises, and extenuations of the sinne; and, in sanguine incentivum, in the blood all fomentations and provocations to that sinne: the sinne it self, the circumstances of the sinne, the relapses to or towards that sin must be circumcised: Judæus ut parvulus, congruum accepit mandatum, exiguae Circumcisionis, saies the same Father, The Jew was but in an infancy, in a minority, and God did not looke for so strong a proceeding from the Jew, as from us, but led him by the armes, by the helpe of Ceremonies and Figures, and accordingly required but a Circumcision in one part of the body: but God lookes for more, at the hands of Christians, to whom he hath fully manifested and applied himselfe. As Christ said to the Jewes, Except your righteousness exceed the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees, it is nothing: So except our righteousness exceed them that exceeded the Scribes, it is nothing; and therefore, Toto corpore baptizamur (saies Bernard) quia totius hominis integra Circumcisio; to shew, that it is the whole man that is to be circumcised, we are baptized, we are washed all over, (for so long, even to Bernards time, it seemes, that manner of Baptizing, by Immersion of the whole body, and not by Aspersio upon the face onely, continued in the generall practice of the Church.) So that if it be not an entire Circumcision of the whole man, that will fall upon us, which God threatens in the Prophet, I will visit all them which are circumcised,

Ubi

[Mat. 5.20]

Jer. 9.25

with them which are not circumcised; If we circumcise in part, leave 580 some sinnes, and cleave to others, we shall be, in the sight of God, altogether uncircumcised; Adam was not the lesse naked in Gods sight, for his Figge-leave; halfe-repentances are no repentances; either we are in a privation, or in a habit; covered over with righteousness, or naked.

When therefore the Lord and his Spirit calls thee to this spirituall Circumcision, remember that Abraham did not say when he was call'd, Lord, I have followed thy voyce, in leaving my Country; Lord, I have built thee an Altar, what needs more demonstration of my obedience? Say not thou, Lord, I have built an Hospitall; Lord, I 590 have fed the poore at Christmas; Lord, I have made peace amongst thy people at home; I have endowed an Almes-house; but persevere in doing good still, for, God takes not the Tree, where it growes, but where it fals; for the most part, the death of a man is such, as his life was; but certainly the life of a man, that is, his everlasting life, is such as his death is. Again, Abraham did not say of this, that it was a Commandement in a slight, and frivolous, and uncivill matter; doe not thou say, that it is an impertinent thing in this spirituall Circumcision, to watch thy eating and drinking, and all such indifferent actions, and to see that all they be done to the glory of God; for, as [1 Cor. 1.25] 600 the Apostle saies, That the foolishnesse of God is wiser then the wisdom of man; so we may piously say, that the levity of God is graver then the gravity of all the Philosophers and Doctors of the world; as we may see in all his Ceremoniall Lawes, where the matter seemes very light in many places, but yet the signification very important; and therefore apply this Circumcision, even in thy least, and most familiar action. So also Abraham was not diverted from obeying God, by the inconvenience of having all his family diseas'd at once; he did not say, I am content to circumcise my Sonne, but would spare my Servants yet, for necessary uses; doe not thou say, thou art content 610 to circumcise thine eldest Sonne, to abate somewhat of that sinne which thou beganst with in thy youth, but wouldst faine spare some serviceable and profitable sinnes for a time, and circumcise them hereafter. To pursue this example, Abraham did not say, Cras Domine, Lord, I will doe all this to morrow; but, as the Commandement was given in that phrase of expedition, Circumcidendo circumcides,

In Circumcising thou shalt circumcise; which denoted a diligent and a present dispatch; so Abraham did dispatch it diligently and presently that day. Doe not thou say, Cras Domine, to morrow, some other day, in the day of mine age, or of my Death, or of affliction and ⁶²⁰ tribulation, I will circumcise all; for age, and sicknesse, and tribulations, are Circumcisions of themselves; a Feaver circumcises thee then, or an Apoplexy, and not thy Devotion; and incapacity of sinning is not sanctification: If any man put off his Repentance till death, Fateor non negamus quod petit, saies Saint Augustine, I dare not deny that man, whatsoever God may be pleased to grant him; Sed non præsumimus, quod bene erit; I dare not presume to say, that that man died well, Non præsumo, non vos fallo, non præsumo, saies that Father, with some vehemency, I dare not warrant him, let me not deceive you with saying that I dare, for I dare not: And, Beloved, ⁶³⁰ that is but a suspicious state in any man, in which another Christian hath just reason to doubt of his salvation, as Saint Augustine doth shrewdly doubt of these late Repenters, Sicut ejus damnatio incerta, ita remissio dubia; As I am not sure he is damned, so I am not sure he is saved, no more sure of one then of the other. It is true, we have the example of the Crucified Thiefe, but it is but a hard case, when a Thiefe must guide us and be our Example; we suspect wills that are made of temporall goods in that state, at the last gaspe, and shall we think a Man to be compos mentis, of a perfect understanding for the bequeathing of his Soule at his last gaspe? non præsumo, non vos ⁶⁴⁰ fallo, non præsumo, I should deceive you, if I should say it, I dare not say it, sayes that Father. Come therefore to this Circumcision betimes, come to it, this Day, come this Minute: This Day thy Saviour was Circumcised in the flesh, for thee; this Day Circumcise thy heart to him, and all thy senses, and all thy affections. It is not an utter destroying of thy senses, and of thy affections, that is enjoined thee; but, as when a Man had taken a beautifull Woman captive in the warres, he was not bound to kill her, but he must shave her head, and pare her nailes, and change her garments, before he might marry her; so captivate, subdue, change thy affections, and that's the Destruction ⁶⁵⁰ which makes up this Circumcision: change thy choler into Zeale, change thy amorousnesse into devotion, change thy wastfulnesse into Almes to the poore, and then thou hast circumcised thy affections, and mayest retaine them, and mayest confidently say with the Apostle, we are the Circumcision, which worship God in the spirit, and rejoyce in Christ Jesus, and have no confidence in the flesh. Doe this to day; as God this day gives thee a New yeare, and hath not surpriz'd thee, nor taken thee away in the sinnes of last yeare; as he gives thee a new yeare, doe thou give him a New-years-gift, Cor novum, a new and a Circumcised heart, and Canticum novum, a new Song, a delight to magnifie his name, and speak of his glory, and declare his wondrous works to the Sonnes of men, and be assured that whether I, or any other of the same Ministry, shall speake to you from this place, this day twelve-month, and shall aske your consciences then, whether those things which you heard now, have brought you to this Circumcision, and made you better this yeare than you were the last, and find you under the same uncircumcision still, be assured that God will not, God cannot be mocked, but as he wil receive us, with an Euge bone serve, Well done my good and faithfull Servant; so he will say to you, Perditio tua ex te, Your destruction is from your selves:

ACTS 9.4. AND HE FELL TO THE EARTH, AND HEARD A VOYCE, SAYING, SAUL, SAUL, WHY PERSECUTEST THOU ME?

LET US NOW praise famous Men, and our Fathers that begat us, (saies the Wiseman) that is, that assisted our second generation, our spirituall Regeneration; Let us praise them, commemorate them. The Lord hath wrought great glory by them, through his power from the beginning, saies he there, that is, It hath alwaies beene the Lords way to glorifie himselfe in the conversion of Men, by the ministry of Men. For he adds, They were leaders of the people by their counsaile, and by their knowledge and learning meet for the people, wise and eloquent men in their instructions; and that is, That God¹⁰ who gives these gifts for this purpose, looks for the employment of these gifts, to the edification of others, to his glory. There be of them, that have left a name behinde them, (as it is also added in that place) that is, That though God can amply reward his servants in the next world, yet he does it sometimes in this world; and, though not with temporall happinesses, in their life, yet with honor, and commemorations, and celebrations of them, after they are gone out of this life, they leave a name behind them. And amongst them, in a high place, shines our blessed and glorious Apostle S. Paul, whose Conversion the Church celebrates now, and for the celebration thereof, hath appointed²⁰ this part of Scripture from whence this text arises, to be the Epistle of the Day, And he fell to the earth, and heard a voyce, saying, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?

There are words in the text, that will reach to all the Story of S. Pauls Conversion, embrace all, involve and enwrap all; we must contract them; into lesse then three parts, we cannot well; those will be these; first, The Person, Saul, He, He fell to the earth; and then, his humiliation, his exinanition of himselfe, his devesting, putting off of himselfe, He fell to the earth; and lastly, his investing of Christ, his putting on of Christ, his rising againe by the power of a new inanimation, ³⁰ tion, a new soule breathed into him from Christ, He heard a voyce, saying, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me? Now, a re-distribution, a sub-division of these parts, into their branches, we shall present to you anon, more opportunely, as we shall come in due order to the handling of the parts themselves. In the first, the branches will be but these; Sauls indisposition when Christ tooke him in hand, and Christs worke upon him; what he found him, what he left him, will determine our first part, The person.

Quid ante

Mat. 8.24

First then, what he was at that time, the Holy Ghost gives evidence enough against him, and he gives enough against himselfe. Of that ⁴⁰ which the Holy Ghost gives, you may see a great many heavy pieces, a great many applicable circumstances, if at any time, at home, you do but paraphrase, and spread to your selves the former part of this Chapter, to this text. Take a little preparation from me; Adhuc spirans, saies the first verse, Saul yet breathing threatnings and slaughter, Then when he was in the height of his fury, Christ laid hold upon him. It was, for the most part, Christs method of curing. Then when the Sea was in a tempestuous rage, when the waters covered the ship, and the storme shook even that which could remove mountaines, the faith of the Disciples, then Christ rebukes the winde, and commands a ⁵⁰ calme. Then when the Sun was gone out to run his race as a Giant, (as David speaks) then God by the mouth of another, of Ioshuah, bids the Sun stand still. Then when that unclean spirit foam'd, and fum'd, and tore, and rent the possessed persons, then Christ commanded them to go out. Let the fever alone, say our Physitians, till some fits be passed, and then we shall see farther, and discern better. The note is S. Chrysostomes, and he applies it to Christs proceeding with Saul; Non expectavit ut fatigatus debacchando mansuesceret, sayes he, Christ staid not till Saul being made drunke with blood, were cast into a slumber, as satisfied with the blood of Christians; Sed in media in-

evidence that the Holy Ghost gives against him, Quod petiit Epistolas, that he sued to the State for a Commission to persecute Christians. When the State will put men to some kinde of necessity of concurring to the endamaging or endangering of the cause of Christ, and will be displeased with them, if they doe not, men make to themselves, and to their consciences some faint colour of excuse: But when they themselves set actions on foote, which are not required at their hands, where is their evasion? Then when Saul sued out this Commission, That if ⁷⁰ he found any of that way, (that is, Christians) (for he had so scattered them before, that he was not sure to finde any, They did not appeare in any whole body, dangerous, or suspicious to the State) but, If hee found any, Any man or woman, That he might have the Power of the State, so as that he need not feare men, That hee might have the impartiality, and the inflexibility of the State, so as that he need not pity women, Then when his glory was to bring them bound to Ierusalem, that he might magnifie his triumph and greatnesse in the eye of the world, Then, then sayes Christ, to this tempest, Be calme, to this uncleane spirit, Come out, to this Sun, in his own estimation, Go no

Thus much evidence the Holy Ghost gives against him; and thus much more himselfe, I persecuted this way unto the death; I bound and delivered into prison, both men and women; And after, more then this, I punished them, and that oft, and, in every Synagogue, and, compelled them to blaspheme, and, was exceedingly mad against them, and persecuted them even unto strange Cities. What could he say more against himselfe? And then, sayes Christ, to this tempest, Quiesce, Be still, to this glaring Sunne, Siste, stand still, to this uncleane spirit, Veni foras, come forth. In this sense especially doth S. Paul call him-⁹⁰ selfe Abortivum, a person borne out of season, That whereas Christs other Disciples and Apostles, had a breeding under him, and came first ad Discipulatum, and then ad Apostolatum, first to be Disciples, and after to be Apostles; S. Paul was borne a man, an Apostle, not carved out, as the rest in time; but a fusil Apostle, an Apostle powred out, and cast in a Mold; As Adam was a perfect man in an instant, so was S. Paul an Apostle, as soone as Christ tooke him in hand.

Now, Beloved, wilt thou make this perverse use of this proceeding, God is rich in Mercy, Therefore I cannot misse Mercy? Wouldest thou

Act. 22.4

Act. 26.11

I Cor. 15.8

say, and not be thought mad for saying so, God hath created a West ¹⁰⁰ Indies, therefore I cannot want Gold? Wilt thou be so ill a Logician to thy selfe, and to thine own damnation, as to conclude so, God is alwayes the same in himselfe, therefore he must be alwayes the same to me? So ill a Musician as to say, God is all Concord, therefore He and I can never disagree? So ill a Historian as to say, God hath called Saul, a Persecutor, then when he breathed threatnings and slaughter, then when he sued to the State for a Commission to persecute Christ, God hath called a theife, then when he was at the last gaspe; And therefore if he have a minde to me, he will deale so with me too, and, if he have no such minde, no man can imprint, or infuse a new minde in ¹¹⁰ God? God forbid. It is not safe concluding out of single Instances. It is true, that if a soure, and heavy, and severe man, will adde to the discomforts of a disconsolate soule, and in that soules sadnesse, and dejection of spirit, will heap up examples, that God hath still suffered high-minded sinners to proceed and to perish in their irreligious wayes, and tell that poore soule, (as Iobs company did him) It is true, you take God aright, God never pardons such as you, in these cases, these singular, these individuall examples, That God hath done otherwise once, have their use. One instance to the contrary destroys any peremptory Rule, no man must say, God never doth it; He did it to Saul ¹²⁰ here, He did it to the Theife upon the Crosse. But to that presumptuous sinner, who sins on, because God shewed mercy to One at last, we must say, a miserable Comforter is that Rule, that affords but one example. Nay, is there one example? The Conversion of Saul a Persecutor, and of the Theife upon the Crosse, is become Proverbium pec- catorum, The sinners proverb, and serves him, and satisfies him in all cases. But is there any such thing? Such a story there is, and it is as true as Gospel, it is the truth of Gospel it selfe; But was this a late Repentance? Answer S. Cyril, Rogo te frater, Tell me, Beloved, Thou that deferrest thy Repentance, doest thou do it upon confidence of ¹³⁰ these examples? Non in fine, sed in principio conversus latro, Thou deludest thine owne soule; The Theife was not converted at last, but at first; As soone as God afforded him any Call, he came; And at how many lights hast thou winked? And to how many Cals hast thou stopped thine eares, that deferrest thy repentance? Christ said to him, Hodie mecum eris, This day thou shalt be with me in paradise; when Gregor.

23.43]

thou canst finde such another day, looke for such another mercy; A day that cleft the grave-stones of dead men; A day that cleft the Temple it selfe; A day that the Sunne durst not see; A day that saw the soule of God (may we not say so, since that Man was God too) ¹⁴⁰ depart from Man; There shall be no more such dayes; and therefore presume not of that voyce, Hodie, This day thou shalt be with me, if thou make thy last minute that day, though Christ, to magnifie his mercy, and his glory, and to take away all occasion of absolute desperation, did here, under so many disadvantages call, and draw S. Paul to him.

But we say no more of that, of the danger of sinning by precedent, and presuming of mercy by example; we passe from our first Consideration, From what, to the other, To what, Christ brought this persecutor, this Saul. He brought him to that remarkable height, as ¹⁵⁰ that the Church celebrates the Conversion of no man but this. Many bloody Executioners were converted to Christ, even in the act of that bloody Execution; Then when they tooke a delight in tearing the bowels of Christians, they were received into the bowels of Christ Jesus, and became Christians. Men that road to Market, and saw an Execution upon the way; Men that opened a window to take ayre, and saw an Execution in the street; The Ecclesiasticall Story abounds with examples of occasionall Convertits, and upon strange occasions; but yet the Church celebrates no Conversion, but this. The Church doth not consider the Martyrs as borne till they die; till the world see
¹⁷⁰ speaks of an inferior Transubstantiation, of a change of affections, and sayes Agnus ex Lupo, that here is another manner of Lycanthropy, then when a man is made a Wolfe; for here a Wolfe is made a Lambe,

Quid factus

Ex lupo Agnus. Ex vepribus racemus, sayes that Father, A bramble is made a vine; Ex zizaniis frumentum, Cockle and tares become wheat; Ex pirata gubernator, A Pirat becomes a safe Pilot; Ex novissimo primus, The lees are come to swim on the top, and the last is growne first; and ex abortivo perfectus, He that was borne out of time, hath not onely the perfection, but the excellency of all his lineaments. S. Chrysostome goes farther then this, Ex blasphemo, Os Christi, & lyra ¹⁸⁰ spiritus, He that was the mouth of blasphemy, is become the mouth of Christ, He that was the instrument of Satan, is now the organ of the Holy Ghost. He goes very far, when he sayes, In Caelis homo, in terris Angelus, Being yet but upon earth, he is an Angel, and being yet but a man, he is already in Heaven. Yet S. Paul was another manner of Sacrament, and had another manner of Transubstantiation, then all this; As he was made Idem spiritus cum Domino, The same spirit with the Lord, so in his very body, he had Stigmata, the very marks of the Lord Jesus. From such a lownesse, rayseed to such a height, as that Origen sayes, many did beleieve, that S. Paul had been that Holy Ghost, ¹⁹⁰ which Christ had promised to the world, after his departing from it.

Gal. 6.17

Idem

It is but a little way that S. Ierome hath carried his commendation neither, when he calls him Rugitum leonis, The roaring of a Lion, if we consider in how little a forest the roaring of a Lion is determined; but that he calls him Rugitum Leonis nostri, The roaring of our Lion, of the Lion of the Tribe of Iuda, That as far as Christ is heard, S. Paul is heard too; Quem quoties lego, non verba mihi videor audire, sed tonitrua, Wheresoever I open S. Pauls Epistles, I meet not words, but thunder, and universall thunder, thunder that passes through all the world. For, Ejus excæcatio totius orbis illuminatio, That that was done ²⁰⁰ upon him, wrought upon all the world; he was struck blind, and all the world saw the better for that. So universall a Priest, (sayes S. Chrysostome, who loves to be speaking of S. Paul) as that he sacrificed, not sheep and goats, sed seipsum, but himselfe; and not onely that, sed totum mundum, He prepared the whole world, as a sacrifice to God. He built an Arke, that is, established a Church; and to this day, receives, not eight, but all into that Arke: And whereas in Noahs Ark, Quem corvum recepit, corvum emisit, If he came in a Raven, he went out a Raven; S. Paul, in his Arke, Ex milvis facit columbas, as himself was, so he transubstantiates all them, and makes them Doves of ²¹⁰ Ravens. Nay, so over-absolutely did he sacrifice himselfe, and his state in this world, for this world, as that he sacrificed his reversion, his future state, the glory and joy of heaven, for his brethren, and chose rather to be Anathema, separated from Christ, then they should. I love thee, sayes S. Chrysostome to Rome, for many excellencies, many great-nesses; But I love thee so well, sayes he, therefore because S. Paul loved thee so well. Qualem Rosam Roma Christo, (as he pursues this con-templation) What a fragrant rose shall Rome present Christ with, when he comes to Judgement, in re-delivering to him the body of S. Paul? And though he joyne them both together, Iugati boves Ecclesiæ, ²²⁰ That S. Peter and S. Paul were that yoke of oxen that ploughed the whole Church, Though he say of both, Quot carceres sanctificastis? How many Prisons have you two consecrated, and made Prisons Churches? Quot catenas illustrastis? How many fetters and chains of iron have you two changed into chaines of gold? Yet we may observe a difference in S. Chrysostomes expressing of persons so equall to one another, Quid Petro majus? sayes he, But, Quid Paulo par fuit? What can exceed Peter, or what can equall Paul? Still be all this far from occasioning any man to presume upon God, because he afforded so abundant mercy to a Persecuter: but still from this, let every faint ²³⁰ soule establish it selfe in a confidence in God; God that would find nothing to except, nothing to quarrell at, in S. Paul, will not lie heavy upon thy soule, though thou must say, as he did, Quorum ego maxi-mus, That thou art a greater sinner then thou knowest any other man to be.

We are, in our order proposed at first, devolved now to our second Part; from the person, and in that, what he was found, A vehement persecuter, And then, what he was made, A laborious Apostle, To the Manner, to his Humiliation, Cecidit super terram, He fell, and he fell to the ground, and he fell blind, as by the history, and context appears.
²⁴⁰ We use to call every declination, of any kind, and in any subject, a falling; for, for our bodies, we say a man is falne sick, And for his state, falne poore, And for his mind, falne mad, And for his conscience, falne desperate; we are borne low, and yet we fall every way lower, so universall is our falling sicknesse. Sin it selfe is but a falling; The irremediable sin of the Angels, The undeterminable sinne of Adam, is called but so, The fall of Adam, The fall of Angels. And therefore the effectuall visitation of the holy Ghost to man, is called a falling too; we are fallen so low, as that when the holy Ghost is pleased to fetch us againe, and to infuse his grace, he is still said to fall upon us. But ²⁵⁰ the fall which we consider in the Text, is not a figurative falling, not into a decay of estate, nor decay of health, nor a spirituall falling into sin, a decay of grace; but it is a medicinall falling, a falling under Gods hand, but such a falling under his hand, as that he takes not off his hand from him that is falne, but throwes him downe therefore that he may raise him. To this posture he brings Paul, now, when he was to re-inanimate him with his spirit; rather, to pre-inanimate him; for, indeed, no man hath a soule till he have grace.

Christ, who in his humane nature hath received from the Father all Judgement, and power, and dominion over this world, hath received ²⁶⁰ all this, upon that condition that he shall governe in this manner, Psal. 2.8 Aske of me, and I shall give thee the Heathen for thine inheritance, sayes the Father; How is he to use them, when he hath them? Thus, Thou shalt breake them with a rod of iron, and dash them in pieces like a potters vessell. Now, God meant well to the Nations, in this bruising and breaking of them; God intended not an annihilation of the Nations, but a reformation; for Christ asks the Nations for an Inheritance, not for a triumph; therefore it is intended of his way of governing them; and his way is to bruise and beat them; that is, first to cast them downe, before he can raise them up, first to breake them August. ²⁷⁰ before he can make them in his fashion. Novit Dominus vulnerare ad amorem; The Lord, and onely the Lord knowes how to wound us, out of love; more then that, how to wound us into love; more then all that, to wound us into love, not onely with him that wounds us, but into love with the wound it selfe, with the very affliction that he inflicts upon us; The Lord knowes how to strike us so, as that we shall lay hold upon that hand that strikes us, and kisse that hand that wounds us. Ad vitam interficit, ad exaltationem prosternit, sayes the same Father; No man kills his enemy therefore, that his enemy might have a better life in heaven; that is not his end in killing him: It is Gods end; Therefore ²⁸⁰ he brings us to death, that by that gate he might lead us into life everlasting; And he hath not discovered, but made that Northerne passage, to passe by the frozen Sea of calamity, and tribulation, to Paradise, to the heavenly Jerusalem. There are fruits that ripen not, but by frost;

There are natures, (there are scarce any other) that dispose not themselves to God, but by affliction. And as Nature lookes for the season for ripening, and does not all before, so Grace lookes for the assent of the soule, and does not perfect the whole worke, till that come. It is Nature that brings the season, and it is Grace that brings the assent; but till the season for the fruit, till the assent of the soule come, all is ²⁹⁰ not done.

Therefore God begun in this way with Saul, and in this way he led him all his life. Tot pertulit mortes, quot vixit dies, He dyed as many deaths, as he lived dayes; for so himselfe sayes, Quotidie morior, I die daily; God gave him sucke in blood, and his owne blood was his daily drink; He catechized him with calamities at first, and calamities were his daily Sermons, and meditations after; and to authorize the hands of others upon him, and to accustome him to submit himself to the hands of others without murmuring, Christ himself strikes the first blow, and with that, Cecidit, he fell, (which was our first consideration, in his humiliation) and then, Cecidit in terram, He fell to the ³⁰⁰ ground, which is our next.

I take no farther occasion from this Circumstance, but to arme you with consolation, how low soever God be pleased to cast you, Though it be to the earth, yet he does not so much cast you downe, in doing that, as bring you home. Death is not a banishing of you out of this world; but it is a visitation of your kindred that lie in the earth; neither are any nearer of kin to you, then the earth it selfe, and the wormes of the earth. You heap earth upon your soules, and encumber them with more and more flesh, by a superfluous and luxuriant diet; You adde ³¹⁰ earth to earth in new purchases, and measure not by Acres, but by Manors, nor by Manors, but by Shires; And there is a little Quillet, a little Close, worth all these, A quiet Grave. And therefore, when thou readest, That God makes thy bed in thy sicknesse, rejoyce in this, not onely that he makes that bed, where thou dost lie, but that bed where thou shalt lie; That that God, that made the whole earth, is now making thy bed in the earth, a quiet grave, where thou shalt sleep in peace, till the Angels Trumpet wake thee at the Resurrection, to that Judgement where thy peace shall be made before thou comdest, and writ, and sealed, in the blood of the Lamb.

³²⁰ Saul falls to the earth; So farre; But he falls no lower. God brings his servants to a great lownesse here; but he brings upon no man a perverse sense, or a distrustfull suspicion of falling lower hereafter; His hand strikes us to the earth, by way of humiliation; But it is not his hand, that strikes us into hell, by way of desperation. Will you tell me, that you have observed and studied Gods way upon you all your life, and out of that can conclude what God meanes to doe with you after this life? That God took away your Parents in your infancy, and left you Orphanes then, That he hath crossed you in all your labours in your calling, ever since, That he hath opened you to dishonours, and ³³⁰ calumnies, and mis-interpretations, in things well intended by you, That he hath multiplied sicknesses upon you, and given you thereby an assurance of a miserable, and a short life, of few, and evill dayes, nay, That he hath suffered you to fall into sins, that you your selves have hated, To continue in sins, that you your selves have been weary of, To relapse into sins, that you your selves have repented; And will you conclude out of this, that God had no good purpose upon you, that if ever he had meant to doe you good, he would never have gone thus farre, in heaping of evils upon you? Upon what doest thou ground this? upon thy selfe? Because thou shouldest not deal thus with any ³⁴⁰ man, whom thou mean'st well to? How poore, how narrow, how impious a measure of God, is this, that he must doe, as thou wouldest doe, if thou wert God! God hath not made a week without a Sabbath; no tentation, without an issue; God inflicts no calamity, no cloud, no eclipse, without light, to see ease in it, if the patient will look upon that which God hath done to him, in other cases, or to that which God hath done to others, at other times. Saul fell to the ground, but he fell no lower; God brings us to humiliation, but not to desperation.

Cæcus
 Iohn 9.39

He fell; he fell to the ground, And he fell blinde; for so it is evident in the story. Christ had said to the Pharisees, I came into the world, that ³⁵⁰ they which see, might be made blinde; And the Pharisees ask him, Have you been able to doe so upon us? Are we blinde? Here Christ gives them an example; a reall, a literall, an actuall example; Saul, a Pharisee, is made blinde. He that will fill a vessell with wine, must take out the water; He that will fill a covetous mans hand with gold, must take out the silver that was there before, sayes S. Chrysostome. Christ, who is about to infuse new light into Saul, withdrawes that light that was in him before; That light, by which Saul thought he saw all before, and thought himselfe a competent Judge, which was the onely true Religion, and that all others were to be persecuted, even to death, ³⁶⁰ that were not of his way. Stultus factus est omnis homo à scientia, sayes God in the Prophet, Every man that trusts in his owne wit, is a foole.

 But let him become a foole, that he may be wise, sayes the Apostle;
 Let him be so, in his own eyes, and God will give him better eyes, better light, better understanding. Saul was struck blinde, but it was a blindnesse contracted from light; It was a light that struck him blinde, as you see in his story. This blindnesse which we speak of, which is a sober and temperate abstinence from the immoderate study, and curious knowledges of this world, this holy simplicity of the soule, is not a darknesse, a dimnesse, a stupidity in the understanding, ³⁷⁰ contracted by living in a corner, it is not an idle retiring into a Monastery, or into a Village, or a Country solitude, it is not a lazy affectation of ignorance; not darknesse, but a greater light, must make us blinde.

The sight, and the Contemplation of God, and our present benefits by him, and our future interest in him, must make us blinde to the world so, as that we look upon no face, no pleasure, no knowledge, with such an Affection, such an Ambition, such a Devotion, as upon God, and the wayes to him. Saul had such a blindnesse, as came from light; we must affect no other simplicity, then arises from the knowledge of God, and his Religion. And then, Saul had such a blindnesse, as that ³⁸⁰ he fell with it. There are birds, that when their eyes are cieled, still soare up, and up, till they have spent all their strength. Men blinded with the lights of this world, soare still into higher places, or higher knowledges, or higher opinions; but the light of heaven humbles us, and layes flat that soule, which the leaven of this world had puffed and swelled up. That powerfull light felled Saul; but after he was fallen, his owne sight was restored to him againe; Ananias saies to him, Brother Saul, receive thy sight. To those men, who imploy their naturall faculties to the glory of God, and their owne, and others edification, God shall afford an exaltation of those naturall faculties; In those, who use ³⁹⁰ their learning, or their wealth, or their power, well, God shall increase that power, and that wealth, and that learning, even in this world.

You have seene Sauls sicknesse, and the exaltation of the disease, Then when he breathed threatnings, and slaughter, Then when he went in his triumph; And you have seen his death, The death of the righteous, His humiliation, He fell to the earth; And there remaines yet his Resurrection; The Angel of the great Counsell, Christ Jesus, with the Trumpet of his owne mouth, rayses him, with that, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou mee?

Vox

First, he affords him a call, A voyce. Saul could not see; Therefore⁴⁰⁰ he deales not upon him by visions. He gives a voyce; and a voyce that he might heare; God speaks often, when we doe not heare; He heard it, and heard it saying; Not a voyce only, but a distinct, and intelligible voyce; and saying unto him, that is, applicable to himselfe; and then, that that the voyce said to him, was, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me? We are unequall enemies, Thou seest I am too hard for thee, Cur tu me? why wilt thou, thou in this weakenesse oppose me? And then, we might be good friends, Thou seest I offer parly, I offer treaty, Cur tu me? Why wilt thou oppose me, me that declare such a disposition to be reconciled unto thee? In this so great a disadvantage on⁴¹⁰ thy part, why wilt thou stirre at all? In this so great a peaceablenesse on my part, why wilt thou stirre against me? Cur tu me? Why persecutest thou me?

First then, God speakes: For, beloved, we are to consider God, not as he is in himselfe, but as he works upon us: The first thing that we can consider in our way to God, is his Word. Our Regeneration is by his Word; that is, by faith, which comes by hearing; The seed is the word of God, sayes Christ himselfe; Even the seed of faith. Carry it higher, the Creation was by the word of God; Dixit, & facta sunt, God spoke, and all things were made. Carry it to the highest of all, to⁴²⁰ Eternity, the eternall Generation, the eternall Production, the eternall Procession of the second Person in the Trinity, was so much by the Word, as that he is the Word; Verbum caro, It was that Word, that was made Flesh. So that God, who cannot enter into bands to us, hath given us security enough; He hath given us his Word; His written Word, his Scriptures; His Essentiall Word, his Son. Our Principall, and Radicall, and Fundamentall security, is his Essentiall Word, his Son Christ Jesus. But how many millions of generations was this Word in heaven, and never spoke? The Word, Christ himself, hath been as long as God hath been: But the uttering of this Word, speak-⁴³⁰ ing hath been but since the Creation. Peter sayes to Christ, To whom shall we goe? Thou hast the words of eternall life. It is not onely, Thou art the word of eternall life; (Christ is so) But thou hast it; Thou hast it, where we may come to thee for it; In thy Treasury, in thine Ordinance, in thy Church; Thou hast it, to derive it, to convey it upon us. Here then is the first step of Sauls cure, and of ours, That there was not onely a word, the Word, Christ himselfe, a Son of God in heaven, but a Voyce, the word uttered, and preached; Christ manifested in his Ordinance: He heard a voyce.

Iohn 6.68

He heard it. How often does God speake, and nobody heares the ⁴⁴⁰ voyce? He speaks in his Canon, in Thunder, and he speaks in our Canon, in the rumour of warres. He speaks in his musique, in the harmonious promises of the Gospel, and in our musique, in the temporall blessings of peace, and plenty; And we heare a noyse in his Judgements, and wee heare a sound in his mercies; but we heare no voyce, we doe not discern that this noyse, or this sound comes from any certain person; we do not feele them to be mercies, nor to be judgements uttered from God, but naturall accidents, casuall occurrences, emergent contingencies, which as an Atheist might think, would fall out though there were no God, or no commerce, no dealing, ⁴⁵⁰ no speaking between God and Man. Though Saul came not instantly to a perfect discerning who spoke, yet he saw instantly, it was a Person above nature, and therefore speakes to him in that phrase of submission, Quis es Domine? Lord who art thou? And after, with trembling and astonishment, (as the Text sayes) Domine quid me vis facere? Lord what wilt thou have me to do? Then we are truliest said to hear, when we know from whence the voyce comes. Princes are Gods Trumpet, and the Church is Gods Organ, but Christ Jesus is his voyce. When he speaks in the Prince, when he speaks in the Church, there we are bound to heare, and happy if we doe hear. Man hath a natural ⁴⁶⁰ way to come to God, by the eie, by the creature; So Visible things shew the Invisible God: But then, God hath super-induced a supernaturall way, by the eare. For, though hearing be naturall, yet that faith in God should come by hearing a man preach, is supernatural. God shut up the naturall way, in Saul, Seeing; He struck him blind; But he opened the super-naturall way, he inabled him to heare, and to heare him. God would have us beholden to grace, and not to nature, and to come for our salvation, to his Ordinances, to the preaching of his Word, and not to any other meanes. Though hee were blinde, even that blind-nesse, as it was a humiliation, and a diverting of his former glaring ⁴⁷⁰ lights, was a degree of mercy, of preparative mercy; yet there was a voyce, which was another degree; And a voyce that he heard, which was a degree above that; and so farre we are gone; And he heard it, saying, that is distinctly, and intelligibly, which is our next Circumstance.

He heares him saying, that is, He heares him so, as that he knowes what he sayes, so, as that he understands him; for, he that heares the word, and understands it not, is subject to that which Christ sayes, That the wicked one comes, and catches away that that was sowne.
 S. Augustine puts himselfe earnestly upon the contemplation of the ⁴⁸⁰ Creation, as Moses hath delivered it; he findes it hard to conceive, and he sayes, Si esset ante me Moses, If Moses who writ this were here, Tenerem eum, & per te obsecrarem, I would hold him fast, and beg of him, for thy sake, O my God, that he would declare this worke of the Creation more plainly unto me. But then, sayes that blessed Father, Si Hebræa voce loqueretur, If Moses should speake Hebrew to mee, mine eares might heare the sound, but my minde would not heare the voyce; I might heare him, but I should not heare what he said. This was that that distinguished betweene S. Paul, and those who were in his company at this time; S. Luke sayes in this Chapter, That they ⁴⁹⁰ heard the voyce, and S. Paul relating the story againe, after sayes, They heard not the voyce of him that spoke to me; they heard a confused sound, but they distinguished it not to be the voyce of God, nor discerned Gods purpose in it. In the twelfth of Iohn, there came a voyce from Heaven, from God himselfe, and the people said, It thundred.
 So apt is naturall man to ascribe even Gods immediate and miraculous actions to naturall causes; apt to rest and determine in Nature, and leave out God. The Poet chides that weaknesse, (as he cals it) to be afraid of Gods judgements, or to call naturall accidents judgements; Quo morbo mentem concusse? timore Deorum, sayes he; he sayes ⁵⁰⁰ The Conscience may be over-tender, and that such timerous men, are sick of the feare of God; But it is a blessed disease The feare of God, and the true way to true health. And though there be a morall constancy that becomes a Christian well, not to bee easily shaken with the variations and revolutions of this world, yet it becomes him to establish his constancy in this, That God hath a good purpose in that action, not that God hath no hand in that action; That God will produce good out of it, not that God hath nothing to doe in it. The Magicians themselves were forced to confesse Digitum Dei, The finger of God, in a small matter. Never thinke it a weakenesse, to call that a judgement ⁵¹⁰ of God, which others determine in Nature; Doe so, so far as works to thy edification, who seest that judgement, though not so far, as to argue, and conclude the finall condemnation of that man upon whom that judgement is fallen. Certainly, we were better call twenty naturall accidents judgements of God, then frustrate Gods purpose in any of his powerfull deliverances, by calling it a naturall accident, and suffer the thing to vanish so, and God be left unglorified in it, or his Church unedified by it. Then we heare God, when we understand what he sayes; And therefore, as we are bound to blesse God, that he speakes to us, and heares us speake to him, in a language which wee ⁵²⁰ understand, and not in such a strange language, as that a stranger who should come in and heare it, would thinke the Congregation mad; So also let us blesse him for that holy tendernes, to be apt to feele his hand in every accident, and to discern his presence in every thing that befalls us. Saul heard the voyce, saying; He understood what it said, and by that, found that it was directed to him, which is also another step in this last part.

This is an impropriation without sacriledge, and an enclosure of a Common without damage, to make God mine owne, to finde that all that God sayes is spoken to me, and all that Christ suffered was suf-⁵³⁰ fered for me. And as Saul found this voyce at first, to be directed to him, so ever after he bends his eye the same way, and observes the working of God especially upon himselfe; As at the beginning, so in the way too; particularly there, By the grace of God I am that I am; and then, His grace was bestowed on me, And not in vaine; and againe, I have laboured more abundantly then all; And after all, still he considers himselfe, and findes himselfe to be the greatest sinner, Quorum ego maximus. It is called a greatnesse of spirit, or constancy, but it is indeed an incorrigible height of pride, when a man will not beleieve that he is meant in a libel, if he be not named in that libel. It is a fearfull obdura-⁵⁴⁰ tion, to be Sermon-prooffe, or not to take knowledge, that a judgement is denounced against him, because he is not named in the denouncing of that judgement. Is not thy name Simon Magus, if thou buy and sell spirituall things thy selfe? and is not thy servants name Gehazi, if he exact after? Is not thy name Cain, if thou rise up against thy brother? And is not thy name Zacheus, if thou multiply thy wealth by oppression? Is not thy name Dinah, if thou gad abroad, to see who will sollicite thee? And is not the name of Putiphars Wife upon thee, if thou stay at home and sollicite thy servants? Postdate the whole Bible, and whatsoever thou hearest spoken of such, as thou art, before, beleeve ⁵⁵⁰ all that to be spoken but now, and spoken to thee. This was one happiness here, that Saul found this voyce to be directed to him; And another (which is our last Consideration) is what this voyce said; it said, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?

Saul

Here, to make sure of him, God cals him by his name, that hee should not be able to transfer the summons upon any other, or say it was not he. They say that our Noctambulones, men that walke in their sleepe, will wake if they be called by their names. To wake Saul out of this dreame, (for, to thinke to oppose Christ and his cause, is, in the highest person of the world, of what power or of what counsel soever, ⁵⁶⁰ but a vertiginous dreame, and a giddy vapour) to wake him, he cals him by his name, to let him know he meanes him; and to wake him throughly, he cals him twice, Saul, and Saul againe. The great desolation which was to fall upon that land, God intimates, God interminates, God intonates with such a vehemency, Terra, terra, terra, Earth, earth, earth heare the word of the Lord. God should be heard at first, beleeved at first; but such is his abundant goodnesse, as that he ingeminates, multiplies his warnings; And to this whole land he hath said, Terra, terra, terra, Earth, earth, earth heare the Word of the Lord; Once in an Invasion, once in a Powder-treason; and againe, and ⁵⁷⁰ againe in pestilentiall contagions; And to every one of us, he hath said oftner then so, Dust, dust, dust why doest thou lift up thy self against thy Maker? Saul, Saul why persecutest thou mee?

[Joh. 19:30]

Here Christ cals the afflictions of those that are his, in his purpose, his afflictions. Christ will not absolutely verifie his owne words, to his owne ease; He had said before this, upon the Crosse, Consummatum est, All is finished; But though all were finished in his Person, he hath a daily passion in his Saints still. This language which the Apostle learnt of Christ here, himselfe practised, and spake after, Who is weake, and I am not weake? who is offended, and I burne not? Since

⁵⁸⁰ Christ does suffer in our sufferings, be this our consolation, Till he be weary, we should not be weary, nor faint, nor murmur under our burdens; and this too, That when he is weary, he will deliver us even for his owne sake; for he, though he cannot suffer paine, may suffer dishonour in our sufferings; therefore attend his leisure.

We end all in this, Cur tu me? Why doest Thou persecute Me? Why Saul Christ? Put it upon a Nation, (what is any Saul, any one man to a Nation?) Put it upon all the Nations of the World, and you shall heare God aske with an indignation, Quare fremuerunt Gentes? Why doe the heathen rage, why do the people imagine a vaine thing? ⁵⁹⁰ why will they doe it? what can they get? He that sitteth in the Heavens shall laugh; The Lord shall have them in derision. Christ came into the Temple and disputed with the Doctors; but hee did not despise them, he did not laugh at them. When all the Midianites, and all the Amalekites, and all the Children of the East, were in a body against Israel, God did not laugh at them. Gideon his Generall, mustered two and thirty thousand against them. God would not imploy so many in the day of Battaile, yet he did not laugh at them, hee did not whip them out of the field, he made the face of an Army, though it were but three hundred. But when God can chuse his way, Hee can call in ⁶⁰⁰ Nation against Nation, he can cast a dampe upon any Nation, and make them afraid of one another, He can doe an execution upon them by themselves, (I presume you remember those stories in the Bible, where God did proceed by such wayes) or he can sit still in a scorne, and let them melt away of themselves; when he can cast downe Saul to the earth, and never appeare in the cause, benight his noone, frustrate his purposes, evacuate his hopes, annihilate him in the height of his glory, Cur tu me? why will any Saul, any Nation, any World of Sauls persecute Christ, any sinner tempt him, who is so much too hard for him?

⁶¹⁰ Cur me? Why doest thou offer this to me, who being thus much too hard for thee, would yet faine be friends with thee? and therefore came to a parley, to a treaty? for, verba hæc, non tam arguentis, quam defendentis, sayes S. Chrysostome: These are not so much offensive as defensive words; He would not confound Saul, but he would not betray his own honour. To many Nations God hath never spoken; To the Jews he spoke, but suffered them to mistake him; To some whole

But if God speake to thee still, and speake in a mixt voyce, of Correction, and Consolation too, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me? Him that receives so little benefit by thee, and yet is so loath to lose thee, Him that can so easily spare thee, and yet makes thy soule more precious then his own life, Him that can resolve thee, scatter thee, annihilate thee with a word, and yet afford so many words, so many houres conferences, so many Sermons to reclaime thee, why persecutest Thou Him? Answer this ⁶³⁰ question, with Sauls answer to this question, by another question, Domine quid me vis facere? Lord what wilt thou have me do? Deliver thy selfe over to the will of God, and God shall deliver thee over, as he did Saul to Ananias; provide thee by his Ministry in his Ordinance, means to rectifie thee, in all dejection of spirit, light to cleare thee in all perplexities of conscience, in the wayes of thy pilgrimage, and more and more effectuell seals thereof, at the houre of thy transmigration into his joy, and thine eternall rest.

Preached at White-hall, March 4. 1624. [1624/5]

MAT. 19.17. AND HE SAID UNTO HIM, WHY CALLEST THOU ME GOOD? THERE IS NONE GOOD BUT ONE; THAT IS, GOD.

THAT WHICH God commanded by his Word, to be done at some times (that we should humble our soules by fasting) the same God commands by his Church, to be done now: In the Scriptures you have Præceptum, The thing it self, What; In the Church, you have the Nunc, The time, When. The Scriptures are Gods Voyce; The Church is his Eccho; a redoubling, a repeating of some particular syllables, and accents of the same voice. And as we harken with some earnestnesse, and some admiration at an Eccho, when perchance we doe not understand the voice that occasioned that Eccho; so doe the¹⁰ obedient children of God apply themselves to the Eccho of his Church, when perchance otherwise, they would lesse understand the voice of God, in his Scriptures, if that voice were not so redoubled unto them. This fasting then, thus enjoyed by God, for the generall, in his Word, and thus limited to this Time, for the particular, in his Church, is indeed but a continuation of a great Feast: Where, the first course (that which we begin to serve in now) is Manna, food of Angels, plentifull, frequent preaching; but the second course, is the very body and blood of Christ Jesus, shed for us, and given to us, in that blessed Sacrament, of which himselfe makes us worthy receivers at that time.²⁰ Now, as the end of all bodily eating, is Assimilation, that after all other concoctions, that meat may be made Idem corpus, the same body that I am; so the end of all spirituall eating, is Assimilation too, That after all Hearing, and all Receiving, I may be made Idem spiritus cum Domino, the same spirit, that my God is: for, though it be good to Heare, good to Receive, good to Meditate, yet, (if we speake effectually, and consummatively) why call we these good? there is nothing good but One, that is, Assimilation to God; In which perfect and consummative sense, Christ saies to this Man, in this Text, Why callest thou me good? there is none good but one, that is God.

Divisio ³⁰ The words are part of a Dialogue, of a Conference, betweene Christ, and a man who proposed a question to him; to whom Christ makes an answer by way of another question, Why callest thou me good, &c. In the words, and by occasion of them, we consider the Text, the Context, and the Pretext: Not as three equall parts of the Building; but the Context, as the situation and Prospect of the house, The Pretext, as the Accesse and entrance to the house, And then the Text it selfe, as the House it selfe, as the body of the building: In a word, In the Text, the Words; in the Context, the Occasion of the words; In the Pretext, the Pretence, the purpose, the disposition of him who gave the occasion.

1 Part.
Context

⁴⁰ We begin with the Context; the situation, the prospect; how it stands, how it is butted, how it is bounded; to what it relates, with what it is connected. And in that, we are no farther curious, but onely to note this, that the Text stands in that Story, where a man comes to Christ, inquires the way to Heaven, beleeves himselfe to be in that way already, and (when he heares of nothing, but keeping the Commandements) beleeves himselfe to be far gone in that way; But when he is told also, that there belongs to it a departing with his Riches, his beloved Riches, he breakes off the conference, he separates himselfe from Christ; for, (saies the Story) This Man had great possessions.

⁵⁰ And to this purpose, (to separate us from Christ) the poorest amongst us, hath great possessions. He that starves, as well as he that surfeits, he that lies in the spitting places, and excrementall corners of the streets, as well as he that sits upon carpets, in the Region of perfumes, he that is ground and trod to durt, with obloquie, and contempt, as well as he that is built up every day, a story and story higher with additions of Honour, Every man hath some such possessions as possesse him, some such affections as weigh downe Christ Jesus, and separate him from Him, rather then from those affections, those possessions. Scarce any sinner but comes sometimes to Christ, in the ⁶⁰ language of the man in this Text, Good Master what good thing shall I do, that I may have eternall life? And if Christ would go no farther with such men, but to say to the Adulterer, Do not thou give thy money to usury; no more to the penurious Usurer, but, Do not thou wast thy selfe in superfluous and expensive feasting; If Christ would proceed no farther, but to say to the needy person, that had no money, Do not thou buy preferment; or to the ambitious person that soares up after all, Do not thou forsake thy selfe, deject thy selfe, undervalue thy selfe, In all these cases, the Adulterer and the Usurer, The needy and the ambitious man, would all say with the man in the Text, All ⁷⁰ these things have we done from our youth. But when Christ proceeds to a Vade, & vende, to depart with their possessions, that which they possesse, that which possesses them, this changes the case.

There are some sins so rooted, so riveted in men, so incorporated, so consubstantiated in the soule, by habituall custome, as that those sins have contracted the nature of Ancient possessions. As men call Manours by their names, so sins have taken names from men, and from places; Simon Magus gave the name to a sin, and so did Gehazi, and Sodom did so: There are sins that run in Names, in Families, in Blood; Hereditary sins, entailed sins; and men do almost prove their ⁸⁰ Gentry by those sins, and are scarce beleev'd to be rightly borne, if they have not those sins; These are great possessions, and men do much more easily part with Christ, then with these sins. But then there are lesse sins, light sins, vanities; and yet even these come to possesse us, and separate us from Christ. How many men neglect this ordinary meanes of their Salvation, the comming to these Exercises, not because their undoing lyes on it, or their discountenancing; but meerely out of levity, of vanity, of nothing; they know not what to do else, and yet do not this. You heare of one man that was drowned in a vessell of Wine; but how many thousands in ordinary water? And ⁹⁰ he was no more drowned in that precious liquor, then they in that common water. A gad of steele does no more choake a man, then a feather, then a haire; Men perish with whispering sins, nay with silent sins, sins that never tell the conscience they are sins, as often as with crying sins: And in hell there shall meet as many men, that never thought what was sin, as that spent all their thoughts in the compassing of sin; as many, who in a slack inconsideration, never cast a thought upon that place, as that by searing their conscience, overcame the sense and feare of that place. Great sins are great possessions; but

2 Part.
Pretext

levities and vanities possesse us too; and men had rather part with 100 Christ, then with any possessions; which is all we will note out of this first part, The Context, the situation, and prospect of the house, the coherence and connexion of the Text.

The second part, is the pretext; that is the pretense, the purpose, the disposition of him that moved this question to Christ, and occasioned this answer. Upon which we make this stop, because it hath been variously apprehended by the Expositors; for some think he came in an humble disposition to learn of Christ, and others think he came in a Pharisaicall confidence in himself, with which Epiphanius first, and then S. Ierome charge him. But in such doubtful cases in other mens 110 actions, when it appeares not evidently, whether it were well, or ill done, where the balance is eaven, alwayes put you in your charity, and that will turne the scale the best way. Things which are in themselves, but mis-interpretable, doe not you presently mis-interpret, you allow some graines to your gold, before you call it light: allow some infirmities to any man, before you call him ill. For this man in the Text, venit, sayes this Euangelist, he came to Christ, he came of himselfe. S. Peter himself came not so, S. Peter came not, till his brother Andrew brought him: none of the twelve Apostles came to Christ so, they came not, till Christ called them: Here, we heare of no calling, no inviting, 120 no mention of any motion towards him, no intimation of any intimation to him, and yet he came. Blessed are they that come to Christ Jesus, before any collaterall respects draw them, before the Laws compell them, before calamities drive them to him: He onely comes hither, that comes voluntarily, and is glad he is here; He that comes so, as that he had rather he were away, is not here. Venit, sayes our Euangelist, of this man: And then, sayes S. Mark, handling the same story, Venit procurrens, He came running. Nicodemus came not so, Nicodemus durst not avow his comming; and therefore he came creeping, and he came softly, and he came seldome, and he came by night.

130 Blessed are they who make haste to Christ, and publish their zeale to the encouragement of others: For, let no man promise himself a religious constancy in the time of his triall, that doth not his part in establishing the religious constancy of other men. Of all proofes, Demonstration is the powerfulest: when I have just reason to think my superiours would have it thus, this is Musique to my soul; When

I heare them say they would have it thus, this is Rhetorique to my soule; When I see their Laws enjoyne it to be thus, this is Logick to my soul; but when I see them actually, really, clearly, constantly do thus, this is a Demonstration to my soule, and Demonstration is the ¹⁴⁰ powerfulllest prooffe: The eloquence of inferiours is in words, the eloquence of superiours is in action.

He came to Christ; hee ran to him; and when he was come, as S. Mark relates it, He fell upon his knees to Christ. He stood not then Pharisaiically upon his own legs, his own merits, though he had been a diligent observer of the Commandements before. Blessed are they, who bring the testimony of a former zeale to Gods service, and yet make no excuse for their present, or future slacknesse; The benefit of our former goodnesse is, that that enables us to be the better still: For, as all example is powerfull upon us, so our own example most of all;
¹⁵⁰ in this case we are most immediately bound by our selves; still to be so good, as we our selves have been before: There was a time when I was nothing; but there shall never be any time, when I shall be nothing; and therefore I am most to respect the future. The good services that a man hath done to God by pen, or sword, are wings, and they exalt him if he would go forward; but they are waights and depresse him, and aggravate his condemnation, if his presumption upon the merit of those former services, retard him for the future. This man had done well, but he stood not upon that; he kneeled to Christ, and he said to him, Magister bone, Good master. He was no ignorant man, ¹⁶⁰ and yet he acknowledged that he had somewhat more to learn of Christ, then he knew yet. Blessed are they that inanimate all their knowledge, consummate all in Christ Jesus. The University is a Paradise, Rivers of knowledge are there, Arts and Sciences flow from thence. Counsell Tables are Horti conclusi, (as it is said in the Canticles) Gardens that are walled in, and they are Fontes signati, Wells that are sealed up; bottomlesse depths of unsearchable Counsels there. But those Aquæ quietudinum, which the Prophet speaks of, The waters of rest, they flow à magistro bono, from this good master, and flow into him again; All knowledge that begins not, and ends not with ¹⁷⁰ his glory, is but a giddy, but a vertiginous circle, but an elaborate and exquisite ignorance. He would learn of him, and what? Quid boni faciam, What good thing shall I do? Still he refers to the future; to do as well as to have done: and still to be doing so. Blessed are they that bring their knowledge into practise; and blessed again, that crown their former practise with future perseverance.

This was his disposition that came; His, though he were a yong man; (for so he is said to be, in the 22. ver.) and yong men are not often so forward in such wayes. I remember one of the Panegyriques celebrates and magnifies one of the Romane Emperors for this, That Luke 18.18 ¹⁸⁰ he would marry when he was yong; that he would so soon confine and limit his pleasures, so soon determine his affections in one person. When a yong man comes to Christ, Christ receives him with an extraordinary welcome; well intimated in that, that that disciple whom Christ loved most, came to him yongest. He came though he were yong; and he came though he were Vnus è principibus, (for so he is qualified in S. Luke) A principall man, a great man; as we translate it, One of the Rulers: for so he is a reall and a personall answer and instance to that scornfull question of the Pharisees, Nunquid è principibus, Do any of the Rulers, any great men, beleeve in Christ?
 I Cor. 1.26 ¹⁹⁰ It is true that the Holy Ghost doth say, Non multi nobiles, few noble men come to heaven. Not out of Panigorola, the Bishop of Asti, his reason, Pauci quia pauci, There cannot come many noble men to heaven, because there are not many upon earth; for many times there are many. In calme and peaceable times, the large favours of indulgent Princes, in active and stirring times, the merit and the fortune of forward men, do often enlarge the number. But such is often the corrupt inordinatenesse of greatnesse, that it only carries them so much beyond other men, but not so much nearer to God; It only sets men at a farther, not God at a nearer distance to them; but because they are
 I King. 20.28 ²⁰⁰ come to be called gods, they think they have no farther to go to God, but to themselves. But God is the God of the Mountains, as well as of the Valleys: Great and small are equall, and equally nothing in his sight: for, when all the world is In pugillo, in Gods fist, (as the Prophet speaks) who can say then, This is the Ant, this is the Elephant? Our conversation should be in heaven; and if we look upon the men of this world, as from heaven, as if we looked upon this world it self, from thence, the hils would be no hils, but all one flat and equall plain; so are all men, one kinde of dust. Records of nobility are only from the book of Life, and your preferment is your interest in a place ²¹⁰ at the right hand of God. But yet, when those men whom God hath raised in this world, take him in their armes, and raise him too, though God cannot be exalted above himself, yet he is content to call this a raising, and to thank them for it. Therefore when this man, a man of this rank came to him, Jesus beheld him, sayes the Gospell, and he loved him, and he said, One thing thou lackest; God knows, he lacked many things; but because he had that one, zeale to him, Christ doth not reproach to him his other defects: God pardons great men many errors, for that one good affection, a generall zeale to his glory, and his cause.

²²⁰ His disposition then, (though it have seemed suspitious, and questionable to some) was so good, as that it hath afforded us these good considerations. If it were not so good as these circumstances promise, yet it affords us another as good consideration, That how bad soever it were, Christ Jesus refused him not, when he came to him. When he enquired of Christ after salvation, Christ doth not say, There is no salvation for thee, thou Viper, thou Hypocrite, thou Pharisee, I have locked an iron doore of predestination between salvation and thee; when he enquired of him, what he should do to be sure of heaven, Christ doth not say, There is no such art, no such way, no such assurance here; but you must look into the eternall decree of Election first, ²³⁰ and see whether that stand for you or no: But Christ teaches him the true method of this art: for, when he sayes to him, Why callest thou me good? There is none good but God, he only directs him in the way to that end, which he did indeed, or pretended to seek. And this direction of his, this method is our third part; In which, (having already seen in the first, the Context) the situation and prospect of the house, that is, the coherence and occasion of the words, And in the second, (the Pretext) the accesse and entrance to the house, that is, the pretense and purpose of him that occasioned the words, you may now be pleased ²⁴⁰ to look farther into the house it self, and to see how that is built; that is, by what method Christ builds up, and edifies this new disciple of his; which is the principall scope and intention of the Text, and that, to which all the rest did somewhat necessarily prepare the way.

Our Saviour Christ thus undertaking the farther rectifying of this thus disposed disciple, by a faire method leads him to the true end; Good ends, and by good wayes, consummate goodness. Now Christs answer to this man is diversly read: We reade it, (as you have heard) why callest thou me good? The vulgat Edition in the Romane Church, reads it thus, Quid me interrogas de bono? Why dost thou question ²⁵⁰ me concerning goodnesse? Which is true? That which answers the Originall; and it can admit no question, but that ours doth so. But yet, Origen, to be sure, in his eighth Tractate upon this Gospell, reads it both wayes: And S. Augustine, in his 63. Chap. of the second book De consensu Evangelistarum, thinks it may very well be beleaved, that Christ did say both: That when this man called him good master, Christ said then, There was none good but God; and that when this man asked him, what good thing he should do, then Christ said, Why dost thou ask me, me whom thou thinkest to be but a meere man, what is goodnesse? There is none good but God; If thou look to under-²⁶⁰ stand goodnesse from man, thou must look out such a man as is God too. So that this was Christs method, by these holy insinuations, by these approaches, and degrees, to bring this man to a knowledge, that he was very God, and so the Messias that was expected. Nihil est falsitas, nisi cum esse putatur, quod non est: All error consists in this, that we take things to be lesse or more, other then they are. Christ was pleased to redeem this man from this error, and bring him to know truly what he was, that he was God. Christ therefore doth not rebuke this man, by any denying that he himself was good; for Christ doth assume that addition to himself, I am the good Shepheard. Neither ²⁷⁰ doth God forbid, that those good parts which are in men, should be celebrated with condigne praise. We see that God, as soon as he saw that any thing was good, he said so, he uttered it, he declared it, first of the Light, and then of other creatures: God would be no author, no example of smothering the due praise of good actions. For, surely that man hath no zeale to goodnesse in himself, that affords no praise to goodnesse in other men.

3. Part

But Christs purpose was also, that this praise, this recognition, this testimony of his goodnesse, might be carried higher, and referred to the only true author of it, to God. So the Priests and the Elders come to ²⁸⁰ Iudith, and they say to her, Thou art the exaltation of Jerusalem, thou art the great glory of Israel, thou art the rejoycing of our Nation, thou hast done all these things by thy hand; And all this was true of Iudith, and due to Iudith; and such recognitions, and such acclamations God

August.

[Joh. 10.11]

Judith 15.8

requires of such people, as have received such benefits by such instruments: For as there is Treason, and petty-treason, so there is Sacriledge, and petty-sacriledge; and petty-sacriledge is to rob Princes and great persons of their just praise. But then, as we must confer this upon them, so must they, and we, and all transfer all upon God: for so Iudith proceeds there, with her Priests and Elders, Begin unto my God, with ²⁹⁰ Timbrels, sing unto the Lord with Cymbals, exalt him, and call upon his name. So likewise Elizabeth magnifies the blessed Virgin Mary, Blessed art thou amongst women: And this was true of her, and due to her; and she takes it to her self, when she sayes there, From henceforth all Generations shall call me blessed; but first, she had carried it higher, to the highest, My soule doth magnifie the Lord, and my spirit doth rejoyce in God my Saviour. In a word, Christ forbids not this man to call him good, but he directs him to know in what capacity that attribute of goodnesse belonged to him, as he was God: That when this man beleevved before that Christ was good, and learnt ³⁰⁰ from him now, that none was good but God, he might by a farther concoction, a farther rumination, a farther meditation of this, come in due time to know that Christ was God; And this was his Method.

Luke 1.42

Now this leads us into two rich and fragrant fields; this sets us upon the two Hemispheares of the world; the Western Hemisphære, the land of Gold, and Treasure, and the Eastern Hemisphære, the land of Spices and Perfumes; for this puts us upon both these considerations, first, that nothing is Essentially good, but God, (and there is the land of Gold, centricall Gold, viscerall Gold, gremiall Gold, Gold in the Matrice and womb of Gold, that is, Essentiall ³¹⁰ goodnesse in God himself) and then upon this consideration too, That this Essentiall goodnesse of God is so diffusive, so spreading, as that there is nothing in the world, that doth not participate of that goodnesse; and there is the land of Spices and Perfumes, the dilatation of Gods goodnesse. So that now both these propositions are true, First, That there is nothing in this world good, and then this also, That there is nothing ill: As, amongst the Fathers, it is in a good sense, as truly said, Deus non est Ens, Deus non est substantia, God is no Essence, God is no substance, (for feare of imprisoning God in a predicament) as it is said by others of the Fathers, that there is no

First then, there is nothing good but God: neither can I conceive any thing in God, that concerns me so much as his goodnesse; for, by that I know him, and for that I love him. I know him by that, for, as *Damasce*n sayes, primarium Dei nomen, Bonitas; Gods first name, that is, the first way by which God notified himself to man, was Goodness; for out of his goodnesse he made him. His name of Jehova we admire with a reverence; but we cannot expresse that name: not only not in the signification of it, but not confidently, not assuredly in the sound thereof; we are not sure that we should call it Jehova; not sure that any man did call it Jehova a hundred yeares agoe. But,

Aug. ³³⁰ ineffabili dulcedine teneor cum audio, Bonus Dominus; I am, not transported with astonishment, as at his name of Jehova, but replenished with all sweetnesse, established with all soundnesse, when I hear of my God in that name, my good God. By that I know him, and for that I love him: For, the object of my understanding is truth; but the object of my love, my affection, my desire, is goodnesse. If my understanding be defective, in many cases, faith will supply it; if I beleeeve it, I am as well satisfied, as if I knew it; but nothing supplies, nor fills, nor satisfies the desire of man, on this side of God;

Aug. ³⁴⁰ Every man hath something to love, and desire, till he determine it in God; because God only hath Imminuibilem bonitatem, as they render Dyonisius the Areopagite, an inexhaustible goodnesse; a sea that no land can suck in, a land that no sea can swallow up, a forrest that no fire can waste, a fire that no water can quench. He is so good, goodnesse so, as that he is Causa bonorum, & quæ in nos, & quæ in nobis, the cause of all good either received by us, or conceived in us; of all, either prepared externally for us, or produced internally in us. In a word, he is Bonum cætera bona colorans, & amabilia reddens, it is his goodnesse, that gilds and enamels all the good persons, or good actions

Idem ³⁵⁰ in this world. There is none good but God; and quale bonum ille, sayes that Father, what kinde of goodnesse God is, this doth sufficiently declare, Quòd nulli ab eo recedenti bene sit, That no man that ever went from him, went by good way, or came to good end; There is none good but God; there is centricall, viscerall, gremiall gold, goodnesse in the roote, in the tree of goodnesse, God.

[Mat. 7.17] Now, Arbor bona, bonos fructus, sayes Christ; If the tree be good, the fruit is good too. The tree is God; What are the fruits of this tree?

What are the off-spring of God? S. Ambrose tells us, Angeli & homines, & virtutes eorum; Angels and men, and the good parts, and ³⁶⁰ good actions of Angels and men, are the fruit of this tree, they grow from God. Angels, as they fell, Adam, as he fell, the sins of Angels and men, are not fruits of this tree, they grow not radically, not primarily from God. Nihil in se habet Deus semi-plenum, saies Damascen: God is no half-god, no fragmentary God; he is an intire God, and not made of remnants; not good only so, as that he hath no roome for ill in himself, but good so too, as that he hath no roome for any ill will towards any man; no mans damnation, no mans sin, growes radically from this tree. When God had made all, saies Tertullian, he blessed all; Maledicere non norat, quia nec malefacere, saies he:
³⁷⁰ God could no more meane ill, then doe ill; God can no more make me sin, then sin himself. It is the foole that saies, There is no God, saies David; And it is the other foole, saies S. Basil, that saies, God produces any ill; par precii scelus, quia negat Deum bonum; It is as impiously done, to deny God to be intirely good, as to deny him to be God. For, we see the Manichees, and the Marcionites, and such other Heretiques in the Primitive Church, would rather admit, and constitute two Gods, a good God, and a bad God, then be drawn to think, that he that was the good God indeed, could produce any ill of himself, or meane any ill to any man, that had done none.

³⁸⁰ And therefore even from Plato himself, some Christians might learn more moderation in expressing themselves in this point; Plato saies, Creavit quia bonus, therefore did God create us, that he might be good to us; and then he addes, Bono nunquam inest invidia, certainly that God, that made us out of his goodnesse, does not now envy us that goodnesse which he hath communicated to us; certainly he does not wish us worse, that so he might more justly damne us, and therefore compell us, by any positive decree, to sin, to justifie his desire of damning us: Much lesse did this good God hate us, or meane ill to us, before he made us, and made us only therefore, that he might have ³⁹⁰ glory in our destruction. There is nothing good but God, there is nothing but goodnesse in God.

How abusively then doe men call the things of this world, Goods? They may as well call them (so they do in their hearts) Gods, as Goods; for there is none good but God. But how much more abusively do they force the word, that call them Bona quia beant, Goods because they make us good, blessed, happy? In which sense, Seneca uses the word shrewdly, Insolens malum beata uxor, a good wife, a blessed wife, sayes he, that is, a wife that brings a great estate, is an insolent mischief. If we doe but cast our eye upon that title in the ⁴⁰⁰ Law, Bonorum, and De bonis, of Goods, we shall easily see, what poor things they make shift to call Goods. And if we consider (if it deserve a consideration) how great a difference their Lawyers make (Baldus makes that, and others with him) between Bonorum possessio, and possessio bonorum, that one should amount to a right and propriety in the goods, and the other but to a sequestration of such goods, we may easily see, that they can scarce tell what to call, or where to place such Goods. Health, and strength, and stature, and comelinesse, must be called Goods, though but of the body; The body it self is in the substance it self, but dust; these are but the accidents of that dust, ⁴¹⁰ and yet they must be Goods. Land, and Money, and honor must be called Goods, though but of fortune; Fortune her self, is but such an Idol, as that S. Augustine was ashamed ever to have named her in his works, and therefore repents it in his Retractations; her self is but an Idol, and an Idol is nothing, these, but the accidents of that nothing, and yet they must be Goods. Are they such Goods, as make him necessarily good that hath them? Or such, as no man can be good, that is without them? How many men make themselves miserable, because they want these Goods? And how many men have been made miserable by others, because they had them? Except thou see the face ⁴²⁰ of God upon all thy money, as well as the face of the King, the hand of God to all thy Patents, as well as the hand of the King, Gods Amen, as well as the Kings fiat, to all thy creations, all these reach not to the title of Goods, for there is none good but God.

Nothing in this world; not if thou couldst have it all; carry it higher, to the highest, to heaven; heaven it self were not good, without God. For, in the Schoole, very many and very great men, have thought and taught, That the humane nature of Christ, though united Hypo-statically to the Divine Nature, was not meerly by that Union, impeccable, but might have sinned, if besides that Union, God had not ⁴³⁰ infused, and super-induced other graces, of which other graces, the Beatificall vision, the present sight of the face and Essence of God,

was one: Because, (say they) Christ had from his Conception, in his Humane Nature, that Beatificall Vision of God, which we shall have in the state of Glory, therefore he could not sin. This Beatificall Vision, say they, which Christ had here, and which, (as they suppose, and not improbably, in the problematicall way of the Schoole) God, of his absolute power, might have with-held, and yet the Hypostaticall Union have remained perfect; (for, say they, the two Natures, Humane and Divine, might have been so united, and yet the Humane ⁴⁴⁰ not have so seen the Divine) This Beatificall Vision, this sight of God, was the Cause, or Seal, or Consummation of Christs Perfection, and impeccability in his Humane Nature. Much more is this Beatificall Vision, this sight of God in Heaven, the Cause or Consummation of all the joyes and glory which we shall receive in that place: for howsoever they dispute, whether that kinde of Blessednesse consist in seeing God, formaliter, or causaliter, that is, whether I shall see all things in God, as in a glasse, in which the species of all things are, or whether I shall see all things, by God, as by the benefit of a light, which shall discover all things to me, yet they all agree, (though they ⁴⁵⁰ differ de modo, of the manner, how) that howsoever it be, the substance of the Blessednesse is in this, that I shall see God: Blessed are the pure in heart, sayes Christ, for they shall see God; If they should not see God, they were not blessed. And therefore they who place children that die unbaptised, in a roome, where though they feele no torment, yet they shall never see God, durst never call that roome a part of heaven, but of hell rather; Though there be no torment, yet, if they see not God, it is hell. There is nothing good in this life, nothing in the next, without God, that is, without sight and fruition of the face, and presence of God; which is that, which S. Augustine intends, ⁴⁶⁰ when he sayes, Secutio Dei est appetitus Beatitatis, consecutio Beatitatis; our looking towards God, is the way to Blessednesse, but Blessednesse it self is only the sight of God himself.

That therefore thou maist begin thy heaven here, put thy self in the sight of God, put God in thy sight, in every particular action. We cannot come to the body of the Sun, but we can use the light of the Sun many waies: we cannot come to God himself here, but yet here we can see him by many manifestations: so many, as that S. Augustine, in his 20. Chapt. De moribus Ecclesiæ Catholicæ, hath collected aright places of Scripture, where every one of our senses is called a ⁴⁷⁰ Seeing; there is a Gustate & videte, and audite, and palpate; tasting, and hearing, and feeling, and all, to this purpose, are called seeing;

 In all our senses, in our faculties, we may see God if we will: God sees us at midnight; he sees us, then, when we had rather he looked off. If we see him so, it is a blessed interview. How would he that were come abroad at mid-night, to doe a mischiefe, sneak away, if he saw the watch? what a damp must it necessarily cast upon any sinner, in the nearest approach to his sin, if he can see God? See him before thou sinnest; then he looks lovingly: After the sin, remember how fain Adam would have hid himself from God: He that goes one step out ⁴⁸⁰ of Gods sight, is loath to come into it againe: If you will sit at the right hand of God hereafter, you must walk with God here; So Abraham, so Enoch walked with God, and God took him. God knowes, God takes not every man that dies: God sayes to the rich secure man, Foole, this night they shall fetch away thy soule; but he does not tell him who. That then you be no strangers to God then, see him now; and remember, that his last judgement is expressed in that word, Nescio vos, I know you not; not to be known by God, is damnation; and God knows no man there, with whom he was not acquainted here. There is none good but God; the fruition of that God, is in seeing him; The ⁴⁹⁰ way to see him there, is to look towards him here. And so we have gone as far as the first of our two propositions carried us, That in this world there is nothing good.

The other that remains, is, That there is nothing ill; that this goodnesse of God is so spread over all, (all actions, all persons) as that there is nothing ill. Seneca, whom Tertullian calls still Senecam nostram, our Seneca, that is, that Christian Seneca, as though he had read that of S. Paul, (between whom and him, it hath been thought, there passed Epistles) Quid habes, quod non accepisti? what hast ⁵⁰⁰ thou, that thou hast not received from God? and meant to say more then that, sayes quid non dedit? what is there, that were good for thee, that God hath not given thee? And he, whom they call so often Platonem Hebræorum, the Jews Plato, that is, Philo Iudæus, sayes well, Nihil boni sterile creavit Deus; God hath made nothing, in which he hath not imprinted, and from which he hath not produced some good:
 He follows it so far, (and justly) as to say, that God does good, where

that good does no good: He takes his examples from Gods raining in the Sea; that rain does no good in the Sea: And from Gods producing fresh springs in the desert Land, where, not only no beasts come to drink, but where the very salt tide overflows the fresh spring. He ⁵¹⁰ might have added an example from Paradise, that God would plant such a garden, for so few houres; that God would provide man such a dwelling, when he knew he would not dwell a day in it. And he might have added an example from the Light too; That God would create light, and say it was good, then when it could be good for nothing, for there was nothing made to see it, nor to be seen by it: so forward, so early was God, in diffusing his goodnesse. Of every particular thing, God said it was good, and of all together, that it was very good; there was, there is nothing ill. For, when it is ordinarily inquired in the Schoole, whether any thing be essentially good, it is ⁵²⁰ safely answered there, that if by essentially we mean independantly, so good as that it can subsist of it self, without dependance upon, or relation to any other thing, so there is nothing essentially good: But if by essentially good, we mean that whose essence, and beeing is good, so every thing is essentially good. And therefore when the Manichees pressed S. Augustine with that, Vnde malum? If there be not an ill God, as wel as a good, unde malum, from whom, or from whence proceed all that ill that is in the world? S. Augustine saies, Vnde malum? Quid malum? From whence comes evill? Why, what is there, that you can call evill? I know no such thing; so that, if there ⁵³⁰ be such a God, that God hath no creature. For, as poisons conduce to Physick, and discord to Musick, so those two kinds of evill, into which we contract all others, are of good use, that is, malum pœnæ, the evill of punishment, affliction, adversity, and malum culpæ, even sin it selfe, from which, the punishment flowes.

Be pleased to stop a little, upon each of these. First, malum pœnæ, affliction, poverty, sicknesse, imprisonment, banishment, and such, are not evill. The blood of Christ Jesus only is my cordiall; that restores me, repaires me; but affliction is my Physick; that purges, that cleanses me. Hostiliter se opponit medicus, saies Tertullian, The Physitian ⁵⁴⁰ comes in like an enemy, with a knife to launce, with fire to cauterize, but opponit se morbo, he is but an enemy to the disease, he means the patient no harm; no more does God to me, in all his medicinall corrections. But how if these afflictions hang long upon me? If they do so, that is Ægrotantium animarum diæta; God enters into another course of Physick, and finds it better for me to spend my disease by a diet; and long sicknesses are such diets: God will recover my soul by a consumption of the body, and establish everlasting health, by long sicknesses. Howsoever, let Gods corrections go as high as they can go in this world, Etsi novum videtur, quod dicere volo, saies Origen, dicam

⁵⁵⁰ tamen; Though it be strange that I will say, I wil say it, Etiam bonitas Dei est, qui dicitur furor ejus; That which we cal the anger of God, the wrath of God, the fury of God, is the goodnesse of God. Correct me not O Lord, in thy wrath, saies David; but, rather then leave me

[Psa. 6.1]

uncorrected, correct me any way. We call God, Just, and we call him Mercifull, according to our present taste of God, and use of God, Cum unicam habeat affectionem Deus, nempe bonitatem, when as God hath but one affection in himself, that is, goodnesse, nor but one purpose upon us, that is, to doe us good.

So then, this which we call Malum pænæ, Affliction, Adversity, is ⁵⁶⁰ not evill; That which occasions this, Malum culpæ, sin it self, is not evill; not evill so, as that it should make us incapable of this diffusive goodnesse of God. You know, I presume, in what sense we say in the Schoole, Malum nihil, and Peccatum nihil, that evill is nothing, sin is nothing; that is, it hath no reality, it is no created substance, it is but a privation, as a shadow is, as sickness is; so it is nothing. It is wittily argued by Boethius, God can do all things; God cannot sin; Therefore sin is nothing. But it is strongly argued by S. Augustin, If there be any thing naturally evill, it must necessarily be contrary to that which is naturally good; and that is God. Now Contraria æqualia, saies he; ⁵⁷⁰ whatsoever things are contrary to one another, are equall to one another; so, if we make any thing naturally evill, we shall slide into the Manichees error, to make an Evill God. So farre doth the Schoole follow this, as that there, one Archbishop of Canterbury, out of another, that is, Bradwardin out of Anselme, pronounces it Hæreticum esse dicere, Malum esse aliquid, To say that any thing is naturally evill, is an heresie.

But if I cannot finde a foundation for my comfort, in this subtilty of the Schoole, That sin is nothing, (no such thing as was created or induced by God, much lesse forced upon me by him, in any coactive ⁵⁸⁰ Decree) yet I can raise a second step for my consolation in this, that be sin what it will in the nature thereof, yet my sin shall conduce and cooperate to my good. So Ioseph saies to his Brethren, You thought evill against me, but God meant it unto good: which is not onely good to Ioseph, who was no partaker in the evill, but good even to them, who meant nothing but evill. And therefore, as Origen said, Etsi novum, Though it be strangely said, yet I say it, That Gods anger is good; so saies S. Augustine, Audeo dicere, Though it be boldly said, yet I must say it, Vtile esse cadere in aliquod manifestum peccatum, Many sinners would never have beene saved, if they had not committed some greater sin at last, then before; for, the punishment of that sin, hath brought them to a remorse of all their other sins formerly neglected. If neither of these will serve my turne, neither that sin is nothing in it selfe, and therefore not put upon me by God, nor that my sin, having occasioned my repentance, hath done me good, and established me in a better state with God, then I was in before that sin, yet this shall fully rectifie me, and assure my consolation, that in a pious sense I may say, Christ Jesus is the sinner, and not I. For, though in the two and twentieth Session of the Councell of Basil, that proposition were condemned as scandalous, in the mouth of a Bishop of Nazareth, ⁶⁰⁰ Augustinus de Roma, Christus quotidie peccat, That Christ does sin every day, yet Gregory Nazianzen expresses the same intention, in equivalent termes, when he saies, Quamdiu inobediens ego, tamdiu, quantum ad me attinet, inobediens Christus: As long as I sin, for so much as concernes me, me, who am incorporated in Christ, me, who by my true repentance have discharged my selfe upon Christ, Christ is the sinner, even in the sight, and justice of his Father, and not I.

And as this consideration, That the goodnesse of God, in Christ, is thus spread upon all persons, and all actions, takes me off from my aptnesse to mis-interpret other mens actions, not to be hasty to call

⁶¹⁰ indifferent things, sins, not to call hardnesse of accesse in great Persons, pride, not to call sociablenesse of conversation in women, prostitution, not to call accommodation of Civill businesses in States, prevarication, or dereliction and abandoning of God, and toleration of Religion; as it takes me off from this mis-interpreting of others; so, for my selfe, it puts me upon an ability, to chide, and yet to cheare my soule, with those words of David, O my Soule, why art thou so sad? why art thou so dis-

quieted within me? Since sin is nothing, no such thing as is forced upon thee by God, by which thy damnation should be inevitable, or thy reconciliation impossible, since of what nature soever sin be in it ⁶²⁰ selfe, thy sins being truly repented, have advanced, and improved thy state in the favour of God, since thy sin, being by that repentance discharged upon Christ, Christ is now the sinner, and not thou, O my Soule, why art thou so sad? why art thou disquieted within me? And this consideration of Gods goodnesse, thus derived upon me, and made mine in Christ, ratifies and establishes such a holy confidence in me, as that all the morall constancy in the world, is but a bulrush, to this bulwark; and therefore, we end all, with that historicall, but yet usefull note, That that Duke of Burgundy, who was sirnamed Carolus Audax, Charles the Bold, was Son to that Duke, who was sirnamed ⁶³⁰ Bonus, The Good Duke; A Good one produced a Bold one: True confidence proceeds onely out of true Goodnesse: for, The wicked shall flye, when no man pursueth, but the righteous are bold as a Lion. This constancy, and this confidence, and upon this ground, Holy courage in a holy feare of him, Almighty God infuse and imprint in you all, for his Son Christ Jesus sake. And to this glorious Son of God, &c.

PSALME II.3. IF THE FOUNDATIONS BE DESTROYED, WHAT CAN THE RIGHTEOUS DOE?

WE ARE still in the season of Mortification; in Lent: But wee search no longer for Texts of Mortification; The Almighty hand of God hath shed and spred a Text of Mortification over all the land. The last Sabboth day, was his Sabboth who entred then into his everlasting Rest; Be this our Sabboth, to enter into a holy and thankfull acknowledgement of that Rest, which God affords us, in continuing to us our Foundations; for, If foundations be destroyed, what can the righteous doe?

I scarce know any word in the Word of God, in which the *Originall*¹⁹ is more ambiguous, and consequently the Translations more various, and therfore, necessarily also, the Expositions more divers, then in these words. There is one thing, in which all agree, that is, the Argument, and purpose, and scope of the Psalme; And then, in what sense, the words of the Text may conduce to the scope of the Psalme, wee rest in this Translation, which our Church hath accepted and authorized, and which agrees with the first Translation knowen to us, by way of Exposition, that is the Chalde Paraphrase, If Foundations bee destroyed, what can the righteous doe?

The Church of God ever delighted herselfe in a holy officiousnesse²⁰ in the Commemoration of Martyrs: Almost all their solemne, and extraordinarie Meetings, and Congregations, in the Primitive Church, were for that, for the honourable Commemoration of Martyrs: And for that, they came soone to institute and appoynt certaine Liturgies, certaine Offices (as they called them) certaine Services in the Church, which should have reference to that, to the Commemoration of Martyrs; as wee have in our Booke of Common Prayer, certaine Services for Marriage, for Buriall, and for such other holy Celebrations; And in the Office and Service of a Martyr, the Church did use this Psalme; This Psalme, which is in generall, a Protestation of David,

³⁰ That though hee were so vehemently pursued by Saul, as that all that wished him well, sayd to his Soule, Flie as a Bird to the Mountaine, as it is in the first verse; Though hee saw, That the wicked had bent their Bowes, and made ready their Arrowes, upon the string, that they might privily shoot at the upright in heart, as it is in the second verse: Though he take it almost as granted, that Foundations are destroyed, (And then, what can the righteous doe?) as it is in the third verse which is our Text, yet in this distresse he findes what to doe. For as hee begunne in the first verse, In thee Lord, put I my trust: So after he had passed the enumeration of his dangers, in the second and third

⁴⁰ verses, in the fourth he pursues it as he begun, The Lord is in his holy Temple, the Lords Throane is in Heaven. And in the fifth hee fixes it thus, The Lord tryeth the Righteous, (he may suffer much to be done for their triall) but the wicked, and him that loveth violence, his soule hateth. This then is the Syllogisme, this is the Argumentation of the righteous Man; In Collaterall things, in Circumstantiall things, in things that are not fundamentall, a righteous Man, a constant Man should not bee shaken at all, not at all Scandalized; Thats true; But then, (in a second place) sometimes it comes to that, That Foundations are destroyd, and what can the Righteous doe then? Why even then,

⁵⁰ this is a question, not of desperation, that nothing can bee done, but of Consultation with God, what should be done. I know, sayes David, I should not be, and thou knowest, O God, I have not beene mov'd with ordinary trialls; not though my Friends have dis-avowed mee, and bid mee flye to the Mountaine as a Bird, not though mine enemies prepare, and prepare Arrowes, and shoote, and shoote privily, (bestowe their labour, and their cost, and their witts, to ruine mee) yet these have not moov'd mee, because I had fixed my selfe upon certaine Foundations, Confidences, and Assurances of Deliverance from thee. But if, O Lord, I see these foundations destroyed, if thou put mee into owne indignation, strike with that sword, what can I, how righteous soever I were, doe? So then, for the Explication, and Application of these words, there will need no more, but to spread them by way of Paraphrase upon these three considerations: First, That the righteous is bolde as a Lyon, not easily shaken; But then, Foundations themselves may bee destroyed, and so hee may bee shaken; If hee bee, yet hee knowes what to doe, or where to aske Counsell, for these are not wordes of Desperation, but of Consultation, If Foundations bee destroyed, &c.

Divisio

First then, wee fixe our selves upon this consideration, that the Prophet in proposing this thus, If Foundations bee destroyed, intimates pregnantly, that except there bee danger of destroying Foundations, it is the part of the righteous Man, the godly man to bee quiet. Studie to bee quiet, sayes the Apostle; Studie, that is an action of the Minde; and then, Operam detis, sayes the Vulgate Edition, Labour to bee quiet, and Labour is an action of the bodie: Indeed it is the proper businesse of the Minde and Bodie too, of Thoughts and Actions too, to bee quiet: And yet, alas, how many breake their sleepe in the night, about things that disquiet them in the day too, and trouble themselves in the day, about things that disquiet them all night too? Wee disquiet our selves too much, in beeing over tender, over sensible of imaginarie injuries. Transeant iniuriæ, sayes the Morall man; Let many injuries passe over; for, Plerasque non accipit, qui nescit; Hee that knowes not of an injurie, or takes no knowledge of it, for the most part, hath no injurie. Qui inquirunt, quid in se dictum est, sayes hee, They that are too inquisitive, what other men say of them, they disquiet themselves; for that which others would but whisper, they publish. And therefore that which hee addes there, for Morall, and Civill matters, holds in a good proportion, in things of a more Divine Nature, in such parts of the religious worship and service of God, as concerne not Foundations, Non expedit omnia videre, non omnia audire; we must not too jealously suspect, not too bitterly condemne, not too peremptorily conclude, that what soever is not done, as wee would have it done, or as wee have seene it done in former times, is not well done: for there is a large Latitude, and, by necessitie of Circumstances, much may bee admitted, and yet no Foundations destroyed; and till Foundations bee destroyed, the righteous should bee quiet.

1. Part

1 Thess. 4.11

Seneca

Now this should not prepare, this should not incline any man, to ¹⁰⁰ such an indifferencie, as that it should bee all one to him, what became of all things; all one, whether wee had one, or two, or tenne, or no Religion; or that hee should not bee awake, and active, and diligent, in assisting trueth, and resisting all approaches of Errour. For, God hath sayd of all, into whose hand hee hath committed power, You are Gods. Now, they are not Gods, but Idoles, if, as the Prophet sayes, Psal. 115.6 They have Eyes and see not, Eares and heare not, Hands and strike not; nay, (as hee addes there) if they have Noses and smell not; if they smell not out a mischievous practise, before it come to execution. For, Iob 34.21 Gods eyes are upon the wayes of man, and hee sees all his goings: ¹¹⁰ Those, who are in the number of them, of whome God hath said, they are Gods, must have their eyes upon the wayes of men, and not upon their Ends onely; upon the pathes of mischief, and not upon the bed of mischief onely; upon the Actors of mischief, and not upon the Act onely. Gods eye sees our wayes, sayes David too; that is, hee can see Iere. 32.19 them, when hee will; but there is more in the other Prophet, Gods eyes are open upon all our wayes; alwayes open, and hee cannot chuse but see: So that, a wilfull shutting of the eye, a winking, a connivencie, Abac. 1.13 is not an assimilation to God. And then, Gods eyes are purer, then to beholde evill, and they cannot looke upon iniquitie: So that in an in-¹²⁰ differencie, whether Times, or Persons bee good or badd, there is not this assimilation to God. Again, All things are naked and open to the eyes of God: So that in the disguising, and palliating, and extenuating the faults of men, there is not this assimilation to God. Thus farre they Hebr. 4.13 falsifie Gods Word, who hath sayd, They are Gods; for they are Idoles, and not Gods, if they have eyes, and see not. So is it also in the con-Psal. 94.9 sideration of the Eare too: for, as David sayes, Shall not hee that planted the Eare, heare? So wee may say, Shall hee upon whom God hath planted an Eare, bee deafe? Gods eares are so open, so tender, so Psal. 39.12 sensible of any motion, as that David formes one Prayer thus, Auribus ¹³⁰ percipe lachrimas meas, O Lord, heare my teares; hee puts the office of the Eye too, upon the Eare. And then, if the Magistrate stop his Eares with Wooll, (with staple bribes, profitable bribes) and with Cyvet in his wooll, (perfumes of pleasure and preferment in his bribes) hee falsifies Gods Word, who hath said, they are Gods, for they are Idoles, and not Gods, if they have eares, and heare not. And so it is also of the hand too; In all that Iob suffered, he sayes no more, but that the Hand of God had touched him; but touched him, in respect of that hee could have done: for, when Iob sayes to men, Why persecute you mee, as God? hee meanes, as God could doe, so vehemently, so ruinously, so destructively, so irreparably. There is no phrase oftner in the Scriptures, then that God delivered his people, in the hand of Moses, and the hand of David, and the hand of the Prophets: all their Ministeriall office is called the Hand: and therfore, as David prayes to God, That hee would pull his hand out of his bosome, and strike: so must wee ever exhort the Magistrate, That hee would plucke his hand out of his pocket, and forget what is there, and execute the Lawes committed to him. For, as wee, at last, shall commend our Spirits, into the hands of God, God hath commended our Spirits, not onely our civill peace, but our Religion too, into the hand of the Magistrate. And therefore, when the Apostle sayes, Studie to bee quiet, it is not quiet in the blindnesse of the Eye, nor quiet in the Deafenesse of the Eare, nor quiet in the Lamenesse of the Hand; the just discharge of the dueties of our severall places, is no disquieting to any man. But when private men will spend all their thoughts upon their Superiours actions, this must necessarily disquiet them; for they are off of their owne Center, and they are extra Sphæram Activitatis, out of their owne Distance, and Compass, and they cannot possibly discern the Ende, to which their Superiours goe. And to such a jealous man, when his jealousie is not a tendernesse towards his owne actions, which is a holy and a wholesome jealousie, but a suspicion of his Superiours actions, to this Man, every Wheele is a Drumme, and every Drumme a Thunder, and every Thunder-clapp a dissolution of the whole frame of the World: If there fall a broken tyle from the house, hee thinkes Foundations are destroyed; if a crazie woman, or a disobedient childe, or a needie servant fall from our Religion, from our Church, hee thinkes the whole Church must necessarily fall, when all this while there are no Foundations destroyed; and till foundations bee destroyed, the righteous should be quiet.

Hence have wee just occasion, first to condole amongst our selves, who, for matters of Foundations professe one and the same Religion, and then to complaine of our Adversaries, who are of another. First, that amongst our selves, for matters not Doctrinall, or if Doctrinall, yet not Fundamentall, onely because wee are sub-divided in divers Names, there should bee such Exasperations, such Exacerbations, such Vociferations, such Ejulations, such Defamations of one another, as if all Foundations were destroyed. Who would not tremble, to heare those Infernall words, spoken by men, to men, of one and the same Religion fundamentally, as Indiabolificata, Perdiabolificata, and Superdiabolificata, that the Devoll, and all the Devills in Hell, and worse¹⁸⁰ then the Devoll is in their Doctrine, and in their Divinitie, when, God in heaven knowes, if their owne uncharitablenesse did not exclude him, there were roome enough for the Holy Ghost, on both, and on either side, in those Fundamentall things, which are unanimately professed by both: And yet every Mart, wee see more Bookes written by these men against one another, then by them both, for Christ.

But yet though this Torrent of uncharitablenesse amongst them, bee too violent, yet it is within some bankes; though it bee a Sea, and too tempestuous, it is limited within some bounds; The poynts are certaine, knowen, limited, and doe not grow upon us every yeare, and¹⁹⁰ day. But the uncharitablenesse of the Church of Rome towards us all, is not a Torrent, nor it is not a Sea, but a generall Flood, an universall Deluge, that swallowes all the world, but that Church, and Church-yard, that Towne, and Suburbes, themselves, and those that depend upon them; and will not allowe possibilitie of Salvation to the whole Arke, the whole Christian Church, but to one Cabin in that Arke, the Church of Rome; and then denie us this Salvation, not for any Positive Errour, that ever they charged us to affirme; not because wee affirme any thing, that they denie, but because wee denie some things, which they in their afternoone are come to affirme.

²¹⁰ the Bishops, so farre, as that the Emperour came to declare both sides to bee Heretiques; All this was for an Errour in a Word, in the word Deipara, whether the Blessed Virgine Marie were to bee called the Mother of God, or no. There have beene Verball Heresies, and Heresies that were but Syllabicall; little Præpositions made Heresies; not onely State-præpositions, Precedencies, and Prerogatives of Church above Church, occasioned great Schismes, but Literall Præpositions, Præpositions in Grammar, occasioned great Heresies. That great Heresie of the Acephali, against which Damascene bendes himselfe in his Booke, De Natura Composita, was grounded in the Præposition, ²²⁰ In; They would confesse Ex, but not In, That Christ was made of two Natures, but that hee did not consist in two Natures. And wee all know, what differences have beene raysed in the Church, in that one poynt of the Sacrament, by these three Prepositions, Trans, Con, and Sub. There have beene great Heresies, but Verball, but Syllabicall; and as great, but Litterall; The greatest Heresie that ever was, that of the Arrians, was but in one Letter. So then, in Heresie, there is nothing to bee called little, nothing to bee suffered. It was excellently sayde of Heretiques, (though by one, who, though not then declared, was then an Heretique in his heart,) Condolere Hereticis crimen est; It is a
²⁴⁰ position. And then, when once that infamous Name of Heretique was fastened upon a man, nothing was too heauey for, any thing was beleueed of that man. And from thence it is, without question, that wee finde so many so absurd, so senselesse Opinions imputed to those men, who were then called Heretiques, as could not, in trueth, with any possibilitie, fall into the imagination or fancie of any man, much lesse bee Doctrinally, or Dogmatically delivered. And then, upon this, there issued Lawes, from particular States, against particular Heresies, that troubled those States then, as namely, against the Arrians, or Macedonians, and such; and in a short time, these Lawes came to ²⁵⁰ bee extended, to all such Opinions, as the passion of succeeding times, called Heresie. And at last, the Romane Church having constituted that Monopolie, That Shee onely should declare what should bee Heresie, and having declared that to bee Heresie, which opposed, or retarded the dignitie of that Church, now they call in Brachium Spirituale, All those Sentences of Fathers, or Councells that mention Heresie, and they call in Brachium Sæculare, all those Lawes which punish Heresie, and whereas these Fathers, and Councells, and States, intended by Heresie, Opinions that destroyed Foundations, they bend all these against every poynt, which may endamage, not the Church ²⁶⁰ of God, but the Church of Rome; nor the Church of Rome, but the Court of Rome; nor the Court of Rome, but the Kitchin of Rome; not for the Heart, but for the Bellie; not the Religion, but the Policie; not the Altar, but the Exchequer of Rome.

But the Righteous lookes to Foundations, before hee will be scandalized himselfe, or condemne another. When they call Saint Peter their first Pope, and being remembred, how hee denied his Master, say then, that was but an Acte of Infirmities, not of Infidelities, and there were no Foundations destroyed in that; wee presse not that evidence against Saint Peter, wee forbear, and wee are quiet. When things before the Church had decreed any thing to the contrary, and till that, it was lawfull for any man to say, or thinke what hee would, wee do not load the memory of those blessed Fathers with any heavier pressings, but wee are quiet. Yet wee cannot chuse but tell them, that tell us this, that they have taken a hard way, to make that saying true, that all things are growen deare in our times; for they have ²⁹⁰ made Salvation deare; Threescore yeares agoe, a man might have beene sav'd at halfe the price hee can now: Threescore yeares agoe, he might have beene saved for beleiving the Apostles Creed; now it will cost him the Trent Creed too. Evermore they will presse for all, and yeeld nothing; and there is indeed their Specification, there's their Character, that's their Catholique, their Vniversall; To have all; As, in Athanasius his time, when the Emperour pressed him to affoord the Arrians one Church in Alexandria, where hee was Bishop, and hee asked but one Church in Antioch, where the Arrians prevayled, not doubting but hee should draw more to the true Church in Antioch, then they should corrupt in Alexandria, yet this would not bee ³⁰⁰ granted; It would not be granted at Rome, if we should aske a Church for a Church. In a word, wee charge them with uncharitableness, (and Charitie is without all Controversie, a Foundation of Religion) that they will so peremptorily exclude us from Heaven, for matters that doe not appertaine to Foundations. For, if they will call all Foundations, that that Church hath, or doth, or shall decree, wee must learne our Catechisme upon our Death-bedd, and inquire for the Articles of our Faith, when wee are going out of the world, for they may have decreed something that Morning. No one Author of ³¹⁰ theirs denied Pope Ioane, till they discerned the Consequence, That by confessing a Woman Pope, they should disparage that Succession of Bishops, which they pretend, And this Succession must bee Foundation. No Author of our side denied Saint Peters beeing at Rome, till wee discerned the Consequence, That upon his personall being there, they grounded a Primacie in that Sea, And this Primacie must bee Foundation. Much might bee admitted in cases of Indifferencie, even in the Nature of the things, Much in cases of Necessitie, for the importance of Circumstances, much in cases of Conveniency, for the suppling of boysterous, and for the becalming of tempestuous ³²⁰ humours; but when every thing must be called Foundation, we shall never knowe where to stop, where to consist. If wee should beleeeve their Sacrificium incruentum, their unbloody Sacrifice in the Masse, if wee did not beleeeve their Sacrificium Cruentum too, that there was a power in that Church, to sacrifice the Blood of Kings, wee should bee sayde to bee defective in a fundamentall Article. If wee should admitt their Metaphysiques, their transcendent Transubstantiation, and admitt their Chimiques, their Purgatorie Fires, and their Mythologie, and Poetrie, their apparitions of Soules and Spirits, they would binde us to their Mathematiques too, and they would not let us bee ³³⁰ saved, except wee would reforme our Almanackes to their tenne dayes, and reforme our Clockes to their fourre and twentie: for who can tell when there is an ende of Articles of Faith, in an Arbitrarie, and in an Occasionall Religion? When then this Prophet sayes, If Foundations bee destroyed, what can the righteous doe, hee meanes, that till that, the righteous should bee quiet: Except it were in fundamentall Articles of Faith, our selves should not bee so bitter towards one another, our Adversarie should not bee so uncharitable against us all. And farther wee need not extend this first Consideration.

2. Part

The second is, to Survey some such Foundations, as fall within the ³⁴⁰ frayltie, and suspition, and possibilitie of this Text, that they may bee destroyed: for when the Prophet sayes, If they bee, they may bee. Now Fundamentum proprie de ædificijs dicitur, sayes the Lawe: when wee speake of Foundations, wee intend a house: and heere, wee extend this House to fourre Considerations; for in fourre Houses have every one of us a dwelling. For, first, Ecclesia Domus, the Church is a House, it is Gods house; and in that House, wee are of the householde of the faithfull, if (as it is testified of Moses) wee bee faithfull in all his House, as Servants. You see there is a faithfulness required in every man, in all the house of God, not in any one roome; a dis-³⁵⁰ position required to doe good to the whole Church of God every where, and not onely at home. Secondly, Respublica Domus, The Commonwealth, the State, the Kingdome is a House; and this is that which is called so often, Domus Israel, The house of Israel, the State, the Government of the Iewes: And in this House, God dwells, as well as in the other; In the State, as well as in the Church: For, these words, The Lord hath chosen Sion, hee hath desired it for a habitation, are spoken of the whole Bodie, Church, and State. Thirdly,

there is Domus Habitationis, Domus quæ Domicilium, a House to dwell in, and to dwell with, a Family: and in this House God dwells too; for, as David sayes of the Building, wee may say of the Dwelling, Except the Lord build the House, they labour in vaine: So except the Lord dwell in the House, it is a desolate Habitation. And then lastly, there is Domus quæ Dominus, a house which is the Master of the House; for as every Man is a little World, so every man is his owne House, and dwels in himselfe: And in this House God dwells too; for the Apostle seemes so much to delight himselfe in that Metaphore, as that hee repeats it almost in all his Epistles, Habitat in nobis, That the Holy Ghost dwells in us. Now, of all these foure Houses, that house which hath no walles, but is spread over the face of the whole Earth, the Church, And that House, which with us, hath no other walls, but the Sea, the State, the Kingdome, And that house which is walled with drie Earth, our dwelling house, our family, and this house which is wall'd with wet Earth, this loame of flesh, our selfe, Of all these foure houses, those three, of which, and in which we are, and this fourth, which wee our selfe are, God is the Foundation, and so foundations cannot be destroyed; But, as, though the common foundation of all buildings bee the Earth, yet wee make particular foundations for particular buildings, of Stone, or Brick, or Piles, as the Soyle requires; so shall wee also heere consider such particular Foundations of these foure houses, as may fall within the frailtie, and suspition, within the possibilitie, and danger of the Text, of being destroyed.

Of the first House then, which is the Church, the foundation is Christ, Other foundation can no man lay, then that which is layd, which is Iesus Christ. Non propterea dicimus, sayes Saint Augustine, Wee doe not say that our Church is Catholique therefore, because Optatus sayes so, and because Ambrose sayes so, (and yet Optatus, and Ambrose, the Fathers, are good Witnesses) neither do we say it, (sayes he) Quia Collegarum nostrorum Conciliis prædicta est, Because some Synodes and Councells of men of our owne Religion have said it is Catholique (And yet a Harmony of Confessions is good Evidence,) Nec quia tanta fiunt in ea mirabilia, sayes hee, wee call it not Catholique, because so many Myacles are wrought in it, (for wee oppose Gods many miraculous Deliverances of this State and Church, to all their imaginary miracles of Rome) Non ideo manifestatur Catholica, sayes still that Father, All this does not make our Church Catholique, nay, non manifestatur, all this does not declare it to bee Catholique, all these are no infallible marks thereof, but onely this one, sayes hee, Quia ipse Dominus Iesus, &c. because the Lord

⁴⁰⁰ Iesus himselfe is the Foundation of this Church. But may not this be subject to reasoning, to various Disputation, Whether wee have that foundation, or no? It may; but that will goe farre in the clearing thereof, which the same Father sayes in another Booke, Nihil in Ecclesia catholica salubrius fit, quam ut Rationem præcedat Autoritas: Nothing is safer for the finding of the Catholique Church, then to preferre Authoritie before my Reason, to submit and capivate my Reason to Authoritie. This the Romane Church pretends to embrace; but Apishly; like an Ape, it kills with embracing, for it evacuates the right Authoritie; The Authority that they obtrude, is the Decretals ⁴¹⁰ of their owne Bishops, The authoritie, which Saint Augustine literally and expressly declares himselfe to meane, is the authoritie of the Scriptures.

Christ then, that is, the Doctrine of Christ, is the foundation of this first House, the Church. Hæc sunt fundamenta quæ jecit Salomon, sayes the vulgate Edition, These are the foundations that Salomon layde; and then our Translation hath it, These are the things in which Salomon was instructed; One calls it Foundations, the other Instructions; All's one; The Instructions of Christ, the Doctrine of Christ, the Word, the Scriptures of Christ, are the Foundation of this House.

Ephes. 2.20 ⁴²⁰ For, when the Apostle sayes, Christ Iesus himselfe is the chiefe corner Stone, yet hee addes there, Yee are built upon the Prophets and Apostles: for the Prophets and Apostles, had their part in the foundation; in the laying, though not in the beeing of the Foundation. The wall of the citie, sayes Saint Iohn, had twelve Foundations, and in them, the Names of the twelve Apostles: But still, in that place, they are Apostles of the Lambe, still they have relation to Christ: For, they, who by inspiration of the Holy Ghost, writt of Christ, and so made up the Bodie of the Scriptures, have their parts too, in this Foundation. Besides these, it is sayd, in the building of the Materiall Temple, Apoc. 21.14 ⁴³⁰ The King commaunded, and they brought great Stones, and costly Stones, and hewed Stones, to lay the foundations of the House: The care of the King, the labours of men conduce to the foundation. And besides this, in that place of the Revelation, The foundation of the Wall, is sayde to bee garnished with all manner of precious stones; Garnished, but not made of that kinde of precious stones. So then Salomons hewed Stones, and costly stones, may, in a faire accommodation, bee understood to bee the Determinations, and Resolutions, Canons, and Decrees of generall Councils: And Saint Iohns garnishment of precious stones, may, in a faire accommodation, bee understood to bee the Learned and Laborious, the zealous and the pious ⁴⁴⁰ Commentaries and Expositions of the Fathers; For Councils and Fathers assist the Foundation; But the foundation it selfe is Christ himselfe in his Word; his Scriptures. And then, certainly they love the House best, that love the foundation best: not they, that impute to the Scriptures such an Obscuritie, as should make them in-intelligible to us, or such a defect as should make them insufficient in themselves. To denie us the use of Scriptures in our vulgar Translations, and yet to denie us the use of them, in the Originall Tongues too, To tell us we must not trie Controversies by our English, or our ⁴⁵⁰ Latine Bibles, nor by the Hebrew Bibles neither, To put such a Majestie upon the Scriptures, as that a Lay man may not touch them, and yet to put such a diminution upon them, as that the writings of men shall bee equall to them; this is a wrinching, a shrinking, a sinking, an undermining, a destroying of Foundations, of the foundation of this first House, which is the Church, the Scriptures.

*Respub.
Domus*

.Enter wee now into a Survay of the second House, The State, the Kingdome, the Common-wealth; and of this House, the foundation is the Law. And therefore Saint Hierome referres this Text, in a litterall and primary signification to that, to the Law: for so, in his ⁴⁶⁰ Commentaries upon the Psalmes, he translates this Text, Si dissipatae Leges, Hee makes the evacuating of the Law, this destroying of foundations. Lex communis Reipub. sponsio, sayes the Law it selfe: The Law is the mutuall, the reciprocall Suretie betweene the State and the Subject. The Lawe is my Suretie to the State, that I shall pay my Obedience, And the Lawe is the States Suretie to mee, that I shall enjoy my Protection. And therefore, therein did the Iewes justly exalt themselves above all other Nations, That God was come so much nearer to them then to other Nations, by how much they had

[Deut. 4:7

Lawes and Ordinances more righteous then other Nations had. Now, 470 as it is sayd of the Foundations of the other House, the Temple, The King commaunded in the laying thereof, the King had his hand in the Church, so is it also in this House, the State, the Common-wealth, the King hath his hand in, and upon the foundation here also, which is the Lawe: so farre, as that every forbearing of a Lawe, is not an Evacuating of the Law; every Pardon, whether a Post-pardon, by way of mercy, after a Lawe is broken, or a Præ-pardon, by way of Dispensation, in wisdom before a Lawe bee broken, is not a Destroying of Ivo this foundation. For, when such things as these are done, Non astu Mentientis, sed affectu compatiētis, not upon colourable disguises, 480 nor private respects, but truely for the Generall good, all these Pardons, and Dispensations conduce and concur to the Office, and contract the Nature of the Foundation it selfe, which is, that the whole Bodie may bee the better supported. But where there is an inducing of a super-Sovereigne, and a super-Supremacie, and a Sea above our *four*e Seas, and a Horne above our Head, and a forraine Power above our Native and naturall Power, where there are dogmaticall, Positive Assertions, that men borne of us, and living with us, and by us, are yet none of us, no Subjects, owe no Allegiance, this is a wrinching, a shrinking, a sinking, an undermining, a destroying of Foundations, 490 the Foundation of this second House, which is the State, the Law.

Domus Domicilium

The third House that falles into our present Survey, is Domus quæ Domicilium, Domus habitationis, our Dwelling house, or Family, and of this house, the foundation is Peace: for Peace compacts all the peeces of a family together; Husband and Wife, in Love and in Obedience, Father and Sonne, in Care and in Obedience, Master and Servant, in Discipline and in Obedience: Still Obedience is one Ingredient in all Peace; there is no Peace where there is no Obedience. Now every smoke does not argue the house to bee on fire; Every domestique offence taken or given, does not destroy this Foundation, this Peace, 500 within doores. There may bee a Thunder from above, and there may bee an Earth-quake from below, and yet the foundation of the House safe: From above there may bee a defect in the Superiour, in the Husband, the Father, the Master; and from below, in the Wife, the Sonne, the Servant; There may bee a Iealousie in the Husband, a Morositie in the Father, an Imperiousnesse in the Master; And there may bee an inobsequiousnesse and an indiligence in the Wife, there may bee levitie and inconsideration in the Sonne, and there may bee unreadinesse, unseasonablenesse in a Servant, and yet Foundations stand, and Peace maintayned, though not by an exquisite performing of all duties, yet by a mutuall support of one anothers infirmities. This destroyes no Foundation; But if there bee a windowe opened in the house, to let in a Iesuiticall firebrand, that shall whisper, though not proclaime, deliver with a non Dominus sed Ego, that though it bee not a declared Tenet of the Church, yet hee thinkes, that in case of Heresie, Civill and Naturall, and Matrimoniall duties cease, no Civill, no Naturall, no Matrimoniall Tribute due to an Heretique; Or if there bee such a fire kindled within doores, that the Husbands jealousy come to a Substraction of necessary meanes at home, or to Defamation abroad, or the Wives levitie induce just Imputation at home, or scandal abroad, If the Fathers wastfulnesse amount to a Disinheriting, because hee leaves nothing to bee inherited, Or the Sonnes incorrigiblenesse occasion a just disinheriting, though there bee enough, If the Master make Slaves of Servants, and macerate them, or the Servants make prize of the Master, and prey upon him, in these cases, and such as these, there is a wrinching, a shrinking, a sinking, an undermining, a destroying of Foundations, the Foundation of this third House, which is the family, Peace.

There remains yet another House, a fourth House, a poore and wretched Cottage; worse then our Statute Cottages; for to them the Statute layes out certaine Acres; but for these Cottages, wee measure not by Acres, but by Feete; and five or sixe foote serves any Cottager: so much as makes a Grave, makes up the best of our Glebe, that are of the Inferiour, and the best of their Temporalties, that are of the Superiour Cleargie, and the best of their Demeanes that are in the greatest Soveraigntie in this world: for this house is but our selfe, and the foundation of this House is Conscience. For, this proceeding with a good Conscience in every particular action, is that, which the Apostle calles, The laying up in store for our selves, a good foundation, against the time to come: The House comes not till the time to come, but the Foundation must bee layde heere. Abraham looked for a Citie; that was a future expectation; but, sayes that Text, it was a Citie that hath a foundation; the foundation was layd alreadie, even in this life, in

Dominus

I Tim. 6.19

a good Conscience: For no interest, no mansion shall that Man have in the upper-rooms of that Ierusalem, that hath not layd the foundation in a good Conscience heere. But what is Conscience? Conscience hath but these two Elements, Knowledge, and Practise; for Conscientia presumit Scientiam; Hee that does any thing with a good Conscience, knowes that hee should doe it, and why hee does it: Hee that does good ignorantly, stupidly, inconsiderately, implicitly, does ⁵⁵⁰ good, but hee does that good ill. Conscience is, Syllogismus practicus; upon certaine premisses, well debated, I conclude, that I should doe it, and then I doe it. Now for the destroying of this foundation, there are sinnes, which by Gods ordinary grace exhibited in his Church, proove but Alarums, but Sentinells to the Conscience: The very sinne, or something that does naturally accompany that sinne, Povertie, or Sickenesse, or Infamie, calls upon a man, and awakens him to a remorse of the sinne. Which made Saint Augustine say, That a man got by some sinnes; some sinnes helpe him in the way of repentance for sinne; and these sinnes doe not destroy the foundation. But there ⁵⁶⁰ are sinnes, which in their nature preclude repentance, and batter the Conscience, devastate, depopulate, exterminate, annihilate the Conscience, and leave no sense at all, or but a sense of Desperation, And then, the case being reduc'd to that, That wickednes condemned by her owne wickednes, becomes very timorous, (so as the Conscience growes afayd, that the promises of the Gospell belong not to her) And (as it is added there) beeing pressed with Conscience, alwayes forecasteth grievous things, that whatsoever God layes upon him heere, all that is but his earnest of future worse torments, when it comes to such a Feare, as (as it is added in the next verse) Betrayes the

Sap. 17.11

3. Part

Wee are now upon that which we proposed for our last Consideration; Till foundations are shaken, the righteous stirres not; In some cases some foundations may be shaken; if they be, what can the righteous doe? The holy Ghost never asks the question, what the unrighteous, the wicked can doe: They doe well enough, best of all,

⁵⁸⁰ in such cases: Demolitions and Ruines are their raisings; Troubles are their peace, Tempests are their calmes, Fires and combustions are their refreshings, Massacres are their harvest, and Destruction is their Vintage; All their Rivers runne in Eddies, and all their Centers are in wheelles, and in perpetuall motions; the wicked do well enough, best of all then; but what shall the righteous do? The first entrance of the Psalme in the first verse, seemes to give an answer; The righteous may flie to the Mountaine as a Bird; he may retire, withdraw himselfe. But then the generall scope of the Psalme, gives a Reply to the Answer; for all Expositors take the whole Psalme to bee an answer from David, ⁵⁹⁰ and given with some indignation against them, who perswaded him to flie, or retire himselfe. Not that David would constitute a Rule in his Example, that it was unlawfull to flie in a time of danger or persecution, (for it would not bee hard to observe at least nine or ten severall flights of David) but that in some cases such circumstances of Time, and Place, and Person, may accompany and invest the action, as that it may bee inconvenient for that Man, at that Time, to retire himselfe. As oft, as the retyring amounts to the forsaking of a Calling, it will become a very disputable thing, how farre a retyring may bee lawfull. Saint Peters vehement zeale in dissuading Christ from going ⁶⁰⁰ up to Ierusalem, in a time of danger, was so farre from retarding Christ in that purpose, as that it drew a more bitter increpation from Christ upon Peter, then at any other time.

Mat. 16.21

So then, in the Text, we have a Rule implied, Something is left to the righteous to doe, though some Foundations bee destroyed; for the words are words of Consultation, and consultation with God; when Man can afford no Counsayle, God can, and will direct those that are his, the righteous, what to doe. The words give us the Rule, and Christ gives us the Example in himselfe. First, hee continues his Innocencie, and avowes that; the destroying of Foundations, does not destroy his ⁶¹⁰ Foundation, Innocence: still hee is able to confound his adversaries, with that, Which of you can convince mee of sinne? And then, hee *prayer*s for the remooving of the persecution, Transeat Calix, let this Cup passe. When that might not bee, hee *prayer*s even for them, who inflicted this persecution, Pater ignosce, Father forgive them; And when all is done, hee suffers all that can bee done unto him: And hee calls his whole Passion, Horam suam, it spent nights and dayes; his

 [Mat. 26.39]
 [Luke
 23.34]

whole life was a continuall Passion; yet how long soever, he calls it but an Houre, and how much soever it were their act, the act of their malignitie that did it, yet hee calls it his, because it was the act of his ⁶²⁰ owne Predestination as God, upon himselfe as Man; And hee calles it by a more acceptable Name then that, hee calles his Passion Calicem suum, his Cup, because hee brought not onely a patience to it, but a delight and a joy in it; for, for the joy that was set before him, hee endured the Crosse. All this then the righteous can doe, though Foundations bee destroyed; Hee can withdrawe himselfe, if the duties of his place make not his residence necessarie; If it doe, hee can pray; and then hee can suffer; and then hee can rejoyce in his sufferings; and hee can make that protestation, Our God is able to deliver us, and hee will deliver us; but if not, wee will serve no other Gods. For, the righteous ⁶³⁰ hath evermore this refuge, this assurance, that though some Foundations bee destroyed, all cannot bee: for first, The foundation of God stands sure, and hee knowes who are his; Hee is safe in God; and then he is safe in his owne Conscience, for, The Righteous is an everlasting foundation; not onely that he hath one, but is one; and not a temporary, but an everlasting Foundation: So that foundations can never bee so destroyed, but that hee is safe in God, and safe in himselfe.

For such things then, as concerne the foundation of the first House, the Church, Bee not apt to call Super-Edifications, Foundations; Col-laterall Divinitie, Fundamentall Divinitie; Problematicall, Disputable, ⁶⁴⁰ Controvertible poynts, poynts Essentiall, and Articles of Faith. Call not Super-Edifications, Foundations, nor call not the furniture of the House, Foundations; Call not Ceremoniall, and Rituall things, Essentiall parts of Religion, and of the worship of God, otherwise then as they imply Disobedience; for Obedience to lawfull Authoritie, is alwayes an Essentiall part of Religion. Doe not Anti-date Miserie; doe not Prophesie Ruine; doe not Concurre with Mischiefe, nor Contribute to Mischiefe so farre, as to over-feare it before, nor to mis-interpret their wayes, whose Ends you cannot knowe; And doe not call the cracking of a pane of glasse, a Destroying of foundations. But ⁶⁵⁰ every man doing the particular duties of his distinct Calling, for the preservation of Foundations, Praying, and Preaching, and Doing, and Counsailing, and Contributing too, Foundations beeing never destroyed, the Righteous shall doe still, as they have done, enjoy God manifested in Christ, and Christ applyed in the Scriptures, which is the foundation of the first House, the Church.

For things concerning the Foundation of the second House, the Commonwealth, which is the Lawe, Dispute not Lawes, but obey them when they are made; In those Councells, where Lawes are made, or reformed, dispute; but there also, without particular interest, without private affection, without personall relations. Call not every entrance of such a Iudge, as thou thinkest insufficient, a corrupt entrance; nor every Iudgement, which hee enters, and thou understandest not, or likest not, a corrupt Judgement. As in Naturall things, it is a weaknesse to thinke, that every thing that I knowe not how it is done, is done by Witch-craft, So is it also in Civill things, if I know not why it is done, to thinke it is done for Money. Let the Law bee sacred to thee, and the Dispensers of the Law, reverend; Keepe the Lawe, and the Lawe shall keepe thee; And so Foundations being never destroyed, the Righteous shall doe still, as they have done, enjoy their Possessions, and Honours, and themselves, by the overshadowing of the Lawe, which is the Foundation of the second House, the State.

For those things which concerne the Foundations of the third House, the Family, Call not light faults by heavie Names; Call not all sociableness, and Conversation, Disloyaltie in thy Wife; Nor all levitie, or pleasurableness, Incorrigibleness in thy Sonne; nor all negligence, or forgetfulness, Perfidiousnesse in thy Servant; Nor let every light disorder within doores, shut thee out of doores, or make thee a stranger in thine owne House. In a smoakie roome, it may bee enough to open a Windowe, without leaving the place; In Domestique unkindnesses, and discontents, it may bee wholesomer to give them a Concoction at home in a discrete patience, or to give them a vent at home, in a moderate rebuke, then to thinke to ease them, or put them off, with false diversions abroad. As States subsist in part, by keeping their weaknesses from being known, so is it the quiet of Families, to have their Chauncerie, and their Parliament within doores, and to compose and determine all emergent differences there: for so also, Foundations beeing kept undestroyed, the righteous shall doe, as they should doe, enjoy a Religious Unitie, and a Civill Unitie, the same Soule towards God, the same heart towards one another, in a holy, and in a happy Peace, and Peace is the foundation of this third House, The Family.

Lastly, for those things which concerne the Foundations of the fourth House, Our selves, Mis-interpret not Gods former Corrections upon thee, how long, how sharpe soever: Call not his Phisicke, poyson, nor his Fish, Scorpions, nor his Bread, Stone: Accuse not God, for that hee hath done, nor suspect not God, for that hee may doe, as though God had made thee, onely because hee lacked a man, to damne. In all scruples of Conscience, say with Saint Peter, Domine quo vadam, Lord, whither shall I goe, thou hast the Word of eternall life, And God will not leave thee in the darke: In all oppression from potent Adversaries, say with David, Tibi soli peccavi: Against thee, O Lord, onely have I sinned, And God will not make the malice of another man his Executioner upon thee. Crie to him; and if hee have not heard thee, crie lowder, and crie oftner; The first way that God admitted thee to him was by Water, the water of Baptisme; Goe still the same way to him, by Water, by repentant Teares: And remember still, that when Ezechias wept, Vidit lachrymam, God saw his Teare, His Teare in the Singular: God sawe his first teare, every severall teare: If thou thinke God have not done so by thee, Continue thy teares, till thou finde hee doe. The first way that Christ came to thee, was in Blood; when hee submitted himselfe to the Lawe, in Circumcision; And the last thing that hee bequeathed to thee, was his Blood, in the Institution of the Blessed Sacrament; Refuse not to goe to him, the same way too, if his glorie require that Sacrifice. If thou pray, and hast an apprehension that thou hearest God say, hee will not heare thy prayers, doe not beleeeve that it is hee that speakes; If thou canst not chuse but beleeeve that it is hee, let mee say, in a pious sense, doe not beleeeve him: God would not bee beleeeved, in denouncing of Judgements, so absolutely, so peremptorily, as to bee thought to speake unconditionally, illimitedly: God tooke it well at Davids hands, that when the Prophet had tolde him, The childe shall surely die, yet hee beleeeved not the Prophet so peremptorily, but that hee proceeded in Prayer to God, for the life of the childe. Say with David, Thou hast beene a strong Tower to mee; I will abide in thy Tabernacle, Et non Emigrabo, I will never goe out, I know thou hast a Church, I know I am in it, and I will never depart from it; and so Foundations beeing never destroyed, the righteous shall doe, as the righteous have alwayes done, enjoy the Evidence, and the Verdict, and the Iudgement, and the Possession of a good Con-

Preached at S. Pauls, in the Evening, upon Easter-day. 1625.

JOHN 5.28 and 29. MARVELL NOT AT THIS; FOR THE HOURE IS COMMING, IN THE WHICH, ALL THAT ARE IN THE GRAVES, SHALL HEARE HIS VOICE; AND SHALL COME FORTH, THEY THAT HAVE DONE GOOD, UNTO THE RESURRECTION OF LIFE; AND THEY THAT HAVE DONE EVILL, UNTO THE RESURRECTION OF DAMNATION.

John 11.48 AS THE Sun works diversly, according to the diverse disposition of the subject, (for the Sun melts wax, and it hardens clay) so do the good actions of good men: upon good men they work a vertuous emulation, a noble and a holy desire to imitate, upon bad men they work a vicious, and impotent envy, a desire to disgrace, and caluminate. And the more the good is that is done, and the more it works upon good men, the more it disaffects the bad: for so the Pharisees expresse their rancor and malignity against Christ, in this Gospel, If we let him thus alone, all men will beleeeve in him; And that¹⁰ they foresaw would destroy them in their reputation. And therefore they enlarged their malice, beyond Christ himselfe, to him, upon whom Christ had wrought a Miracle, to Lazarus, They consulted to put him to death, because by reason of him, many beleeeved in Iesus. Our Text leads us to another example of this impotency in envious men; Christ, in this Chapter had, by his only word, cured a man that had been eight and thirty yeares infirm; and he had done this work upon the Sabbath. They envyed the work in the substance, but they quarrell the circumstance; And they envy Christ, but they turn upon the man, who was more obnoxious to them; and they tell him, That it ²⁰ was not lawfull for him to carry his bed that day. He discharges himself upon Christ; I dispute not with you concerning the Law; This satisfies me, He that made me whole, bad me take up my bed and walk. Thereupon they put him to finde out Jesus; And when he could not finde Jesus, Jesus found him, and in his behalf offers himself to the Pharisees. Then they direct themselves upon him, and (as the Gospell sayes) They sought to slay him, because he had done this upon the Sabbath: And, as the patient had discharged himself upon Christ, Christ discharges himself upon his Father; doth it displease you that I work upon the Sabbath? be angry with God; be angry with the ³⁰ Father, for the Father works when I work. And then this they take worse then his working of Miracles, or his working upon the Sabbath, That he would say, that God was his Father; And therfore in the averring of that, that so important point, That God was his Father, Christ grows into a holy vehemence, and earnestnesse, and he repeats his usuall oath, Verily, verily, three severall times: First, ver. 19. That whatsoever the Father doth, He, the Son, doth also, And then ver. 24. He that beleeveth on me, and him that sent me, hath life everlasting. And then again, ver. 25. The houre is comming, and now is, when the dead shall heare the voice of the Son of God, and they that heare it shall

⁴⁰ live. At this, that the dead should live, they marvelled; But because he knew that they were men more affected with things concerning the body, then spirituall things, as in another story, when they wondered that he would pretend to forgive sins, because he knew, that they thought it a greater matter to bid that man that had the Palsie, take up his bed and walk, then to forgive him his sins, therefore he took that way which was hardest in their opinion, he did bid him take up his bed and walk; So here, when they wondred at his speaking of a spirituall Resurrection, to heare him say, that at his preaching, the dead (that is, men spiritually dead in their sins) should rise again, to them ⁵⁰ who more respected the body, and did lesse beleieve a reall Resurrection of the body, then a figurative Resurrection of the soul, he proceeds to that which was, in their apprehension, the more difficult, Marvell not at this, sayes he, here in our Text; not at that spirituall Resurrection by preaching, for the houre is comming, in the which, all that are in the graves, &c. and so he establishes the Resurrection of the body.

Divisio

That then which Christ affirms and avows, is, That he is the Son of God; and that is the first thing, that ever was done in Heaven, The eternall generation of the Son: that, by which, he proves this, to these men, is, That by him, there shall be a resurrection of the body; and⁶⁰ that is the last thing, that shall be done in Heaven, for, after that, there is nothing, but an even continuance in equall glory. Before that, saies he, that is, before the resurrection of the body, there shall be another resurrection, a spirituall resurrection of the soule from sin; but that shall be, by ordinary meanes, by Preaching, and Sacraments, and it shall be accomplished every day; but fix not upon that, determin not your thoughts upon that, marvaile not at that, make that no cause of extraordinary wonder, but make it ordinary to you, feele it, and finde the effect thereof in your soules, as often as you heare, as often as you receive, and thereby provide for another resurrection, *For, the houre*⁷⁰ is comming, in which, all that are in their graves, &c.

Where we must necessarily make thus many steps, though but short ones. First, the dignity of the Resurrection, marvaile at nothing so much, as at this, nothing is so marvailous, so wonderfull as this; And secondly, the approach of the Resurrection, The houre is comming; And thirdly, The generality, All that are in the graves; And then the the instrument of the resurrection, The voice of Christ, that shall be heard; And lastly, the diverse end of the resurrection, They shall come forth, they that have done good, &c. God hath a care of the Body of man, that is first; And he defers it not, that is next; And he extends it⁸⁰ to all, that is a third; And a fourth is, That he does that last act, by him, by whom he did the first, The Creation, and all betweene, the Redemption, that is, by his Son, by Christ; And then the last is, that this is an everlasting separation and divorce of the good and the bad, The bad shall never be able to receive good from the Good, nor to doe harme to the Good, after that.

First then, Christ saies, Ne miremini, Marvaile not at this, not at your spirituall resurrection, not that a Sermon should worke upon man, not that a Sacrament should comfort a man, make it not a miracle, nor an extraordinary thing, by hearing to come to repentance,⁹⁰ and so to such a resurrection. For though S. Augustine say, That to convert a man from sin, is as great a miracle, as Creation, yet S. Augustine speaks that of a mans first conversion, in which the man himselfe does nothing, but God all; Then he is made of nothing; but after God hath renewed him, and proposed ordinary meanes in the Church still to worke upon him, he must not looke for miraculous working, but make Gods ordinary meanes, ordinary to him. This is Panis quotidianus, The daily bread which God gives you, as often as you meet here, according to his Ordinances; Ne miremini, stand not to wonder, as though you were not sure, but come to enjoy Gods goodness, in his ordinary way here.

But it is, Ne miremini hoc, Wonder not at this; but yet, there are things, which we may wonder at. Nil admirari, is but the Philosophers wisdom; He thinks it a weaknesse, to wonder at any thing, That any thing should be strange to him: But Christian Philosophy that is rooted in humility, tels us, in the mouth of Clement of Alexandria, Principium veritatis est res admirari, The first step to faith, is to wonder, to stand, and consider with a holy admiration, the waies and proceedings of God with man: for, Admiration, wonder, stands as in the midst, betweene knowledge and faith, and hath an eye towards ¹¹⁰ both. If I know a thing, or beleeve a thing, I do no longer wonder: but when I finde that I have reason to stop upon the consideration of a thing, so, as that I see enough to induce admiration, to make me wonder, I come by that step, and God leads me by that hand, to a knowledge, if it be of a naturall or civill thing, or to a faith, if it be of a supernaturall, and spirituall thing.

And therefore be content to wonder at this, That God would have such a care to dignifie, and to crown, and to associate to his own everlasting presence, the body of man. God himself is a Spirit, and heaven is his place; my soul is a spirit, and so proportioned to that place; ¹²⁰ That God, or Angels, or our Soules, which are all Spirits, should be in heaven, Ne miremini, never wonder at that. But since we wonder, and justly, that some late Philosophers have removed the whole earth from the Center, and carried it up, and placed it in one of the Spheares of heaven, That this clod of earth, this body of ours should be carried up to the highest heaven, placed in the eye of God, set down at the right hand of God, Miramini hoc, wonder at this; That God, all Spirit, served with Spirits, associated to Spirits, should have such an affection, such a love to this body, this earthly body, this deserves this wonder. The Father was pleased to breathe into this body, at first, in the Creation; The Son was pleased to assume this body himself, after, in the Redemption; The Holy Ghost is pleased to consecrate this body, and make it his Temple, by his sanctification; In that Faciamus hominem, Let us, all us, make man, that consultation of the whole Trinity in making man, is exercised even upon this lower part of man, the dignifying of his body. So far, as that amongst the ancient Fathers, very many of them, are very various, and irresolved, which way to pronounce, and very many of them cleare in the negative, in that point, That the soule of man comes not to the presence of God, but remains in some out-places till the Resurrection of the body: That observation, that consideration of the love of God, to the body of man, withdrew them into that error, That the soul it self should lack the glory of heaven, till the body were become capable of that glory too.

Hoc

They therefore oppose God in his purpose of dignifying the body of man, first, who violate, and mangle this body, which is the Organ in which God breathes; And they also which pollute and defile this body, in which Christ Jesus is apparelled; and they likewise who prophane this body, which the Holy Ghost, as the high Priest, inhabites, and consecrates.

Transgressors in the first kinde, that put Gods Organ out of tune, that discompose, and teare the body of man with violence, are those inhumane persecutors, who with racks, and tortures, and prisons, and fires, and exquisite inquisitions, throw downe the bodies of the true Gods true servants, to the Idolatrous worship of their imaginary Gods; that torture men into hell, and carry them through the inquisition into damnation. S. Augustine moves a question, and institutes a disputation, and carries it somewhat problematically, whether torture be to be admitted at all, or no. That presents a faire probability, which he sayes against it: we presume, sayes he, that an innocent man should be able to hold his tongue in torture; That is no part of our purpose in torture, sayes he, that hee that is innocent, should accuse himselfe, by confession, in torture. And, if an innocent man be able to doe so, why should we not thinke, that a guilty man, who shall save his life, by holding his tongue in torture, should be able to doe so? And then, where is the use of torture? Res fragilis, & periculosa quæstio, sayes that Lawyer, who is esteemed the law, alone, Vlpian: It is a slippery triall, and uncertaine, to convince by torture: For, many times, sayes S. Augustine againe, Innocens luit pro incerto scelere certissimas pœnas; He that is yet but questioned, whether he be guilty or no, before that be knowne, is, without all question, miserably tortured.

¹⁷⁰ And whereas, many times, the passion of the Judge, and the covetousnesse of the Judge, and the ambition of the Judge, are calamities heavy enough, upon a man, that is accused, in this case of torture, Ignorantia Iudicis est calamitas plerumque innocentis, sayes that Father, for the most part, even the ignorance of the Judge, is the greatest calamity of him that is accused: If the Judge knew that he were innocent, he should suffer nothing; If he knew he were guilty, he should not suffer torture; but because the Judge is ignorant, and knowes nothing, therefore the Prisoner must bee racked, and tortured, and mangled, sayes that Father.

¹⁹⁰ belie my selfe, nor betray mine innocence, for feare of sinning, and offending the God of Truth; And, as it followes in that story, though no torture could draw any Confession, any accusation from her, she was condemned; and one Executioner had three blowes at her with a Sword, and another foure, and yet she could not be killed.

And therefore, because Storie abounds with Examples of this kinde, how uncertaine a way of tryall, and conviction, torture is, though S. Augustine would not say, that torture was unlawfull, yet he sayes, It behoves every Judge to make that prayer, Erue me Domine à necessitatibus meis, If there bee some cases, in which the Judge must neces-²⁰⁰ sarily proceed to torture; O Lord, deliver me, from having any such case brought before me.

But what use soever there may be for torture, for Confession, in the Inquisition they torture for a deniall, for the deniall of God, and for the renouncing of the truth of his Gospell: As men of great place, think it concernes their honour, to doe above that which they suffer, to make their revenges, not only equall, but greater then their injuries; so the Romane Church thinks it necessary to her greatnesse, to inflict more tortures now, then were inflicted upon her in the Primitive Church; as though it were a just revenge, for the tortures she received ²¹⁰ then, for being Christian, to torture better Christians then her selfe, for being so. In which tortures, the Inquisition hath found one way, to escape the generall clamour of the world against them, which is to torture to that heighth, that few survive, or come abroad after, to publish, how they have been tortured. And these, first, oppose Gods purpose, in the making, and preserving, and dignifying the body of man.

Transgressors herein, in the second kinde, are they, that defile the garment of Christ Jesus, the body in which he hath vouchsafed to invest and enwrap himselfe, and so apparell a Harlot in Christs cloathes, and make that body, which is his, hers. That Christ should take my ²²⁰ body, though defiled with fornication, and make it his, is strange; but that I, in fornication, should take Christs body, and make it hers, is more. Know ye not, sayes the Apostle, that your bodies are the members of Christ? And againe, Know you not, that he that is joyned to a harlot, is one body? Some of the Romane Emperours, made it treason, to carry a Ring, that had their picture engraved in it, to any place in the house, of low Office. What Name can we give to that sin, to make the body of Christ, the body of a harlot? And yet, the Apostle there, as taking knowledge, that we loved our selves better then Christ, changes the edge of his argument, and argues thus, ver. 18. He that ²³⁰ committeth fornication, sinneth against his own body; If ye will be bold with Christs body, yet favour your own: No man ever hated his own body; and yet, no outward enemy is able so to macerate our body, as our owne licentiousnesse. Christ, who tooke all our bodily infirmities upon him, Hunger, and Thirst, and Sweat, and Cold, tooke no bodily deformities upon him, he tooke not a lame, a blinde, a crooked body; and we, by our intemperance, and licentiousnesse, deforme that body which is his, all these wayes. The licentious man, most of any, studies bodily handsomenesse, to be comely, and gracious, and acceptable, and yet, soonest of any, deforms, and destroyes it, and makes that loath-²⁴⁰some to all, which all his care was to make amiable: And so they oppose Gods purpose of dignifying the body.

 V. 16

Transgressors in a third kinde are they, that sacrilegiously prophane the Temple of the Holy Ghost, by neglecting the respect and duties, belonging to the dead bodies of Gods Saints, in a decent and comely accompanying them to convenient Funerals. Heires and Executors are oftentimes defective in these offices, and pretend better employments of that, which would be, (say they) vainly spent so. But remember you, of whom (in much such a case) that is said in S. Iohn, This he ²⁵⁰*said, not because he cared for the poore, but because he was a Thiefe,* and had the bagge, and bore that which was put therein: This Executors say, not because they intend pious uses, but because they beare, and beare away the bagges. Generally, thy opinion must be no rule for other mens actions; neither in these cases of Funerals, must thou call all too much, which is more then enough; That womans Ointment poured upon Christs feet, that hundred pound waight of perfumes to embalme his one body, was more then enough, necessarily enough; yet it was not too much, for the dignity of that person, nor for the testimony of their zeale, who did it, in so abundant manner.

John 12.6

Now, as in all these three waies, men may oppose the purpose of ²⁶⁰God, in indignifying the body, so in concurring with Gods purpose, for the dignifying thereof, a man may exceed, and goe beyond Gods purpose, in all three. God would not have the body torne, and mangled with tortures, in those cases; but then, hee would not have it pampered with wanton delicacies, nor varnished with forraigne complexion. It is ill, when it is not our own heart, that appeares in our words; it is ill too, when it is not our own blood, that appeares in our cheekes; It may doe some ill offices of blood, it may tempt, but it gives over, when it should doe a good office of blood, it cannot blush. If when they are filling the wrinkles, and graves of their face, they would remember, ²⁷⁰that there is another grave, that calls for a filling with the whole body, so, even their pride would flow into a mortification. God would not have us put on a sad countenance, nor disfigure our face, not in our fastings, and other disciplines; God would not have us marre his work; nor God would not have us goe about to doe his last work, which he hath reserved to himselfe in heaven, here upon earth, that is, to glorifie our bodies, with such additions here, as though we would need no glorification there.

So also in the second way of giving due respect to the body of man, a man may exceed Gods purpose. God would not have the body corrupted and attenuated, shrunk and deformed with incontinency, and licentiousnesse; But God would not have that sparing of the body, to dishonour, or undervalue, or forbear marriage, nor to frustrate that, which was one of Gods purposes, in the institution of marriage, procreation of children. Marriage without possibility of children, lacks one halfe of Gods purpose in the institution of marriage; for, the third reason of marriage, after the other two, (which two were, for a Helper, and for Children) which is, that marriage should be for a Remedy, that third came in after; for at the time of the institution of marriage, man was not fallen into any inordinate concupiscencies, and so, at that time, ²⁸⁰ needed no remedy. Marriage without possibility of children, lacks one of Gods two reasons for children; but marriage with a contract against children, or a practice against children, is not (sayes S. Augustine) a marriage, but a solemne, an avowed, a dayly Adultery. To choose to be ill in the sight of God, rather then to look ill, in the sight of men, is a perverse, and a poysonous Physick. The sin of Er, and Onan, in married men; the sin of procured abortions, in married women, doe, in many cases, equall, in some, exceed, the sin of Adultery; To rob a husband, or a wife, of a future child, may be in the wife, or husband, as great a sin, as to bring a supposititious, or a spurious child, into the Fathers ²⁹⁰ inheritance. God would not have the comelinesse, the handsomenesse of the body defaced by incontinency, and intemperance, but he would not have the care of that comelinesse, and handsomenesse frustrate his purpose of children in marriage.

And as in those two, (God would not have the body tortured, nor mangled, God would not have the body deformed by licentiousnesse) so, in his third respect to mans body, God would not have the bodies of his dead Saints neglected, Gods purpose may be exceeded too. Gods purpose therein is, that all men should be Decently, and Honourable persons, Honourably buried; but his purpose herein is exceeded, when ³⁰⁰ any rage of their skin, or chip of their bones, or lock of their haire, is kept for a Relique, and made an Universall balme, and Amulet, and Antidote, against all temporall, and all spirituall diseases, and calamities, not onely against the rage of a Feaver, but of hell it selfe. What their counterfait Reliques may doe, against their counterfait hell, against their Purgatory, I know not: That powerfull, and precious, and onely Relique, which is given to us, against hell it selfe, is onely the Communion of the body, and blood of Christ Jesus, left to us by him, and preserved for us, in his Church, though his body be removed out of our sight.

³²⁰ To end this, Miramini hoc, marvell at this, at the wonderfull love of God to the body of man, and thou wilt favour it so, as not to macerate thine owne body, with uncommanded and inhumane flagellations, and whippings, nor afflict their bodies, who are in thy charge, with inordinate labour; thou wilt not dishonour this body, as it is Christs body, nor deforme it, as it is thine owne, with intemperance, but thou wilt behave thy selfe towards it so, as towards one, whom it hath pleased the King to honour, with a resurrection, (which was our first) and not to deferre that resurrection long, which is our next step, Venit hora, The houre is comming.

³³⁰ Non talem Deum tuum putes, qualis nec tu debes esse, is excellently said by S. Augustine: Never presume upon any other disposition in God, then such as thou findest in thine own heart, that thou art bound to have in thy selfe; for we finde in our hearts, a band of conformity, and assimilation to God, that is, to be as like God as we can. Therefore whatsoever thou findest thy selfe bound to doe to another, thou maist expect at Gods hand. Thou art bound to help up another that is fallen, therefore thou maist assure thy selfe, that God will give thee a Resurrection: so, thou findest in thy heart, that the soul of an almes, the soule of a benefit, that that gives it life, is the speedy, the present doing ³⁴⁰ of it; Therefore thou maist be sure, that God will make speed to save thee, that he will not long deferre this thy resurrection, hora venit. S. Augustine comparing the former resurrection, which is the spirituall resurrection of the soule, ver. 25. with this in the Text, which is the resurrection of the body, observes, that there Christ sayes, hora venit, & nunc est, the houre is comming, and now is; because in every private inspiration of the Holy Ghost, in every Sermon, in every meeting of the Congregation, the dead may heare, and live; nunc est, they may doe it now. But that in this resurrection in the Text, the resurrection of the body, it is not said, nunc est, that the houre is now; for, the

³⁵⁰ Son of Man who sayes it, (as hee is the Son of Man) knowes not when it shall bee; But hee sayes Hora venit, It is comming, and comming apace, and comming quickly, shortly.

[Apoc. 22.7] As soone as God had made man, he gave him his patent, Dominamini, Dominion over the Creature; As soone as Man was fallen, God gave him the promise of a Messias; And of his second comming, himselfe sayes, Ecce, venio citò, Behold, I come speedily: Venit, he comes, he is upon the way; and Ecce, venit, Behold, he comes, he is within sight, you may see him in his fore-running tokens; and Ecce citò, as little way as he hath to goe, he makes haste, And there is a

Maldon. ³⁶⁰ Jesuit that makes the haste so great, as that he sayes, Howsoever S. Augustine make use of that note, that it is not said in the Text, Nunc est, That the houre of the Resurrection is now, yet he does beleieve, that Christ did say so, though the Euangelist left it out. We need not say so; we doe not; so much lesse liberty doe we take in departing from the Fathers, then the Romane Authors doe: But yet, so as S. Iohn speaks, Hora novissima, This is the last time, (Now there are many Antichrists, whereby we know that this is the last time) And so, as S. Peter speaks, Be not ignorant of this one thing, that one day is with the Lord as a thousand yeares, and a thousand yeares as one day:

³⁷⁰ So as this Nunc may signifie Vltimum statum, The last course of times, the time not of Nature, nor of Law, but of Grace; so we admit that addition in this Resurrection too, Hora venit, & nunc est, The houre is comming, and now is, because there are no other meanes to be hereafter instituted for the attaining of a happy Resurrection, then those that now are established in the Church, especially at a mans death, may we very properly say, Nunc est, Now is the Resurrection come to him, not onely because the last Judgement is involved in the first, (for that Judgment which passeth upon every man at his death, stands for ever without Repeal, or Appeal, or Error) but because after the death of ³⁸⁰ the Body, there is no more to be done with the Body, till the Resurrection; for as we say of an Arrow, that it is over shot, it is gone, it is beyond the mark, though it be not come to the mark yet, because there is no more to be done to it till it be; so we may say, that he that is come to death, is come to his Resurrection, because he hath not another step to make, another foot to goe, another minute to count, till he be at the Resurrection.

The Resurrection then, being the Coronation of man, his Death, and lying downe in the grave, is his enthroning, his sitting downe in that chayre, where he is to receive that Crown. As then the Martyrs, ³⁹⁰ under the Altar, though in heaven, yet doe cry out for the Resurrection; so let us, in this miserable life, submit our selves cheerfully to the hand of God, in death, since till that death we cannot have this Resurrection, and the first thing that we shall doe after this death, is to rise againe. To the child that is now borne, we may say, Hora venit, The day of his Resurrection is comming; To him that is old, we may say, The hour is come; but to him that is dead, The minute is come, because to him there are no more minutes till it doe come.

Miramini hoc, Marvail at this, at the descent of Gods love, He loves the Body of Man, And Miramini hoc, Mervaille at his speed, He makes ⁴⁰⁰ haste to expresse this love, Hora venit, And then Miramini hoc, Marvaile at the Generality, it reaches to all, all that are in the Grave; All that are in the graves shall heare his voice, &c. God hath made the Body as a House for the soule, till he call her out, and he hath made the Grave as a House for the body, till he call it up. The misery, and poore estate that Christ submitted himselfe unto for man, was not determined in that, That foxes had holes, but he no where to lay his head, while he lived; but he had no grave that he could claime, when he was dead. It is some discontinuance of the Communion of Saints, if I may not be buried with the Saints of God. Every man that hath not divested ⁴¹⁰ Humanity, hath a desire to have his bones lie at rest, and we cannot provide for that so well, any way, as to bury them in Consecrated places, which are, in common entendment, safest from prophane violences. Even that respect, that his bones might lye at rest, seems to have mov'd one Prophet, to enjoyne his Sons, to bury him, in the Sepulcher, where the other Prophet was buried. He knew that Iosiah would burne the bones of all the other graves, upon the Altar of Bethel, as was prophecied; and he presum'd that he would spare the bones of that Prophet, and so his bones should be safe, if they were mingled with the other. God expressed his love to Moses, in that particular, That he ⁴²⁰ buried him; And, to deliver, and remove him, from the violence of any that lov'd him not, and so might dishonor his memory, and from the superstition of any that over-lov'd him, and so might over-honour his memory, God buried him in secret. In more then one place doth David complaine, That there was none to bury Gods Saints; And the Dignity that is promised here in the Text, is appropriated to them, who are in the graves, who are buried.

But then, was that generall? Is it simply, plainly, literally of them, and them onely, who are in graves, who are buried? Shall none enjoy a Resurrection, that have not enjoy'd a Grave? Still I say, it is a comfort

⁴³⁰ to a dying man, it is an honour to his memory, it is a discharge of a duty in his friends, it is a piece of the Communion of Saints, to have a consecrated grave: But the word here is, In monumentis, All that are in Monuments; that is, in Receptacles of Bodies, of what kind soever they be: wheresoever the hand of God layes up a dead Body, that place

is the Receptacle, so the monument, so the grave of that Body. God keeps all the bones of the righteous, so that none of them are broken: Though they be trod to dust in our sight, they are intire in his, because he can bid them be whole againe in an instant. Some Nations burnt their dead, there the fire is the grave; some drowned their dead, there ⁴⁴⁰ the sea is the grave; and some hung them up upon trees, and there the ayre is their grave: Some Nations eat their dead themselves, and some maintained dogs to eat the dead; and as they called those dogs, Canes Sepulchrales, Sepulchrall dogs, so those men were sepulchrall men, those men and those dogs were graves. Death and hell shall deliver up their dead, says S. Iohn: That is, the whole state, and mansion of the dead, shall be emptied: The state of the dead is their grave, and upon all that are in this state, shall the testimony of Gods love, to the body of man, fall; And that is the Generality, All that are in the grave, &c.

Strabo

Apoc. 20.13

Audient

Our next step, is, The Instrument, the Means, by which, this, first so ⁴⁵⁰ speedy, and then so generall love of God, to man, to man in his lowest part, his body, is accomplished unto him; These, All these, All these that are in graves, in all these kinds of graves, shall heare his voice, and that is the Meanes. First, whose voice? That is expressed immediately before, The Son of man. In the other Resurrection, in that of the dead soule, ver. 25. there it is said, The dead shall heare the voyce of the Son of God. In this, which is the Resurrection to Judgement, it is The Son of man. The former Resurrection (that of a sinner to repentance by preaching) is wrought by a plaine, and ordinary meanes here in the Church; where you doe but heare a man in a Pew, read prayers, and ⁴⁶⁰ pronounce Absolution, and a man in a Pulpit preach a Sermon, and a man at a Table consecrate, and administer a Sacrament; And because all this, though it be the power of life, and the meanes of your spirituall resurrection, is wrought by the Ministry of man, who might be contemptible in your eye, therefore the whole worke is referred to God, and not the son of man, but the Son of God, is said to do it.

In this Resurrection of the Text, which is a Resurrection to Judgement, and to an account with God, that God whom we have displeased, exasperated, violated, wounded in the whole course of our life, lest we should be terrified, and dejected at the presence of that God, the whole ⁴⁷⁰ worke is referred to the Son of Man, which hath himselfe formerly felt all our infirmities, and hath had as sad a soule at the approach of death, as bitter a Cup in the forme of Death, as heavy a feare of Gods forsaking him in the agony of death, as we can have: And for sin it self, I would not, I do not extenuate my sin, but let me have fallen, not seven times a day, but seventy seven times a minute, yet what are my sins, to all those sins that were upon Christ? The sins of all men, and all women, and all children, the sins of all Nations, all the East and West, and all the North and South, the sins of all times and ages, of Nature, of Law, of Grace, the sins of all natures, sins of the body, and sins of the ⁴⁸⁰ mind, the sins of all growth, and all extentions, thoughts, and words, and acts, and habits, and delight, and glory, and contempt, and the very sin of boasting, nay of our belying our selves in sin; All these sins, past, present and future, were at once upon Christ, and in that depth of sin, mine are but a drop to his Ocean; In that treasure of sin, mine are but single money to his Talent; And therefore, that I might come with a holy reverence to his Ordinance, in this place, though it be but in the Ministry of man, that first Resurrection is attributed to the Son of God, to give a dignity to that Ministry of man, which otherwise might have beene under-valued, that thereby we might have a consolation, and a cheerefulnesse towards it; It is He, that is, the Son of God, ⁴⁹⁰ and the Son of man, Christ; which remembers us also, that all that belongs to the expressing of the Law of God to man, must be received by us, who professe our selves Christians, in, and by, and for, and through Christ.

We use to ascribe the Creation to the Father, but the Father created by the Word, and his Word, is his Son, Christ; When he prepared the Heavens, I was there, (saies Christ, of himselfe in the person of Wis-dome) and when he appointed the foundations of the earth, then was I by him, as one brought up with him; It is not, as one brought in to 500 him, or brought in by him, but with him; one as old, that is, as eternall, as much God as he. We use to ascribe Sanctification to the Holy Ghost; But the Holy Ghost sanctifies in the Church, And the Church was purchased by the blood of Christ, and Christ remains Head of the Church, usque in consummationem, till the end of the world. I looke upon every blessing that God affords me, and I consider whether it be temporall, or spirituall; and that distinguishes the metall; the temporall is my silver, and the spirituall is my Gold; but then I looke againe upon the Inscription, Cujus Imago, whose Image, whose inscription it beares, and whose Name; and except I have it, in, and for, 510 and by Christ Jesus, Temporall, and Spirituall things too, are but imaginary, but illusory shadows; for God convayes himselfe to us, no other way, but in Christ.

Christum

The benefit then in our Text, the Resurrection, is by him; but it is limited thus, It is by hearing him, They that are in their Graves shall heare, &c. So it is in the other Resurrection too, the spirituall resurrection, v. 25. There, they must heare him, that will live. In both resurrections, That in the Church, now, by Grace, And that in the Grave hereafter, by Power, it is said, They shall heare him. They shall, which seemes to imply a necessity, though not a coaction; But that necessity, 520 not of equall force, not equally irresistible in both: In the Grave, They shall; Though they be dead, and senselesse as the dust, (for they are dust it selfe) though they bring no concurrence, no cooperation, They shall heare, that is, They shall not chuse but heare. In the other resurrection, which is, in the Church, by Grace, in Gods Ordinance, They shall heare too, that is, There shall be a voice uttered so, as that they may heare, if they will, but not whether they will or no, as in the other case, in the grave. Therefore when God expresses his gathering of his Zecha. 10.8 Church, in this world, it is Sibilabo & congregabo, I will hisse, or chirpe for them, and so gather them: He whispers in the voyce of the 530 Spirit, and he speaks a little louder, in the voice of a man; Let the man be a Boanerges, a Son of thunder, never so powerfull a speaker, yet no thunder is heard over all the world. But for the voyce that shall be heard at the Resurrection, He shall send his Angels, with a great sound of a Trumpet; A great sound, such as may be made by a Trumpet, such as an Angell, all his Angels can make in a Trumpet, and more then all that, The Lord himselfe shall descend from Heaven, and that, with a shout, and with the voice of an Archangel, that is, saies S. Ambrose, of Christ himselfe, And in the Trumpet of God, that is also, Christ himselfe.

Mat. 24.31

I Thes. 4.16

⁵⁴⁰ So then, you have the Person, Christ; The meanes, A Voyce, And the powerfullnesse of that voyce, in the Name of an Archangell, which is named but once more in all the Scriptures: And therefore, let no man, that hath an holy anhelation and panting after the Resurrection, suspect that he shall sleepe in the dust, for ever; for, this is a voyce that will be heard, he must rise. Let no man, who because he hath made his course of life like a beast, would therefore be content his state in death might be like a beast too, hope that he shall sleepe in the dust, for ever, for this is a voice, that must be heard, And all that heare shall come forth, they that have done good, &c.

⁵⁵⁰ He shall come forth; even he that hath done ill, and would not, shall come forth. You may have seene morall men, you may have seen impious men, go in confidently enough: not afrighted with death, not terrified with a grave; but when you shall see them come forth againe, you shall see them in another complexion. That man that dyed so, with that confidence, thought death his end; It ends his seventy yeares, but it begins his seventy millions of generations of torments, even to his body, and he never thought of that: Indeed, Iudicii, nisi qui vitæ æternæ prædestinatus est, non potest reminisci, saies S. Ambrose, No man can, no man dares thinke upon the last Judgement, but he that ⁵⁶⁰ can thinke upon it with comfort, he that is predestinated to eternall life. Even the best, are sometimes shaken with the consideration of the Resurrection, because it is impossible to separate the consideration of the Resurrection, from the consideration of the Judgement; and the terrors of that may abate the joy of the other: Sive comedo, sive bibo, saies S. Hierom, Whether I eate, or drink, still me thinks I heare this sound, Surgite mortui, & venite ad Iudicium, Arise you dead, and come to Judgement: When it cals me up from death, I am glad, when it cals me to Judgement, that impaires my joy. Can I thinke that God will not take a strict account; or, can I be without feare, if I thinke he ⁵⁷⁰ will? Non expavescere requisitum est dicere, non requiret, is excellently said by S. Bernard, If I can put off all feare of that Judgement,

Procedent

I have put off all imagination, that any such Judgement shall be. But, when I begin this feare, in this life, here, I end this feare, in my death, and passe away cheerefully: But the wicked begin this feare, when the Trumpet sounds to the Resurrection, and then shall never end it; but, as a man condemned to be halfe hang'd, and then quartered, hath a fearfull addition in his quartering after, and yet had no ease in his hanging before; so they that have done ill, when they have had their hanging, when they have suffered in soule, the torments of Hell, from 580 the day of their death, to the day of Judgement, shall come to that day with feare, as to an addition to that, which yet, was infinite before. And therefore the vulgat Edition hath rendred this well, Procedent, They shall proceed, they shall go farther and farther in torment.

Conclusio

But this is not the object of our speculation, the subject of our meditation, now: we proposed this Text, for the Contemplation of Gods love to man, and therefore we rather comfort our selves with that branch, and refresh our selves with the shadow of that, That they who have done good, shall come forth unto the Resurrection of life. Alas, the others shall live as long as they; Lucifer is as immortall as Michael, August. 590 and Iudas as immortall as S. Peter: But Vita damnatorum, mors est, That which we call immortality in the damned, is but a continuall dying; howsoever it must be called life, it hath all the qualities of death, saving the ease, and the end, which death hath, and damnation hath not. They must come forth; they that have done evill, must do so too: Neither can stay in their house, their grave; for, their house (though that house should be the sea) shall be burnt downe; all the world dissolv'd with fire. But then, They who have done evill, shall passe from that fire, into a farther heat, without light, They who have done good, into a farther light, without heat.

600 But fix upon the Conditions, and performe them; They must have done Good; To have knowne Good, to have beleev'd it, to have intended it, nay to have preached it to others, will not serve, They must have done good. They must be rooted in faith, and then bring forth fruit, and fruit in season; and then is the season of doing good, when another needs that good at thy hands. God gives the evening raine, but he gave the morning rain before; A good man gives at his death, but he gives in his life time too. To them belongs this Resurrection of the body to life; upon which, since our Text inclines us to marvell rather then to discourse, I will not venture to say with David, Narrabo omnia ⁶¹⁰ mirabilia tua, I will shew all thy wondrous works, (an Angels tongue could not shew them) but I will say with him, Mementote mirabilium, Remember the marvellous works he hath done, And by that, God will open your eyes, that you may behold the wondrous things that he will do: Remember with thankfulness the severall resurrections that he hath given you; from superstition and ignorance, in which, you, in your Fathers lay dead; from sin, and a love of sin, in which, you, in the dayes of your youth, lay dead; from sadnesse, and dejection of spirit, in which, you, in your worldly crosses, or spirituall tentations, lay dead; And assure your self, that that God that loves to perfect his ⁶²⁰ own works, when you shall lye dead in your graves, will give you that Resurrection to life, which he hath promised to all them that do good, and will extend to all them, who having done evill, do yet truly repent the evill they have done.

CANT. 3.11. GOE FORTH YE DAUGHTERS OF SION, AND BEHOLD KING SOLOMON, WITH THE CROWN, WHEREWITH HIS MOTHER CROWNED HIM, IN THE DAY OF HIS ESPOUSALS, AND IN THE DAY OF THE GLADNESSE OF HIS HEART.

[Gen. 1.26]

IN THE Creation of man, in that one word, Faciamus, let Vs make man, God gave such an intimation of the Trinity, as that we may well enlarge, and spread, and paraphrase that one word, so farre, as to heare therein, a councill of all the three Persons, agreeing in this gracious designe upon Man, faciamus, let us make him; make him, and mend him, and make him sure: I, the Father, will make him by my power; if he should fall, Thou the Sonne shalt repayr him, re-edify him, redeem him; if he should distrust, that this Redemption belonged not to him, Thou, the Holy Ghost, shalt apply to¹⁰ his particular soule, and conscience, this mercy of mine, and this merit of the Sonnes; and so let us make him. In our Text there is an intimation of another Trinity. The words are spoken but by one, but the persons in the text, are Three; For first, The speaker, the Director of all, is the Church, the spouse of Christ, she says, Goe forth ye daughters of Sion; And then the persons that are called up, are, as you see, The Daughters of Sion, the obedient children of the Church, that hearken to her voice: And then lastly, the person upon whom they are directed, is Solomon crowned, That is, Christ invested with the royall dignity of being Head of the Church; And in this, especially, is this applyable ²⁰ to the occasion of our present meeting (All our meetings now, are, to confesse, to the glory of God, and the rectifying of our own con-sciences, and manners, the uncertainty of the prosperity, and the as-surednesse of the adversity of this world) That this Crown of Solomons in the text, will appear to be Christs crown of Thornes, his Humiliation, his Passion; and so these words will dismisse us in this blessed consolation, That then we are nearest to our crown of Glory, when we are in tribulation in this world, and then enter into full possession of it, when we come to our dissolution and transmigration out of this world: And these three persons, The Church, that calls, The ³⁰ children that hearken, and Christ in his Humiliation, to whom they are sent, will be the three parts, in which we shall determine this Exercise.

First then, the person that directs us, is The Church; no man hath seen God, and lives; but no man lives till he have heard God; for God spake to him, in his Baptisme, and called him by his name, then. Now, as it were a contempt in the Kings house, for any servant to refuse any thing, except he might heare the King in person command it, when the King hath already so established the government of his house, as that his commandements are to be signified by his great Officers: so ⁴⁰ neither are we to look, that God should speak to us mouth to mouth, spirit to spirit, by Inspiration, by Revelation, for it is a large mercy, that he hath constituted an Office, and established a Church, in which we should heare him. When Christ was baptized by John, it is sayd by all those three Evangelists, that report that story, in particular circumstances, that there was a voice heard from heaven saying, This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased: and it is not added in any of those three Evangelists, that that voice added, Hear him: for, after that Declaration, that he, who was visibly and personally come amongst them, was the Sonne of God, there was no reason to doubt ⁵⁰ of mens willingnesse to hear him, who went forth in person, to preach unto them, in this world; As long as he was to stay with them, it was not likely that they should need provocation, to hear him, therefore that was not added at his Baptism, and entrance into his personall ministry: But when Christ came to his Transfiguration, which was a manifestation of his glory, in the next world, and an intimation of the approaching of the time of his going away, to the possession of that glory, out of this world, there that voyce from heaven sayes, This is my beloved Sonne, in whom I am well pleased, heare him: When he was gone out of this world, men needed a more particular solicitation

⁶⁰ to heare him; for, how, and where, and in whom should they heare him, when he was gone? In the Church, for the same testimony that God gave of Christ, to authorize and justifie his preaching, hath Christ given of the Church, to justifie her power: The holy Ghost fell upon Christ, at his Baptisme, and the holy Ghost fell upon the Apostles, (who were the representative Church) at Whitsontide: The holy Ghost tarried upon Christ then, and the holy Ghost shall tarry with the Church, usque ad consummationem, till the end of the world. And therefore, as we have that institution from Christ, Dic Ecclesiae, when men are refractory and perverse, to complaine to the Church, so have ⁷⁰ they who are complained of to the Church, that institution from Christ also, Audi Ecclesiam, Hearken to the voyce of God, in the Church; and they have from him that commination, If you disobey them, you disobey God; in what fetters soever they binde you, you shall rise bound in those fetters; and, as he who is excommunicated in one Diocese, should not be received in another; so let no man presume of a better state, in the Triumphant Church, then he holds in the Militant, or hope for communion there, that despises excommunication here. That which the Scripture says, God sayes, (says St. Augustine) for the Scripture is his word; and that which the Church says, ⁸⁰ the Scriptures say, for she is their word, they speak in her; they authorize her, and she explicates them; The Spirit of God inanimates the Scriptures, and makes them his Scriptures, the Church actuates the Scriptures, and makes them our Scriptures: Nihil salubrius, says the same Father, There is not so wholesome a thing, no soule can live in so good an aire, and in so good a diet, Quàm ut Rationem præcedat autoritas, Then still to submit a mans owne particular reason, to the authority of the Church expressed in the Scriptures: For, certainly it is very truly (as it is very usefully) said by Calvin, Semper nimia morositas, est ambitiosa, A frowardnesse, and an aptnesse to quarrell ⁹⁰ at the proceedings of the Church, and to be delivered from the obligations, and constitutions of the Church, is ever accompanied with an ambitious pride, that they might enjoy a licentious liberty; It is not because the Church doth truly take too much power, but because they would be under none; it is an ambition, to have all government in their own hands, and to be absolute Emperors of themselves, that makes them refractory: But, if they will pretend to believe in God, they must believe in God so, as God hath manifested himself to them, they must believe in Christ; so if they will pretend to heare Christ, they must heare him there, where he hath promised to speake, ¹⁰⁰ they must heare him in the Church.

The first reason then in this Trinity, the person that directs, is the Church; the Trumpet in which God sounds his Judgements, and the Organ, in which he delivers his mercy; And then the persons of the second place, the persons to whom the Church speakes here, are Filiæ Sion, The daughters of Sion, her owne daughters. We are not called, Filii Ecclesiæ, sonnes of the Church: The name of sonnes may imply more virility, more manhood, more sense of our owne strength, then becomes them, who professe an obedience to the Church: Therefore, as by a name, importing more facility, more suppleness, more application, more tractableness, she calls her children, Daughters. But
¹²⁰ as long as they continue in you; you cannot devest your allegiance to the Church, though you would; no more then you can to the State, to whom you cannot say, I will be no subject. A father may dis-inherit his son, upon reasons, but even that dis-inherited childe cannot re-nounce his father. That Church which conceived thee, in the Covenant of God, made to Christians, and their seed, and brought thee forth in baptisme, and brought thee up in catechizing, and preaching, may yet, for thy misdemeanor to God in her, separate thee, à Mensa & Toro, from bed and board; from that sanctuary of the soule, the Communion Table, and from that Sanctuary of the body, Christian

3 Part ¹⁵⁰ Here are two duties enjoyn'd; at least two steps, two degrees; Egre- dimini, Go forth, and then, Videte, Behold, contemplate; And, after Egredimini the duty, or wrap'd in the duty, we have the Object, which we are to look upon, and in that, divers things to be considered; as we shall see in their order. First, when we are bid to Go forth, it is not to go so far, as out of that Church, in which God hath given us our station; for, as Moses says, That the word of God is not beyond Sea; so the Church of God, is not so beyond Sea, as that we must needs seek it there, either in a painted Church, on one side, or in a naked Church, on another; a Church in a Dropsie, overflowne with Ceremonies, or a ¹⁶⁰ Church in a Consumption, for want of such Ceremonies, as the primitive Church found usefull, and beneficiall for the advancing of the glory of God, and the devotion of the Congregation. That which Christ says to the Church it selfe, the Church says to every soule in the Church: Goe thy way forth, by the footsteps of the flocke; Associate thy selfe to the true shepheard, and true sheep of Christ Jesus, and stray not towards Idolatrous Chappels, nor towards schismaticall

[Deut.
30.13]

Conventicles, but goe by the footsteps of the flock; there must be footsteps, some must have gone that way before, take heed of Opinions, that begin in thy selfe; and the whole flock must have gone ¹⁷⁰ that way, take heed of opinions vented by a few new men, which have not had the establishment of a Church. And truly the best way to discerne footsteps, is Daniels way, Daniels way was to straw ashes, and so their footsteps that had been there, were easily discerned: Walke in thine own ashes, in the meditation of thine own death, or in the ashes of Gods Saints, who are dead before thee, in the contemplation of their example, and thou wilt see some footsteps of the flock, some impressions, some directions, how they went, and how thou art to follow, to the heavenly Jerusalem. In conversing evermore, with them which tread upon Carpets, or upon Marbles, thou shalt see no
¹⁹⁰ it is a round walke, a giddy, a vertiginous proceeding. Get beyond thine own circle; consider thy selfe at thine end, at thy death, and then Egredere, Goe further then that, Go forth and see what thou shalt be after thy death.

Still that which we are to look upon, is especially our selves, but it is our selves, enlarg'd and extended into the next world; for till we see, what we shall be then, we are but short-sighted. Wouldst thou say, thou knew'st a man, because thou hadst seen him in his Cradle? no more canst thou be said, to have known thy self, because thou knowest the titles, and additions, which thou hast received in this world; for ²⁰⁰ all those things which we have here, are but swadling clouts, and all our motions, and preferments, from place, to place, are but the rocking of a cradle. The first thing that Christ says to his spouse in the Canticles, is, If thou know not thy selfe, (for so all the Ancients read it, and so the Originall beares it) If thou know not thy selfe, O thou fairest of women; she might know, that she was the fairest of women, and yet not know her selfe; Thou mayst know, that thou art the happyest of men, in this world, and yet not know thy self. All this life is but a Preface, or but an Index and Repertory to the book of life; There, at that book beginnes thy study; To grow perfect in that ²¹⁰ book, to be dayly conversant in that book, to find what be the marks of them, whose names are written in that book, and to finde those marks, ingenuously, and in a rectified conscience, in thy selfe, To finde that no murmuring at Gods corrections, no disappointing of thy hopes, no interrupting of thy expectations, no frustrating of thy possibilities in the way, no impatience in sicknesse, and in the agony of death, can deface those marks, this is to goe forth, and see thy self, beyond thy self, to see what thou shalt be in the next world. Now, we cannot see our own face, without a glasse: and therefore in the Exod. 38.8 old Temple, In, or about that laver of brasse, where the water, for the ²²⁰ uses of the Church was reserved, Moses appointed looking-glasses to be placed; that so, at the entring into the Temple, men might see themselves, and make use of that water, if they had contracted any foulnesse, in any part about them. Here, at your coming hither now, you have two glasses, wherein you may see your selves from head to foot; One in the Text, your Head, Christ Jesus, represented unto you, in the name and person of Solomon, Behold King Solomon crowned, &c. And another, under your feet, in the dissolution of this great Monarch, our Royall Master, now layd lower by death then any of us, his Subjects and servants.

Solomon ²³⁰ First then, behold your selves in that first glasse, Behold King Solomon; Solomon the sonne of David, but not the Son of Bathsheba, but of a better mother, the most blessed Virgin Mary. For, Solomon, in this text, is not a proper Name, but an Appellative; a significative word: Solomon is pacificus, the Peacemaker, and our peace is made in, and by Christ Jesus: and he is that Solomon, whom we are called upon to see here. Now, as Saint Paul says, that he would know nothing but Christ, (that's his first abridgement) and then he would know nothing of Christ, but him crucified, (and that's the re-abridgement) so we seek no other glasse, to see our selves in, but Christ, nor any [1 Cor. 2.2] ²⁴⁰ other thing in this glasse, but his Humiliation. What need we? Even that, his lowest humiliation, his death, is expressed here, in three words of exaltation, It is a Crown, it is a Mariage, it is the gladnesse of heart: Behold King Salomon crowned, &c.

The Crown, which we are called to see him crowned with, his mother put upon him; The Crown which his Father gave him, was that glory, wherewith he was glorified, with the Father, from all eternity, in his divine nature: And the Crown wherewith his Father crowned his Humane nature, was the glory given to that, in his Ascension. His Mother could give him no such Crown: she her selfe
²⁶⁰ this Crown of Humiliation, whose flower cannot fade. Then was there truly a Rose amongst Thorns, when through his Crown of Thorns, you might see his title, Jesus Nazarenius: for, in that very name Nazarenius, is involved the signification of a flower; the very word signifies a flower. Esay's flower in the Crown of pride fades, and is removed; This flower in the Crown of Thornes fades not, nor could be removed; for, for all the importunity of the Jews, Pilate would not suffer that title to be removed, or to be changed; still Nazarenius remained, and still a rose amongst thorns. You know the curse of the earth, Thorns and thistles shall it bring forth unto thee; It did so to our ²⁷⁰ Solomon here, it brought forth thornies to Christ, and he made a Crown of those thorns, not onely for himself, but for us too, Omnes aculei mortis, in Dominici Corporis tolerantia, obtusi sunt, All the thorns of life and death, are broken, or blunted upon the head of our Solomon, and now, even our thorns, make up our Crown, our tribulation in life, our dissolution in death, conduce to our glory: Behold him crowned with his Mothers Crown, for even that brought him to his Fathers Crown, his humiliation to exaltation, his passion to glory.

Desponsatio

Behold your Solomon, your Saviour again, and you shall see another beam of Comfort, in your tribulations from his; for even this ²⁸⁰ Humiliation of his, is called his Espousals, his marriage, Behold him crowned in the day of his Espousals. His Spouse is the Church, His marriage is the uniting of himself to this Spouse, in his becomming Head of the Church. The great City, the heavenly Jerusalem, is called ^{21.9} The Bride, and The Lambs wife, in the Revelation: And he is the Head of this body, the Bridegroom of this Bride, the Head of this ^[1.5] Church, as he is The first-borne of the Dead; Death, that dissolves all ours, made up this marriage. His Death is his Marriage, and upon his Death flowed out from his side, those two Elements of the Church, ^[Ioh. 19.34] water and bloud; The Sacraments of Baptisme, and of the Com- ²⁹⁰ munion of himself. Behold then this Solomon crowned and married; both words of Exaltation, and Exultation, and both by Death; and trust him for working the same effects upon thee; That thou (though by Death) shalt be crowned with a Crown of Glory, and married to him, in whose right and merit thou shalt have that Crown.

Lætitia

And Behold him once again, and you shall see not a beam, but a stream of comfort; for this day, which is the day of his death, he calls here The day of the gladnesse of his heart. Behold him crowned in the day of the gladnesse of his heart. The fulnesse, the compasse, the two Hemispheres of Heaven, are often designed to us, in these two ³⁰⁰ names, Joy and Glory: If the Crosse of Christ, the Death of Christ, present us both these, how neare doth it bring, how fully doth it deliver Heaven it self to us in this life? And then we heare the Apostle say, We see Jesus, for the suffering of Death, crowned with Honour and Glory: There is half Heaven got by Death, Glory. And then, for the joy that was set before him, he indured the Crosse; There is the other half, Joy; All Heaven purchased by Death. And therefore, if any man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed, saith the Apostle; but let him glorifie God, In isto Nomine, as the vulgate read it; In that behalfe, as we translate it. But, In isto Nomine, saith ³¹⁰ S. Augustine: Let us glorifie God, in that Name; Non solum in nomine Christiani, sed Christiani patientis, not onely because he is a Christian in his Baptisme, but a Christian in a second Baptisme, a Baptisme of bloud; not onely as he hath received Christ, in accepting his Institution, but because he hath conformed himself to Christ, in fulfilling his sufferings. And therefore, though we admit naturall and humane sorrow, in the calamities which overtake us, and surround us in this life: (for as all glasses will gather drops and tears from externall causes, so this very glasse which we looke upon now, our Solomon in the Text, our Saviour, had those sadnesses of heart toward his Passion, and Agonies in his passion) yet count it all Joy when you fall into tentations, saith the Apostle: All Joy, that is, both the interest, and the principall, hath the earnest and the bargain; for if you can conceive joy in your tribulations in this world, how shall that joy be multiplied unto you, when no tribulation shall be mingled with it? There is not a better evidence, nor a more binding earnest of everlasting Joy in the next world, then to find Joy of heart in the tribulations of this; fixe thy self therefore upon this first glasse, this Solomon, thy Saviour, Behold King Solomon crownd, &c. and by conforming thy self to his holy sadnesse, and humiliation, thou shalt also become like him, in his Joy, and Glory.

Matth. 26.38

Luc. 22.44

Jam. 1.2

But then the hand of God, hath not set up, but laid down another Glasse, wherein thou maist see thy self; a glasse that reflects thy self, and nothing but thy selfe. Christ, who was the other glasse, is like thee in every thing, but not absolutely, for sinne is excepted; but in this glasse presented now (The Body of our Royall, but dead Master and Sovereigne) we cannot, we doe not except sinne. Not onely the greatest man is subject to naturall infirmities, (Christ himself was so) but the holiest man is subject to Originall and Actuell sinne, as thou art, and so a fit glasse for thee, to see thyself in. Jeat shewes a man his face, as well as Crystall; nay, a Crystall glasse will not show a man his face, except it be steeled, except it be darkned on the backside: Christ as he was a pure Crystall glasse, as he was God, had not been a glasse for us, to have seen ourselves in, except he had been steeled, darkened with our humane nature; Neither was he ever so throughly darkened, as that he could present us wholly to our selves, because he had no sinne, without seeing of which we do not see our selves. Those therefore that are like thee in all things, subject to humane infirmities, subject to sinnes, and yet are translated, and translated by Death, to everlasting Joy, and Glory, are nearest and clearest glasses for thee, to see thy self in; and such is this glasse, which God hath proposed to thee, in this house. And therefore, change the word of the Text, in a letter or two, from Egredimini, to Ingredimini; never go forth to see, but Go in and see a Solomon crowned with his mothers crown, &c. And when you shall find that hand that had signed to one of you a Patent for Title, to another for Pension, to another for Pardon, to another for Dispensation, Dead: That hand that settled Possessions by his Seale, in the Keeper, and rectified Honours by the sword, in his Marshall, and distributed relief to the Poore, in his Almoner, and Health to the Diseased, by his immediate Touch, Dead:

³⁶⁰ That Hand that ballanced his own three Kingdomes so equally, as that none of them complained of one another, nor of him, and carried the Keyes of all the Christian world, and locked up, and let out Armies in their due season, Dead; how poore, how faint, how pale, how momentany, how transitory, how empty, how frivolous, how Dead things, must you necessarily thinke Titles, and Possessions, and Favours, and all, when you see that Hand, which was the hand of Destinie, of Christian Destinie, of the Almighty God, lie dead? It was not so hard a hand when we touched it last, nor so cold a hand when we kissed it last: That hand which was wont to wipe all teares

³⁷⁰ from all our eyes, doth now but presse and squeeze us as so many sponges, filled one with one, another with another cause of teares. Teares that can have no other banke to bound them, but the declared and manifested will of God: For, till our teares flow to that heighth, that they might be called a murmuring against the declared will of God, it is against our Allegiance, it is Disloyaltie, to give our teares any stop, any termination, any measure. It was a great part of Annaes prayse, That she departed not from the Temple, day nor night; visit Gods Temple often in the day, meet him in his owne House, and depart not from his Temples, (The dead bodies of his Saints are his ³⁸⁰ Temples still) even at midnight; at midnight remember them, who resolve into dust, and make them thy glasses to see thy self in. Looke now especially upon him whom God hath presented to thee now, and with as much cheerfulness as ever thou heardst him say, Remember my Favours, or remember my Commandements; heare him say now with the wise man, Remember my Iudgement, for thine also shall be so; yesterday for me, and to day for thee; He doth not say to morrow, but to Day, for thee. Looke upon him as a beame of that Sunne, as an abridgement of that Solomon in the Text; for every Christian truly reconciled to God, and signed with his hand in the ³⁹⁰ Absolution, and sealed with his blood in the Sacrament, (and this was his case) is a beame, and an abridgement of Christ himselfe.

Behold him therefore Crowned with the Crown that his Mother gives him: His Mother, The Earth. In antient times, when they used to reward Souldiers with particular kinds of Crowns, there was a great dignity in Corona graminea, in a Crown of Grasse: That denoted a Conquest, or a Defence of that land. He that hath but Coronam Gramineam, a turfe of grasse in a Church yard, hath a Crown from his Mother, and even in that buriall taketh seisure of the Resurrection, as by a turfe of grasse men give seisure of land. He is crowned ⁴⁰⁰ in the day of his Marriage; for though it be a day of Divorce of us from him, and of Divorce of his body from his soul, yet neither of these Divorces breake the Marriage: His soule is married to him that made it, and his body and soul shall meet again, and all we, both then in that Glory where we shall acknowledge, that there is no way to this Marriage, but this Divorce, nor to Life, but by Death. And lastly, he is Crowned in the day of the gladnesse of his heart: He leaveth that heart, which was accustomed to the halfe joyes of the earth, in the earth; and he hath enlarged his heart to a greater capacity of Joy, and Glory, and God hath filled it according to that new ca-⁴¹⁰ pacity. And therefore, to end all with the Apostles words, I would not have you to be ignorant, Brethren, concerning them, which are asleepe, that ye sorrow not, as others that have no hope; for if ye beleeve that Jesus died, and rose again, even so, them also, which sleepe in him, will God bring with him. But when you have performed this Ingredimini, that you have gone in, and mourned upon him, and performed the Egredimini, you have gone forth, and laid his Sacred body, in Consecrated Dust, and come then to another Egredimini, to a going forth in many severall wayes: some to the service of their new Master, and some to the enjoying of their Fortunes conferred by ⁴²⁰ their old; some to the raising of new Hopes, some to the burying of old, and all; some to new, and busie endeavours in Court, some to contented retirings in the Countrey; let none of us, goe so farre from him, or from one another, in any of our wayes, but that all we that have served him, may meet once a day, the first time we see the Sunne, in the eares of almighty God, with humble and hearty prayer, that he will be pleased to hasten that day, in which it shall be an addition, even to the joy of that place, as perfect as it is, and as infinite as it is, to see that face againe, and to see those eyes open there, which we have seen closed here. Amen.

PSAL. 62.9. SURELY MEN OF LOW DEGREE ARE VANITY, AND MEN OF HIGH DEGREE ARE A LIE; TO BEE LAID IN THE BALANCE, THEY ARE ALTOGETHER LIGHTER THEN VANITY.

Basil.

WE CONSIDER the dignity of the Booke of Psalmes, either in the whole body together, or in the particular limmes and distribution thereof. Of the whole Body, it may be enough to tell you that which S. Basil saith, That if all the other bookes of Scripture could perish, there remained enough in the booke of Psalmes for the supply of all: And therefore he cals it Amuletum ad profligandum dæmonem; Any Psalme is Exorcisme enough to expell any Devill, Charme enough to remove any tentation, Enchantment enough to ease, nay to sweeten any tribulation. It is abundantly enough that¹⁰ our Saviour Christ himselfe cites the Psalmes, not onely as Canonically Scripture, but as a particular, and entire, and noble limme of that Body; All must be fulfilled of me, (saith he) which is written in the Law, in the Prophets, and in the Psalmes. The Law alone was the Sadduces Scripture, they received no more: The Law and the Prophets were (especially) the Scribes Scripture, they interpreted that: The Christians Scripture, in the Old Testament, is especially the Psalmes. For (except the Prophecy of Esay be admitted into the comparison) no booke of the Old Testament is so like a Gospel, so particular in all things concerning Christ, as the Psalmes.

Luk. 24.44

²⁰ So hath the Booke of Psalmes an especiall dignity in the intire Body, all together. It hath so also in divers distributions thereof into parts. For even amongst the Jewes themselves, those fifteen Psalmes which follow immediatly and successively after the 119. Psalme, were especially distinguished, and dignified by the name of Graduall Psalmes; Whether because they were sung upon the Degrees and staires ascending to the Altar, Or because hee that read them in the Temple, ascended into a higher and more eminent place to reade them, Or because the word Graduall implies a degree of excellency in the Psalmes themselves, I dispute not; But a difference those fifteen ³⁰ Psalmes ever had above the rest, in the Jewish and in the Christian Church too. So also hath there beene a particular dignity ascribed to those seven Psalmes, which we have ever called the Penitentiall Psalmes; Of which S. Augustine had so much respect, as that he commanded them to be written in a great Letter, and hung about the curtaines of his Death-bed within, that hee might give up the ghost in contemplation, and meditation of those seven Psalmes. And it hath beene traditionally received, and recommended by good Authors, that that Hymne, which Christ and his Apostles are said to have sung after the Institution and celebration of the Sacrament, was a Hymne composed of those six Psalmes, which we call the Allelujah Psalmes, immediately preceding the hundred and nineteenth.

August.

Matt. 26.30

So then, in the whole Body, and in some particular limmes of the Body, the Church of God hath had an especiall consideration of the booke of Psalmes. This Church in which we all stand now, and in which my selfe, by particular obligation serve, hath done so too. In this Church, by ancient Constitutions, it is ordained, That the whole booke of Psalmes should every day, day by day bee rehearsed by us, who make the Body of this Church, in the eares of Almighty God. And therefore every Prebendary of this Church, is by those Constitu-⁵⁰ tions bound every day to praise God in those five Psalmes which are appointed for his Prebend. And of those five Psalmes which belong to mee, this, out of which I have read you this Text, is the first. And, by Gods grace, (upon like occasions) I shall here handle some part of every one of the other foure Psalmes, for some testimony, that those my five Psalmes returne often into my meditation, which I also assure my selfe of the rest of my brethren, who are under the same obligation in this Church.

integer*

For this whole Psalme, which is under our present consideration, as Athanasius amongst all the Fathers, was most curious, and most
⁸⁰ enlarged himselfe more then the rest (insomuch, that those heretiques which grow so fast, in these our dayes, The Socinians, (who deny the Godhead of Christ) are more vexed with that Father, then with any other, and call him for Athanasius, Sathanasius) As he calls that Sermon, a sermon against all Heresies, so he presents this Psalme against all Tentations, and Tribulations; Not that therein David puts himselfe to waigh particular tentations, and tribulations, but that he puts every man, in every triall, to put himselfe wholly upon God, and to know, that if man cannot helpe him in this world, nothing can; And, for man, Surely men of low degree are vanity, and men of high degree ⁹⁰ are a lie; To be laid in the balance, they are altogether lighter then vanity.

Divisio

We consider in the words, The maner, and the matter, How it is spoken, And what is said. For the first, the maner, this is not absolutely spoken, but comparatively, not peremptorily, but respectively, not simply, but with relation. The Holy Ghost, in Davids mouth, doth not say, That man can give no assistance to man; That man may looke for no helpe from man; But, that God is alwayes so present, and so all-sufficient, that wee need not doubt of him, nor rely upon any other, otherwise then as an instrument of his. For that which he had spread

Which words being our second part, open to us these steps: First, that other Doctrins, morall or civill Instructions may be delivered to us possibly, and probably, and likely, and credibly, and under the like termes, and modifications, but this in our Text, is Assuredly, un-¹¹⁰ doubtedly, undeniably, irrefragably, Surely men of low degree, &c. For howsoever when they two are compared together, with one another, it may admit discourse and disputation, whether men of high degree, or of low degree doe most violate the lawes of God; that is, whether prosperity or adversity make men most obnoxious to sin, yet, when they come to bee compared, not with one another, but both with God, this asseveration, this surely reaches to both; Surely, The man of low degree is vanity, and, as Surely, The man of high degree is a lie. And though this may seeme to leave some roome, for men of middle ranks, and fortunes, and places, That there is a mediocrity, that might give an ¹²⁰ assurance, and an establishment, yet there is no such thing in this case, for (as surely still) to be laid in the balance, they are all, (not all of low, and all of high degree, all rich, and all poore, but) All, of all conditions, altogether lighter then vanity.

Now, all this doth not destroy, not extinguish, not annihilate that affection in man, of hope, and trust, and confidence in any thing; but it rectifies that hope, and trust, and confidence, and directs it upon the right object: Trust not in flesh, but in spirituall things, That wee neither bend our hopes downeward, to infernall spirits, to seeke help in Witches; nor mis-carry it upward, to seeke it in Saints, or Angels, ¹³⁰ but fix it in him, who is nearer us then our owne soules, our blessed, and gracious, and powerfull God, who in this one Psalme is presented unto us, by so many names of assurance and confidence, My expectation, my salvation, my rocke, my defence, my glory, my strength, my refuge, and the rest.

I Part

erga Deum*

First then these words, Surely men of low degree, and men of high degree are vanity, are not absolutely, simply, unconditionally spoken; Man is not nothing: Nay, it is so farre from that, as that there is nothing but man. As, though there may bee many other creatures living, which were not derived from Eve, and yet Eve is called Mater

Gen. 3.20

¹⁴⁰ viventium, The Mother of all that live, because the life of none but man, is considered; so there bee so many other Creatures, and Christ sends his Apostles to preach, Omni Creaturæ, to every creature, yet he meanes none but Man. All that God did in making all other creatures, in all the other dayes, was but a laying in of Materials; The setting up of the work was in the making of Man. God had a picture of himselfe from all eternity; from all eternity, the Sonne of God was the Image of the invisible God; But then God would have one picture, which should bee the picture of Father, Sonne, and Holy Ghost too, and so made man to the Image of the whole Trinity. As the Apostle argues,

Colos. 1.15

Heb. 1.5

¹⁵⁰ Cui dixit, To whom did God ever say, This day have I begotten thee, but to Christ? so we say, for the dignity of man, Cui dixit, of what creature did God ever say, Faciamus, Let us, us make it, All, all, the Persons together, and to imploy, and exercise, not onely Power, but Counsaile in the making of that Creature? Nay, when man was at worst, he was at a high price; man being fallen, yet then, in that undervalue, he cost God his own and onely Son, before he could have him. Neither became the Son of God capable of redeeming man, by any lesse, or any other way, then by becomming man. The Redeemer must be better then he whom he is to redeeme; and yet, he must abase ¹⁶⁰ himselfe to as low a nature as his; to his nature; else he could not redeeme him. God was aliened from man, and yet God must become man, to recover man.

Gen. 1.28

God joyned man in Commission with himselfe, upon his Creation, in the Replete and Dominamini, when he gave Man power to possesse the Earth, and subdue the Creature; And God hath made man so equall to himselfe, as not onely to have a soule endlesse and immortall, as God himselfe, (though not endlesse and immortall as himselfe, yet endlesse and immortall as himselfe too, though not immortall the same way, (for Gods immortality is of himselfe) yet as certainly, and ¹⁷⁰ as infallibly Immortall as he) but God hath not onely given man such an immortall soule, but a body that shall put on Incorruption and Immortality too, which he hath given to none of the Angels. In so much, that howsoever it be, whether an Angel may wish it selfe an Archangel, or an Archangel wish it selfe a Cherubin; yet man cannot deliberately wish himselfe an Angel, because he should lose by that wish, and lacke that glory, which he shall have in his body. We shall be like the Angels, sayes Christ; In that wherein we can be like them, we shall be like them, in the exalting and refining of the faculties of our soules; But they shall never attaine to be like us in our glorified ¹⁸⁰ bodies. Neither hath God onely reserved this treasure and dignity of man to the next world, but even here he hath made him filium Dei, The Sonne of God, and Semen Dei, The seed of God, and Consortem divinæ naturæ, Partaker of the divine Nature, and Deos ipsos, Gods themselves, for Ille dixit Dii estis, he hath said we are Gods. So that, as though the glory of heaven were too much for God alone, God hath called up man thither, in the ascension of his Sonne, to partake thereof; and as though one God were not enough for the administration of this world, God hath multiplied gods here upon Earth, and imparted, communicated, not onely his power to every Magistrate, but the ¹⁹⁰ Divine nature to every sanctified man. David asks that question with a holy wonder, Quid est homo? What is man that God is so mindfull of him? But I may have his leave, and the holy Ghosts, to say, since God is so mindfull of him, since God hath set his minde upon him, What is not man? Man is all.

[Psa. 8.4]

Since we consider men in the place that they hold, and value them according to those places, and aske not how they got thither, when we see Man made The Love of the Father, The Price of the Sonne, The Temple of the Holy Ghost, the Signet upon Gods hand, The Apple of Gods eye, Absolutely, unconditionally we cannot annihilate man, not ²⁰⁰ evacuate, not evaporate, not extenuate man to the levity, to the vanity, to the nullity of this Text (Surely men altogether, high and low, are lighter then vanity.) For, man is not onely a contributory Creature, but a totall Creature; He does not onely make one, but he is all; He is not a piece of the world, but the world it selfe; and next to the glory of God, the reason why there is a world.

But we must not determine this consideration here, That man is something, a great thing, a noble Creature, if we refer him to his end, to his interest in God, to his reversion in heaven; But when we consider man in his way, man amongst men, man is not nothing, not ²¹⁰ able to assist man, not unfit to be relyed upon by man; for, even in that respect also, God hath made Hominem homini Deum, He hath made one man able to doe the offices of God to another, in procuring his regeneration here, and advancing his salvation hereafter; As he sayes, Saviours shall come up on Mount Sion; which is the Church. Neither hath God determined that power of assisting others, in the Character of Priesthood onely, (that the Priest should be a god, that is, doe the offices and the work of God to the people, by delivering salvation unto them) but he hath also made the Prince, and the secular Magistrate, a god, that is able to doe the offices, and the works of God, not onely to ²²⁰ the people, but to the Priest himselfe, to sustaine him, yea, and to countenance, and favour, and protect him too, in the execution and exercise of his priestly office; As we see in the first plantation of those two great Cedars, The Secular, and the Ecclesiasticall Power, (which, that they might alwayes agree like brethren, God planted at first in those two brethren, Moses and Aaron) There, though Moses were the temporall, and Aaron the spirituall Magistrate, yet God sayes to Moses, I have made thee a God to Pharaoh, (but not onely to Pharaoh) but Aaron thy brother shall be thy Prophet; for, (as he had said before) Thou shalt be to him in stead of a God. So usefull, so necessary is man ²³⁰ to man, as that the Priest, who is of God, incorporated in God, subsists also by man; for, Principes hujus seculi rationem reddituri sunt, The Princes of this world must give God an account, Propter Ecclesiam, quam à Christo tuendam susceperunt, for that Church, which Christ hath committed to their protection. In spirituall difficulties, and for spirituall duties, God sends us to the Priest; but to such a Priest as is a man; and (as our comfort is expressed) A Priest which was touched with the feeling of our infirmities, and was in all points tempted like as we are: for the businesses of this world, Rights, and Titles, and Proprieties, and Possessions, God sends us still to the Judge; (Judges ²⁴⁰ and officers shalt thou make in all thy gates) Judges to try between man and man; And the sword in battaile tryes between State and State, Prince and Prince; And therefore God commands and directs the levying of men to that purpose, in many places of the history of his people; particularly God appoints Gideon to take a certaine proportion of the army, a certaine number of Souldiers. And in another place, there goes out a presse for Souldiers from Moses mouth; He presses them upon their holy allegiance to God, when he sayes, Who is on the Lords side, let him come unto me. So, in infirmities, in sicknesses of the body, we aske with the Prophet, Is there no balme in ²⁵⁰ Gilead? Is there no Physitian there? God does not reprove Asa for seeking of helpe of the Physitians; but the increpation lyes onely upon this, That he sought to the Physitian, and not to the Lord. God sends man to the Priest, to the Prince, to the Judge, to the Physitian, to the Souldier, and so, (in other places) to the Merchant, and to cunning Artificers, (as in the building of the Temple) that all that man needs might be communicated to man by man.

So that still, simply, absolutely, unconditionally, we cannot say, Surely men, men altogether, high or low, or meane, all are lesse then vanity. And surely they that pervert and detort such words as these, ²⁶⁰ to such a use, and argue from thence, Man is nothing, no more then a worme or a fly, and therefore what needs this solemne consideration of mans actions, it is all one what he does, for all his actions, and himsele too are nothing; They doe this but to justifie or excuse their own lazinesse in this world, in passing on their time, without taking any Calling, embracing any profession, contributing any thing to the spirituall edification, or temporall sustentation of other men. But take the words, as the Holy Ghost intends them, comparatively, what man compared with God, or what man considered without God, can doe any thing for others, or for himsele? When the Apostle sayes, That ²⁷⁰ all the world is but dung, when the Prophet sayes, That all the Nations of the world are lesse then nothing, when the Apostle sayes even of himsele, that he is nothing, all this is nothing in comparison of that expression in the same Apostle, That even the preaching of the Gospel is foolishnesse, That that which is the savour of life unto life, Gods owne Ordinance, Preaching, is but foolishnesse; Let it be a Paul that plants, and an Apollo that waters, if God give not increase, all is but frivolousnesse, but foolishnesse; And therefore boldly, confidently, uncontroulably we may proceed to the propositions of our Text, which constitute our second part, Man, any man, every man, all men, collectively, distributively, considered so, (comparatively with God, or privatively without God) is but a lie, but vanity, lesse then vanity.

Surely

To make our best use of the words, (as our translation exhibits them) we make our entrance, with this word of confidence, and infallibility, which onely becomes the holy Ghost, in his asseverations, and in which he establishes the propositions following; Surely, surely men of low degree, and as surely, men of high, and, surely still all men together, are lighter then vanity. Men deliver their assertions otherwise modified, and under other qualifications. They obtrude to us miraculous doctrines of Transubstantiation, and the like, upon a possibility onely; It may be done, say they, It is possible, God can doe it. But that is far from the assurednesse of the Holy Ghost, Surely it is so; for Asylum hæreticorum, est omnipotentia Dei, is excellently said, and by more then one of the Fathers, The omnipotence of God is the Sanctuary of Heretiques, Thither they fly, to countenance any such error; This God can doe, why should you not beleeeve it? Men proceed in their asseverations farther then so, from this possibility to a probability; It will abide argument, it hath been disputed in the Schoole, and therefore is probable; why should not you beleeeve it? And so they offer us the doctrine of the immaculate conception of the blessed Virgin without Originall sinne; But this probability reaches not to this assurednesse of our text, surely. They will goe farther then this probability, to a verisimilitude, it is more then meerly possible, more then fairly probable, it is likely to be so; some of the ancient Fathers have thought so; and then, why should not you beleeeve it? and so they offer us prayer for the dead. Farther then this verisimilitude they goe too; They goe to a Piè creditur, It may be piously beleeeved, and it is fit to beleeeve it, because it may assist and exalt devotion to thinke so; And then why should you not beleeeve it? And so they offer us the worship of Images and Reliques. But still, all this comes short of our assurednesse, Surely, undoubtedly, undisputably it is so.

And when the Romane Church would needs counterfeit the language of the Holy Ghost, and pronounce this surenesse upon so many new Articles in the Councell of Trent, it hath not prospered well with them; for we all know, they have repented that forwardnesse since, and wished they had not determined so many particulars to be matter of faith; because after such a determination by a Councell, they have bound themselves not to recede from those doctrines, how unmain-320 able soever they be in themselves, or how inconvenient soever they fall out to be to them. And therefore we see, that in all the solicitations that 330 can be used, even by Princes, to whom they are most affected, they will not come now to pronounce so surely, to determine so positively upon divers points that rest yet in perplexity amongst them. Which hath rased them so many commotions in the kingdome of Spaine, and put more then one of their later Kings, to send divers Ambassages to Rome, to sollicite a cleare declaration in that point, but could never, nor can yet attaine it, that is, The immaculate conception of the blessed Virgin without Originall sinne. So also, for the obligation that the lawes of secular Magistrates lay upon the Conscience, so also for the Concurrence of Grace, and Free-will, and divers others; in which they 340 will not be drawne to this, Surely, to determine and declare of either side; for, indeed that is the language of the Holy Ghost.

It hath been observed amongst Philosophers, that Plato speaks probably, and Aristotle positively; Platoes way is, It may be thus, and Aristotles, It must be thus. The like hath been noted amongst Divines, between Calvin, and Melanchton; Calvin will say, Videtur, It seemes to be thus, Melanchton, It can be no otherwise but thus. But the best men are but Problematicall, Onely the Holy Ghost is Dogmaticall; Onely he subscribes this surely, and onely he seales with Infallibility. Our dealings are appointed to be in yea, yea, and nay, nay, and no 340 farther; But all the promises of God are yea, and Amen, that is, surely, verily; for that is his Name; These things saith The Amen, He that is Amen. And it is not (I hope) an impertinent note, That that Euan-350 gelist S. Iohn, who considers the Divinity of Christ, more then the other Euangelists doe, does evermore, constantly, without any change, double that which was Christs ordinary asseveration, Amen. As oft as the other Euangelists mention it in Christs mouth, still they expresse it with one Amen, verily I say; S. Iohn alwayes, Amen, Amen, verily, verily, it is thus and thus. The nearer we come to the consideration of God, the farther we are removed from all contingencies, and all in-350 clination to Error, and the more is this Amen, verily, surely, multiplied and established unto us.

2 Cor. 1.20
 Rev. 3.14

It is in doctrines and opinions, as it is in designes and purposes; Goe to, (sayes the Prophet, by way of reprehension) Goe to, you that say, we will goe to such a City, and trade thus and thus there, &c. So, goe to, you that pronounce upon every invention, and Tradition of your own, a Quicunque vult salvus esse, Whosoever will be saved, must beleve this, and clogge every problematicall proposition with an Anathema, Cursed be he, Excommunicated he that thinks the contrary to this; Goe to, you that make matters of faith of the passions of men.

³⁶⁰ So also, goe to, you that proceed and continue in your sinnes, and say, Surely I shall have time enough to repent hereafter. Goe to, you that in a spirituall and irreligious melancholy and diffidence in Gods mercy, say, Surely the Lord hath locked up his mercy from me, surely I shall never see that Sunne more, never receive, never feele beame of his mercy more, but passe through this darknesse into a worse. This word, surely, in such cases, in such senses, is not your mothers tongue, not the language of the Christian Church. She teaches you, to condition all in Christ; In him you are enabled to doe all things, and without him nothing. But absolutely, unconditionally, this surely is appropriated to ³⁷⁰ the propositions, to the assertions of God himselfe; And some of those follow in this text.

Comparatio Divitis & Pauperis

Now that which the Holy Ghost presents here upon this assurednesse, is, That men of low degree are vanity, and that men of high degree are a lie; These are both sure, and alike sure. It is true that it constitutes a Probleme, that it admits a Discourse, it will abide a debatement, whether men of high degree, or of low degree be worst; whether riches or poverty, (both considered in a great measure, very rich, and very poore) Prosperity or Adversity occasion most sinnes. Though God call upon us in every leafe of the Scripture, to pity the ³⁸⁰ poore, and relieve the poore, and ground his last Judgement upon our works of mercy, (Because you have fed and clothed the poore, inherit the kingdome) yet, as the rich and the poore stand before us now, (as it were in Judgement) as we inquire and heare evidence, which state is most obnoxious, and open to most sinnes, we embrace, and apply to our selves that law, Thou shalt not countenance a poore man in his cause; And (as it is repeated) Thou shalt not respect the person of the poore in Iudgement.

Mat. 25.34

Levit. 19.15

There is then a poverty, which, without all question, is the direct way to heaven; but that is spirituall; Blessed are the poore in spirit.

Mat. 5.3

³⁹⁰ This poverty is humility, it is not beggary. A rich man may have it, and a beggar may be without it. The Wiseman found not this poverty, (not humility) in every poore man. He found three sorts of men, whom his soule hated; And one of the three, was a poore man that is proud. And when the Prophet said of Jerusalem in her afflictions, Paupercula es & ebria, Thou are poore, and miserable, and yet drunke, though (as he addes there) it were not with wine, (which is now, in our dayes an ordinary refuge of men of all sorts, in all sadnesses and crosses to relieve themselves upon wine and strong drinke, which are indeed strong illusions) yet, though Jerusalems drunkennesse were not with wine, it

⁴⁰⁰ was worse; It was a staggering, a vertiginousnesse, an ignorance, a blindness, a not discerning the wayes to God; which is the worst drunkennesse, and fals often upon the poore and afflicted, That their poverty and affliction staggers them, and damps them in their recourse to God, so far, as that they know not, That they are miserable, and wretched, and poore, and blinde, and naked. The Holy Ghost alwaies makes the danger of the poore great, as well as of the rich. The rich mans wealth is his strong City. There is his fault, his confidence in that; But Pavor pauperum, The destruction of the poore is his poverty; There is his fault, Desperation under it. Solomon presents them, as ⁴¹⁰ equally dangerous, Give me neither poverty, nor riches. So does Booz to Ruth, Blessed be thou of the Lord, my daughter, in as much as thou followedst not young men, whether poore, or rich. That which Booz intended there, Incontinency, and all vices that arise immediately out of the corruption of nature, and are not induced by other circumstances, have as much inclination from poverty, as from riches. May we not say, more? I doubt we may. He must be a very sanctified man, whom extreame poverty, and other afflictions, doe not decline towards a jealousie, and a suspicion, and a distrusting of God; And then, the sins that bend towards desperation, are so much more dangerous, then

Riches is the Metaphor, in which, the Holy Ghost hath delighted

Rom. 2.4

ver. 16

to expresse God and Heaven to us; Despise not the riches of his goodnesse, sayes the Apostle; And againe, O the depth of the riches of his wisdom; And so, after, The unsearchable riches of Christ; And for the consummation of all, The riches of his Glory. Gods goodnesse ⁴³⁰ towards us in generall, our Religion in the way, his Grace here, his Glory hereafter, are all represented to us in Riches. With poverty God ordinarily accompanies his comminations; he threatens feeblenesse, and warre, and captivity, and poverty every where, but he never threatens men with riches.

Ordinary poverty, (that is a difficulty, with all their labors and industry, to sustaine their family, and the necessary duties of their place) is a shrewd, and a slippery tentation. But for that street-beggery, which is become a Calling, (for Parents bring up their children to it, nay they doe almost take prentises to it, some expert beggers teach others what ⁴⁴⁰ they shall say, how they shall looke, how they shall lie, how they shall cry) for these, whom our lawes call Incorrigible, I must say of them (in a just accommodation of our Saviours words, It is not meet to take the childrens bread, and to cast it to dogs) It is not meet, that this vermin should devoure any of that, which belongs to them who are truly poore. Neither is there any measure, any proportion of riches, that exposes man naturally to so much sin, as this kinde of beggery doth. Rich men forget, or neglect the duties of their Baptisme; but of these, how many are there, that were never baptized? Rich men sleepe out Sermons, but these never come to Church: Rich men are negligent ⁴⁵⁰ in the practise, but these are ignorant in all knowledge.

It would require a longer disquisition, then I can afford to it now, whether Riches, or Poverty (considered in lesser proportions, ordinary riches, ordinary poverty) open us to more, and worse sins; But consider them in the highest and in the lowest, abundant riches, beggerly poverty, and it will scarce admit doubt, but that the incorrigible vagabond is farther from all wayes of goodnesse, then the corruptest rich man is. And therefore labour wee all earnestly in the wayes of some lawfull calling, that we may have our portion of this world by good meanes. For first, the advantages of doing good to others in a reall ⁴⁶⁰ reliefe of their wants, is in the rich onely, whereas the best way of a good poore man, to doe good to others, is but an exemplary patience, to catechize others by his suffering; And then, all degrees of poverty are dangerous and slippery, even to a murmuring against God, or an invading of the possessions, and goods of other men, but especially the lowest, the desperate degree of beggery, and then especially, when we cannot say it is inflicted by the hand of God, but contracted by our owne lazinesse, or our owne wastfulness.

This is a problematicall, a disputable case, Whether riches or poverty occasion most sins. And because on both sides there arise good doctrines of edification, I have thus far willingly stopped upon that disputable consideration. But now, that which wee receive here, upon Dauids, upon the Holy Ghosts security, Surely it is thus, It is surely so, is this, That we shall be deceived, if we put our trust in men; for, what sort of men would we trust? Surely men of low degree are vanity. And this, if it be taken of particular men, needs no proving, no illustrating, no remembring. Every man sees and acknowledges, that to rely upon a man of no power, of no place, no blood, no fortune, no friends, no favour, is a vanity, Surely men of low degree are vanity. The first younger brother that was borne in the world, because he ⁴⁷⁰ was lesse then another, is called by the very name of vanity; The eldest brother Cain signifies possession, but Abel is vanity.
⁴⁸⁰

Men of low degree

But take it of a whole body of such men, Men of low degree, and it is so too; the Applause of the people is vanity, Popularity is vanity. At how deare a rate doth that man buy the peoples affections, that payes his owne head for their hats? How cheaply doth he sell his Princes favour, that hath nothing for it, but the peoples breath? And what age doth not see some examples of so ill merchants of their owne honours and lives too? How many men, upon confidence of that flattering gale of winde, the breath and applause of the people, have taken ⁴⁹⁰ in their anchors, (that is, departed from their true, and safe hold, The right of the Law, and the favour of the Prince) and as soone as they hoysed their sailes, (that is, entred into any by-action) have found the wind in their teeth, that is, Those people whom they trusted in, armed against them. And as it is in Civill, and Secular, so it is in Ecclesiasticall, and Spirituall things too. How many men, by a popular hunting after the applause of the people, in their manner of preaching, and humouring them in their distempers, have made themselves incapable of preferment in the Church where they tooke their Orders, and preached themselves into a necessity of running away into for-

- ⁵⁰⁰ raine parts, that are receptacles of seditious and schismaticall Separatists, and have been put there, to learne some trade, and become Artificers for their sustentation? The same people that welcommed Christ, from the Mount of Olives, into Jerusalem, upon Sunday, with their Hosannaes to the Sonne of David, upon Friday mocked him in Jerusalem, with their Haile King of the Iewes, and blew him out of Jerusalem to Golgotha, with the pestilent breath, with the tempestuous whirlwind of their Crucifige's. And of them, who have called the Master Beelzebub, what shall any servant looke for? Surely men of low degree are vanity.
 High degree ⁵¹⁰ And then, under the same oath, and asseveration, Surely, as surely as the other, men of high degree are a lie. Doth David meane these men, whom he calls a lie, to be any lesse then those whom hee called vanity? Lesse then vanity, then emptinesse, then nothing, nothing can be; And low, and high are to this purpose, and in this consideration, (compared with God, or considered without God) equally nothing. He that hath the largest patrimony, and space of earth, in the earth, must heare me say, That all that was nothing; And if he ask, But what was this whole Kingdom, what all Europe, what all the World? It was all, not so much as another nothing, but all one and
- ⁵²⁰ the same nothing as thy dung-hill was. But yet the Holy Ghost hath beene pleased to vary the phrase here, and to call Men of high degree, not vanity, but a lie, because the poore, men of low degree, in their condition promise no assistance, feed not men with hopes, and therefore cannot be said to lie, but in the condition of men of high degree, who are of power, there is a tacit promise, a naturall and inherent assurance of protection, and assistance, flowing from them. For, the Magistrate cannot say, That he never promised me Justice, never promised mee Protection; for in his assuming that place, he made me that promise. I cannot say, that I never promised my Parish, my
- ⁵³⁰ service; for in my Induction, I made them that promise, and if I performe it not, I am a lie; for so this word Chasab (which we translate a lie) is frequently used in the Scriptures, for that which is defective in the duty it should performe; Thou shalt bee a spring of water, (sayes God in Esay) Cujus aquæ non mentiuntur, whose waters never lie, that is, never dry, never faile.
- Esay 58.11

So then, when men of high degree doe not performe the duties of their places, then they are a lie of their owne making; And when I

over-magnifie them in their place, flatter them, humor them, ascribe more to them, expect more from them, rely more upon them, then I 540 should, then they are a lie of my making. But whether the lie be theirs, That they feare greater men then themselves, and so prevaricate in their duties; Or the lie be mine, that canonize them and make them my God, they, and I shall be disappointed; for, Surely men of high degree are a lie. But we are upon a Sermon, not upon a Satyr, therefore we passe from this.

And, for all this, there may seeme to be roome left for the Middle-state, for a mediocrity; when it is not so low as to be made the subject of oppression, nor so high as to be made the object of ambition, when it is neither exposed to scorne and contempt, nor to envy, and under-550 mining, may we not then trust upon, not rest in such a condition? Indeed, this mediocrity seemes (and justly) the safest condition; for this, and this onely enjoyes it selfe: The lazy man gets not up to it; The stirring man stayes not at it, but is gone beyond it. From our first Themes at Schoole, to our Texts in the Pulpit, we continue our praying and perswading of this mediocrity. A man may have too much of any thing; Anima saturata, A full soule will tread hony under his feete; He may take in knowledge till he be ignorant; Let the Prophet Ieremy give the Rule, Stultus factus est omnis homo à scientia, Every man becomes a foole by knowledge, by over-weening, 560 and over-valuing his knowledge; And let Adam be the example of this Rule, His eyes were opened by eating the fruit, and he knew so much, as he was ashamed of it; Let the Apostle be the Physitian, the moderator, Sapere ad sobrietatem, not to dive into secrets, and unrevealed mysteries. There is enough of this doctrine involved in the fable, Acteon saw more then he should have seene, and perished. There is abundantly enough expressed in the Oracle of Truth, Vzza was over-zealous in an office that appertained not to him, in assisting the Arke, and suffered for that.

We may quickly exceed a mediocrity, even in the praise of Medi-570 ocrity. But all our diligence will scarce finde it out. What is mediocrity? Or where is it? In the Hierarchy of the Roman Church they never thought of this mediocrity; They go very high, and very low, but there is no meane station; I meane no denomination of any Order from meannesse, from mediocrity. In one degree you finde embroydered shooes, for Kings to kisse, and in another degree bare feet;

Mediocrity

Prov. 27.7

Ier. 10.14

Rom. 12.3

2 Sam. 6.6

we finde an Order of the Society of Iesus; and that is very high, for, Society implies community, partnership; And we finde low descents, Minorits, men lesse then others, and Minims, least of all men; and lower then all them, Nullans, men that call themselves, Nothing; And 580 truly, this Order, best of all others hath answered and justified the name, for, very soone, they came to nothing. Wee finde all extreames amongst them, even in their names, but none denominated from this mediocrity.

But to passe from names to the thing; indeed what is Mediocrity? where is it? Is it the same thing as Competency? But what is competency? or where is that? Is it that which is sufficient for thy present degree? perchance thy present degree is not sufficient for thee; Thy charge perchance, perchance thy parts and abilities, or thy birth and education may require a better degree. God produced plants in Para-590 disie therefore, that they might grow; God hath planted us in this world, that we might grow; and he that does not endeavour that by all lawfull meanes, is inexcusable, as well as he that pursues unlawfull. But, if I come to imagine such a mediocrity, such a competency, such a sufficiency in my selfe, as that I may rest in that, that I thinke I may ride out all stormes, all dis-favours, that I have enough of mine owne, wealth, health, or morall constancy, if any of these decay, this is a verier vanity, then trusting in men of low degree, and a verier lye, then men of high degree; for, this is to trust to our selves; this is a Habbak. sacrificing to our owne nets, our owne industry, our owne wisdom, 1.16 600 our owne fortune; And of all the Idolatries of the Heathen, who made Gods of every thing they saw or imagined, of every thing, in, and betweene Heaven and hell, we reade of no man that sacrificed to himselfe. Indeed no man flatters me so dangerously, as I flatter my selfe, no man wounds me so desperately, as I wound myselfe; And therefore, since this which we call Mediocrity, and Competency is conditioned so, that it is enough to subsist alone, without relation to others, dependency upon others, feare from others, induces a confidence, a relying upon my selfe; As, that which we imagine to be the middle region of the ayre, is the coldest of all, So this imagined mediocrity, 610 that induces a confidence in our selves, is the weakest rest, the coldest comfort of all, and makes me a lye to my selfe. Therefore may the Prophet well spread, and safely extend his asseveration, his Surely, upon all, high, and low, and meane; Surely to be laid in the balance, they are altogether lighter then vanity.

Here then, upon a full enumeration of all parts, the Prophet concludes upon all. If therefore thou have the favour of great ones, the applause of the people, confidence in thy selfe, in an instant, the power of those great ones may be overthrowne, or their favour to thee withdrawn from thee, (and so, that bladder is pricked, upon which thou⁶²⁰ swommest) The applause of the people may be hushed and silenced, (either they would not, or they dare not magnifie thee) And, thine owne constancy may be turned into a dejection of spirit, and consternation of all thy faculties. Put all together, (which fals out seldome, that any man can do so) but if he can do that, (which is the best state of man, that can be imagined in this world, that he hath all these together, the favour of High and low, and of himselfe, that is, his owne testimony in his conscience, (though perchance an erring, a mistaking conscience) yet, the Prophet had delivered the same assurance before (even of that state of man, which is rather imagined,⁶³⁰ then ever possessest) Surely every man, at his best state, is altogether vanity; And here, he adds, lighter then vanity. Vanity is nothing, but there is a condition worse then nothing. Confidence in the things, or persons of this world, but most of all, a confidence in our selves, will bring us at last to that state, wherein we would faine be nothing, and cannot. But yet, we have a balance in our text; And all these are but put together in one balance. In the other scale there is something put to, in comparison whereof all this world is so light. God does not leave our great and noble faculty, and affection of hope, and trust, and confidence, without something to direct it selfe upon, and rectifie it⁶⁴⁰ selfe in. He does not; for, for that he proposes himselfe; The words immediately before the text, are, God is a refuge; and in comparison of him, To be laid in the balance, Surely they are altogether lighter then vanity.

So then, it is not enough not to trust in the flesh (for, for that, Cursed be man, that trusted in man, or maketh flesh his arme; Their flesh cannot secure thee, neither is thine owne flesh brasse, that thou canst endure the vexations of this world, neither can flesh and blood reveale unto thee the things of the next world) It is not enough not to trust in flesh, but thou must trust in that that is Spirit. And when thou⁶⁵⁰ art to direct thy trust upon him, who is spirit, the spirit of power, and of consolation, stop not, stray not, divert not upon evill spirits, to seeke advancement, or to seeke knowledge from them, nor upon good spirits, the glorious saints of GOD in Heaven, to seeke salvation from them, nor upon thine owne spirit, in an over-valuation of thy purity, or thy merits. For, there is a pestilent pride in an imaginary humility, and an infectious foulennesse in an imaginary purity; but turne onely to the onely invisible and immortall God, who turnes to thee, in so many names and notions of power, and consolation, in this one Psalme. In the last verse but one of this Psalme, David sayes, ⁶⁶⁰ God hath spoken once, and twice have I heard him. God hath said enough at once; but twice, in this Psalme, hath he repeated this, in the second, and in the sixt verse, He onely is my Rocke, and my Salvation, and my Defence, And, (as it is enlarged in the seventh verse) my Refuge, and my Glory. If my Refuge, what enemy can pursue me? If my Defence, what tentation shall wound me? If my Rock, what storme shall shake me? If my Salvation, what melancholy shall deject me? If my Glory, what calumny shall defame me?

I must not stay you now, to infuse into you, the severall consolations of these severall names, and notions of God towards you. But, goe ⁶⁷⁰ your severall wayes home, and every soule take with him that name, which may minister most comfort unto him. Let him that is pursued with any particular tentation, invest God, as God is a Refuge, a Sanctuary. Let him that is buffeted with the messenger of Satan, battered with his owne concupiscence, receive God, as God is his Defence and target. Let him that is shaken with perplexities in his understanding, or scruples in his conscience, lay hold upon God, as God is his Rock, and his anchor. Let him that hath any diffident jealousie or suspition of the free and full mercy of God, apprehend God, as God is his Salvation; And him that walks in the ingloriousnesse and contempt

⁶⁸⁰ of this world, contemplate God, as God is his Glory. Any of these notions is enough to any man, but God is all these, and all else, that all soules can thinke, to every man. Wee shut up both these Considerations, (man should not, (that is not all) God should be relied upon) with that of the Prophet, Trust ye not in a friend, put not your confidence in a guide, keepe the doores of thy mouth from her that lies in thy bosome; (there is the exclusion of trust in man) and then he adds in the seventh verse, because it stands thus betweene man and man, I will looke unto the Lord, I will looke to the God of my Salvation, my God will heare me.

JOHN 16.8, 9, 10, 11. AND WHEN HE IS COME, HE WILL REPROVE THE WORLD OF SIN, AND OF RIGHTEOUSNESSE, AND OF JUDGEMENT. / OF SIN, BECAUSE YE BELEEVE NOT ON ME. / OF RIGHTEOUSNESSE, BECAUSE I GOE TO MY FATHER, AND YE SEE ME NO MORE. / OF JUDGEMENT, BECAUSE THE PRINCE OF THIS WORLD IS JUDGED.

OUR Panis quotidianus, Our daily bread, is that Iuge sacrificium, That daily sacrifice of meditating upon God; Our Panis hodiernus, This dayes bread, is to meditate upon the holy Ghost. To day if ye will heare his voice, to day ye are with him in Paradise; For, wheresoever the holy Ghost is, he creates a Paradise. The day is not past yet; As our Saviour said to Peter, Hodie, in nocte hac, This day, even in this night thou shalt deny me, so, Hodie in nocte hac, Even now, though evening, the day-spring from on high visits you, God carries back the shadow of your Sun-dyall, as to Hezechias; And now God brings you to the beginning of this day, if now you take knowledge, that he is come, who, when he comes, Reproves the world of sin, &c.

Essay 38.8

The solemnity of the day requires, and the method of the words offers for our first consideration, the Person; who is not named in our text, but designed by a most emphaticall denotation, Ille, He, He who is all, and doth all. But the word hath relation to a name, proper to the holy Ghost: for, in the verse immediatly preceding, our Saviour tels his disciples, That he will send them the Comforter. So, forbear-

Divisio

ing all other mysterious considerations of the holy Ghost, we receive ²⁰ him in that notion, and function in which Christ sends him, The Comforter. And therefore, in this capacity, as The Comforter, we must consider his action, Arguet, He shall reprove; Reprove, and yet Comfort; nay, therefore comfort, because reprove: And then the subject of his action, Mundum, The world, the whole world; no part left unreprieved, yet no part left without comfort: And after that, what he reproves the world of; That multiplies; Of sin, of righteousness, of judgement. Can there be comfort in reproofe for sin? Or can there lie a reproofe upon righteousness, or upon judgement? Very justly; Though the evidence seem at first, as strange as the crime; for, though ³⁰ that be good evidence against the sin of the world, That they beleeve not in Christ, (Of sin, because ye beleeve not on me) yet to be Reproved of righteousness, because Christ goes to his Father, and they see him no more, And to be Reproved of judgement, because the Prince of this world is judged, this seemes strange, and yet this must be done, and done to our comfort; For, this must be done, Cum venerit, Then when the holy Ghost, and he in that function, as the Comforter, is come, is present, is working.

Beloved, Reproofes upon others without charity, rather to defame them, then amend them, Reproofes upon thy selfe, without shewing ⁴⁰ mercy to thine own soule, diffidences, and jealousies, and suspicions of God, either that he hated thee before thy sin, or hates thee irremediably, irreconciliably, irreparably for thy sin, These are Reproofes, but they are Absente spiritu, In the absence of the holy Ghost, before he comes, or when he is gone; When he comes, and stayes, He shall reprove, and reprove all the world, and all the world of those errours, sin, and righteousness, and judgement, and those errours upon those evidences, Of sin, because ye beleeve not on me, &c. But, in all this proceeding he shall never deuest the nature of a Comforter; In that capacity he is sent, in that he comes, and works. I doubt I shall see an ⁵⁰ end of my houre, and your patience, before I shall have passed those branches, which appertaine most properly to the celebration of this day, the Person, the Comforter, his action, Reproofe, the subject thereof, the world, and the Time, Cum venerit, When he comes. The inditement, of what the accusation is, and the evidence, how it is proved, may exercise your devotion at other times. This day, the holy Ghost is said to have come suddenly, and therefore in that pace we proceed, and make haste to the consideration of the Person, Ille, When he, He the holy Ghost, the Comforter, is come.

Ille, Ille alone, He, is an emphaticall denotation; for to this purpose ⁶⁰ Ille and Ipse is all one; And then, you know the Emphasis of that Ipse; Ipse conteret, He or It shall bruise the Serpents head, denotes the Messias, though there be no Messias named: This Ipse is so emphaticall a denotation, as that the Church of Rome, and the Church of God strive for it; for they will needs reade it Ipsa, and so refer our salvation, in the bruising of the Serpents head, to the Virgin Mary; we refer it according to the truth of the doctrine, and of the letter, to Christ himselfe, and therefore reade it Ipse, He. If there were no more but that in David, It is He that hath made us, every man would conclude, that that He is God. And if S. Paul had said Ipse alone, and not Ipse ⁷⁰ spiritus, That He, and not He the Spirit beares witnesse with our spirit, every spirit would have understood this to be the holy Spirit, the holy Ghost. If in our text there had been no more, but such a denotation of a person that should speak to the hearts of all the world, that that Ille, that He would proceed thus, we must necessarily have seen an Almighty power in that denotation; But because that denotation might have carried terrour in it, being taken alone, therefore we are not left to that, but have a relation to a former name, and specification of the holy Ghost, The Comforter.

For the establishment of Christs divinity, Christ is called The mighty ⁸⁰ God; for his relation to us, he hath divers names. As we were all In massa damnata, Forfeited, lost, he is Redemptor, A Redeemer, for that that is past, The Redeemer shall come to Sion, sayes the Prophet, and so Iob saw His Redeemer, one that should redeem him from those miseries that oppressed him. As Christ was pleased to provide for the future, so he is, Salvator, A Saviour, Therefore the Angel gave him that name Iesus, For he shall save his people from their sins. So, because to this purpose Christ consists of two natures, God and man, he is called our Mediator, There is one Mediator between God and man, the man Christ Iesus. Because he presents those merits which are his, as ours, ⁹⁰ and in our behalfe, he is called an Advocate, If any man sin, we have an Advocate with the Father, Iesus Christ the righteous. And because every man is to expect according to his actions, he is called the Judge,

We testifie that it is he, that is ordained of God to bee the Iudge of quick and dead. Now, for Christs first name, which is the roote of all, which is, The mighty God, No man can say that Iesus is the Lord, but by the holy Ghost; And there is our first comfort, in knowing that Christ is God; for, he were an Intruder for that which is past, no Redeemer, he were a weak Saviour for the future, an insufficient Mediator, a silenced Advocate, and a Judge that might be misinformed, ¹⁰⁰ if he were not God. And though he were God, he might be all these to my discomfort, if there were not a holy Ghost to make all these offices comfortable unto me. To be a Redeemer and not a Saviour, is but to pay my debts, and leave me nothing to live on. To be a Mediator, a person capable by his composition of two natures, to intercede between God and man, and not to be my Advocate, is but to be a good Counsellor, but not of counsell with me; To be a Judge of quick and dead, and to proceed out of outward evidence, and not out of his bosome mercy, is but an acceleration of my conviction; I were better lie in Prison still, then appeare at that Assize; better lye in the dust of ¹¹⁰ the grave for ever, then come to that judgement. But, as there is Mens in anima, There is a minde in the soule, and every man hath a soule, but every man hath not a minde, that is, a Consideration, an Actuation, an Application of the faculties of the soule to particulars; so there is Spiritus in Spiritu, a Holy Ghost in all the holy offices of Christ, which offices, being, in a great part, directed upon the whole world, are made comfortable to me, by being, by this holy Spirit, turned upon me, and appropriated to me; for so, even that name of Christ, which might most make me afraid, The name of Judge, becomes a comfort to me.

Basil.

To this purpose does S. Basil call the holy Ghost, Verbum Dei, quia interpretis filii: The Son of God is the word of God, because he manifests the Father, and the Holy Ghost is the word of God, because he applies the Son. Christ comes with that loud Proclamation, Ecce auditum fecit, Behold the Lord hath proclaimed it, to the end of the world, Ecce Salvator, and Ecce Merces, Behold his Salvation, Behold thy Reward, (This is his publication in the manifest Ordinances of the Church) And then the Holy Ghost whispers to thy soule, as thou standest in the ¹³⁰ he gave power to become the Sons of God, The Holy Ghost comes to tell thee, that thou art one of them. The Holy Ghost is therefore Legatus, and Legatum Christi, He is Christs Ambassadour sent unto us, and he is his Legacy bequeathed unto us by his Will; his Will made of force by his death, and proved by his Ascension.

Now, when those dayes were come, that the Bridegroom was to be taken from them, Christ Jesus to be removed from their personall sight, and conversation, and therefore even the children of the mariage Chamber were to mourne, and fast; when that Church that mourned, and lamented his absence, when she was but his Spouse, must necessarily mourn now in a more vehement manner, when she was to be, ¹⁴⁰ (in some sense) his Widow; when that Shepherd was not onely to be smitten, and so the flock dispersed, (this was done in his passion) but he was to be taken away, in his Ascension; what a powerfull Comforter had that need to be, that should be able to recompence the absence of Christ Jesus himselfe, and to infuse comfort into his Orphans, the children of his mariage Chamber, into his Widow, the desolate, and disconsolate Church, into his flock, his amazed, his distressed, and, (as we may, properly enough, say in this case) his beheaded Apostles and Disciples? Quantus ergo Deus, qui dat Deum? Lesse then God ¹⁵⁰ could not minister this comfort; How great a God is he, that sends a God to comfort us? and how powerfull a Comforter hee, who is not onely sent by God, but is God? Therefore does the Apostle enlarge, and dilate, and delight his soule upon this comfort, Blessed be God, even the Father of our Lord Iesus Christ, the Father of mercies, and the God of all comfort, who comforteth us in all our tribulations, that we may be able to comfort them which are in any affliction, by that comfort, wherewith our selves are comforted of God. The Apostle was loath to depart from the word, Comfort; And therefore, as God, because he could sweare by no greater, sware by himselfe, So, because ¹⁶⁰ there is no stronger adjuration, then the comfort it selfe, to move you to accept this comfort, as the Apostle did, so we intreat you by that, If there be any consolation in Christ, if any comfort of love, if any fellowship of the Spirit, if any bowels, and mercie, Lay hold upon this true comfort, the comming of the Holy Ghost, and say to all the deceitfull comforts of this world, not onely Vanè consolati estis, Your comforts are frivolous, but Onerosi consolatores, Your comforts are burden-

- some; there is not onely a disappointing of hopes, but an aggravating of sin, in entertaining the comforts of this world. As Barnabas, that is, Filius consolationis, The son of consolation, that he might bee capable

- Esay 66.11 ¹⁷⁰ sons, Suck and be satisfied, at the breasts of this consolation, that you may milke out, and be delighted with the abundance of his glory; And as one whom his mother comforteth, so will I comfort you, and you shall be comforted in Ierusalem. Heaven is Glory, and heaven is Joy; we cannot tell which most; we cannot separate them; and this comfort is joy in the Holy Ghost. This makes all Iobs states alike; as rich in the first Chapter of his Booke, where all is suddenly lost, as in the last, where all is abundantly restored. This Consolation from the Holy Ghost makes my mid-night noone, mine Executioner a Physitian, a
- Ver. 13 ¹⁸⁰ stake and pile of Fagots, a Bone-fire of triumph; this consolation makes a Satyr, and Slander, and Libell against me, a Panegyrique, and an Elogy in my praise; It makes a Tolle an Ave, a Væ an Euge, a Crucifige an Hosanna; It makes my death-bed, a mariage-bed, And my Passing-Bell, an Epithalamion. In this notion therefore we receive this Person, and in this notion we consider his proceeding, Ille, He, He the Comforter, shall reprove.
- Arguet* This word, that is here translated To reprove, Arguere, hath a double use and signification in the Scriptures. First to reprehend, to rebuke, to correct, with Authority, with Severity; So David, Ne in furore
- Psal. 6.1 ¹⁹⁰ arguas me, O Lord rebuke me not in thine anger: And secondly, to convince, to prove, to make a thing evident, by undeniable inferences, and necessary consequences; So, in the instructions of Gods Ministers, the first is To reprove, and then To rebuke; So that reproving is an act of a milder sense, then rebuking is. S. Augustine interprets these words twice in his Works; and in the first place he follows the first signification of the word, That the Holy Ghost should proceed, when he came, by power, by severity against the world. But though that sense will stand well with the first act of this Reproove, (That he shall Reprove, that is, reprehend the world of sin) yet it will not seeme so properly
- 2 Tim. 4.2 ²⁰⁰ said, To reprehend the world of Righteousnesse, or of Judgement; for how is Righteousnesse, and Judgement the subject of reprehension? Therefore S. Augustine himselfe in the other place, where he handles these words, imbraces the second sense, Hoc est arguere mundum, ostendere vera esse, quæ non credidit; This is to reprove the world, to convince the world of her errours, and mistakings; And so (scarce any excepted) doe all the Ancient Expositors take it, according to that, All things are reprov'd of the light, and so made manifest; The light does not reprehend them, not rebuke them, not chide, not upbraid them; but to declare them, to manifest them, to make the world see clearly ²¹⁰ what they are, this is to reprove.

Ephes. 5.13

Elenchus

That reprov'g then, which is warrantable by the Holy Ghost, is not a sharp increpation, a bitter proceeding, proceeding onely out of power, and authority, but by inlightning, and informing, and convincing the understanding. The signification of this word, which the Holy Ghost uses here for reproofe, Elenchos, is best deduced, and manifested to us, by the Philosopher who had so much use of the word, who expresses it thus, Elenchus est Syllogismus contra contraria opinantem; A reproofe, is a proofe, a proofe by way of argument, against another man, who holds a contrary opinion. All the pieces must be laid together:
²²⁰ For, first it must be against an opinion, and then an opinion contrary to truth, and then such an opinion held, insisted upon, maintained, and after all this, the reproofe must lie in argument, not in force, not in violence.

Opinio

First it must come so farre, as to be an opinion; which is a middle station, betweene ignorance, and knowledge; for knowledge excludes all doubting, all hesitation; opinion does not so; but opinion excludes indifferency, and equanimity; I am rather inclined to one side then another, when I am of either opinion. Id opinatur quisque quod nescit: A man may have an opinion that a thing is so, and yet not know it. S.

Lactant.

²³⁰ Bernard proposes three wayes for our apprehending Divine things; first, understanding, which relies upon reason; faith, which relies upon supreme Authority; and opinion, which relies upon probability, and verisimilitude. Now there may arise in some man, some mistakings, some mis-apprehensions of the sense of a place of Scripture, there may arise some scruple in a case of conscience, there may arise some inclinations to some person, of whose integrity and ability I have otherwise had experience, there may arise some Paradoxically imaginations in my selfe, and yet these never attaine to the settlednesse of an opinion, but they float in the fancy, and are but waking dreames; and such im-²⁴⁰ aginations, and fancies, and dreames, receive too much honour in the

things, and too much favour in the persons, if they be reproved, or questioned, or condemned, or disputed against. For, often times, even a condemnation nourishes the pride of the author of an opinion; and besides, begets a dangerous compassion, in spectators and hearers; and then, from pitying his pressures and sufferings, who is condemned, men come out of that pity, to excuse his opinions; and from excusing them, to incline towards them; And so that which was but straw at first, by being thus blown by vehement disputation, sets fire upon timber, and drawes men of more learning and authority to side, and 250 mingle themselves in these impertinencies. Every fancy should not be so much as reproved, disputed against, or called in question.

Contra

As it must not be only a fancy, an imagination, but an opinion, (in which, though there be not a Certò, yet there is a Potiùs, Though I be not sure, yet I doe rather thinke it) so we consider Contraria opinan- tem, That it must be an opinion contrary to something that we are sure of; that is, to some received article, or to some evident religious duty; contrary to religion, as religion is matter of faith, or as religion is matter of obedience, to lawfull Authority. Though fancies grow to be opinions, that men come to thinke they have reasons for their opinions, 260 and to know they have other men on their side, in those opinions; yet, as long as these are but opinions of a little too much, or a little too little, in matter of Ceremony and Circumstance, as long as they are but deflectings, and deviations upon collaterall matters, no foundation shaken, no corner-stone displaced, as long as they are but preteritions, not contradictions, but omissions, not usurpations, they are not worthy of a reproofe, of a conviction, and there may be more danger then profit in bringing them into an over-vehement agitation. Those men whose end is schisme, and sedition, and distraction, are brought so neare their owne ends, and the accomplishment of their owne desires, 270 if they can draw other men together by the eares: As some have all they desire, if they can make other men drunke, so have these if they can make sober men wrangle.

Tenenda

They must be Opinions, not fancies, and they must have a contrariety, an opposition to certaine truths, and then they must be held, persisted in, before it be fit to give a reproofe, either by calling in question, or by confutation. As some men are said to have told a lye so often, as that at last, they beleeve it themselves, so a man admits sometimes an opinion to lodge so long, as that Transit in intellectum, It fastens upon his understanding, and that that he did but think be-²⁸⁰ fore, now he seems to himself to know it, and he beleeves it. And then, Fides si habet hæitationem, infirma est, As that faith that admits a scruple is weake, and so, without scruple he comes peremptorily to beleeve it. But so, Opinio si habet assertionem, temeraria est, When that which is but an opinion comes to be published and avowed for a certaine, and a necessary truth, then it becomes dangerous; And that growes apace; for scarcely does any man beleeve an opinion to be true, but he hath a certaine appetite and itch to infuse it into others too.

Bernard.

Idem

Syllogismus

Now when these pieces meet, when these atomes make up a body, a body of Error, that it come to an Opinion, a halfe-assurance, and that ²⁹⁰ in some thing contrary to foundations, and that it be held stiffely, publicly persisted in, then enters this reproofe; but yet even then reproofe is but Syllogismus, it is but an argument, it is but convincing, it is not destroying; it is not an Inquisition, a prison, a sword, an axe, a halter, a fire; It is a syllogisme, not a syllogisme, whose major is this, Others, your Ancestors beleaved it, and the minor this, We that are your Superiours beleeve it, Ergo you must, or else be banisht or burnt. With such syllogismes the Ariens abounded, where they prevailed in the Primitive Church, and this is the Logique of the Inquisition of Rome. But our syllogisme must be a syllogisme within our Authors ³⁰⁰ definition, when out of some things which are agreed on all sides, other things that are controverted, are made evident and manifest. Hell is presented to us by fire, but fire without light: Heaven by light, and light without any ill effect of fire in it. Where there is nothing but an Accuser, (perchance not that) and fire, citation and excommunication, here is Satan, (who is an Accuser, but an invisible one) and here is Hell it selfe, a devilish and a darke proceeding. But when they, to whom this reproofe belongs, take Christs way, not to tread out smoaking flaxe, that a poore soule, mis-led by ignorant zeale, and so easily combustible and apt to take fire, be not troden downe with too much ³¹⁰ power, and passion, when they doe not breake a bruised reed, that is, not terrifie a distracted conscience, which perchance a long ill conversation with schismaticall company, and a spirituall melancholy, and over-tender sense of sin hath cast too low before, then does this reproofe worke aright, when it is brought in with light before fire, with convenient instruction, and not hasty condemnation.

- We may well call this Viam Christi, and Viam Spiritus sancti, Christs way, and the Holy Ghosts way, for he had need be a very good Christian, and a very sanctified man, that can walke in that way; Perfectorum est, nihil in peccatore odisse præter peccata: He that hates

- Voluntas perversa* ³⁵⁰ But now beloved, all that we have said, or can be said to this purpose, conduces but to this, That though this reproof, which the Holy Ghost leads us to, be rather in convincing the understanding by argument, and other perswasions then by extending our power to the destruction of the person, yet this hath a modification, how it must be, and a determination where it must end, for, there are cases in which we may, we must go farther. For, for the understanding, we know how to worke upon that; we know what arguments have prevayled upon us, with what arguments we have prevailed upon others, and those we can use: so far, Vt nihil habeant contra, & si non assentiantur, That though ³⁶⁰ they will not be of our minde, yet they shall have nothing to say against it. So far we can go upon that faculty, the understanding. But the will of man is so irregular, so unlimited a thing, as that no man hath a bridle upon anothers will, no man can undertake nor promise for that; no Creature hath that faculty but man, yet no man understands that faculty. It hath beene the exercise of a thousand wits, it hath beene the subject, yea the knot and perplexity of a thousand disputations, to find out, what it is that determines, that concludes the will of man so, as that it assents thereunto. For, if that were absolutely true which some have said, (and yet perchance that is as far as any ³⁷⁰ have gone) that Vltimus actus intellectus est voluntas, That the last act of the Understanding is the Will, then all our labour were still to worke upon the Understanding, and when that were rectified, the Will must follow. But it is not so; As we feele in our selves that we doe many sins, which our understanding, and the soule of our understanding, our conscience, tels us we should not doe, so we see many others persist in errors, after manifest convincing, after all reproofe which can be directed upon the understanding.

When therefore those errors which are to be reprov'd, are in that faculty, which is not subject to this reproofe by argument, in a per-³⁸⁰ verted will, because this wilfull stubbornnesse is alwaies accompanied with pride, with singularity, with faction, with schisme, with sedition, we must remember the way which the Holy Ghost hath directed us in, If the iron be blunt, we must either put to more strength, or whet the edge. Now, when the fault is in the perversenesse of the will, we can put to no more strength, no argument serves to overcome that; And therefore the holy Ghost hath admitted another way, To whet the iron; And in that way does the Apostle say, Vtinam abscindantur, I would they were even cut off which trouble you. There is an incorrigibility, in which, when the reproofe cannot lead the will, it must

³⁹⁰ draw blood; which is, where pretences of Religion are made, and Treasons, and Rebellions, and Invasions, and Massacres of people, and Assasins of Princes practised. And this is a reproofe (which, as we shall see of the rest, in the following branches is) from the Holy Ghost, in his function in this text, as he is a Comforter; This therefore is our comfort, That our Church was never negligent in reprovng the Adversary, but hath from time to time strenuously and confidently maintained her truths against all oppositions, to the satisfying of any understanding, though not to the reducing of some perverse wils. So Gregory de Valentia professes of our arguments, I confesse these reasons would ⁴⁰⁰ conclude my understanding, Nisi didicissem captivare intellectum meum ad intellectum Ecclesiæ, But that I have learnt to captivate my understanding to the understanding of the Church, and, say what they will, to beleve as the Church of Rome beleeves; which is Maldonats profession too, upon divers of Calvins arguments, This argument would prevaile upon me, but that he was an Heretique that found it. So that here is our comfort, we have gone so far in this way of Reproofe. Vt nihil habeant contra, etsi nobiscum non sentiant. This is our comfort, that as some of the greatest Divines in forraigne parts, so also, in our Church at home, some of the greatest Prelates, who have beene tra-⁴¹⁰ duced to favour Rome, have written the most solidly and effectually against the heresies of Rome of any other. But it must be a comfort upon them that are reprov'd. And this is their comfort, that the State never drew drop of blood for Religion; But then, this is our comfort still, that where their perversnesse shall endanger either Church or State, both the State and Church may, by the holy Ghosts direction, and will return to those means which God allows them for their preservation, that is, To whet the edge of the Iron, in execution of the laws. And so we passe from our second consideration, The Action, Reproofe, to the subject of Reproofe, The world, He shall reprove the world.

Mundus ⁴²⁰ It is no wonder that this word Mundus should have a larger signification then other words, for it containes all, embraces, comprehends all: But there is no word in Scripture, that hath not only not so large, but so diverse a signification, for it signifies things contrary to one another. It signifies commonly, and primarily, the whole frame of the world; and more particularly all mankind; and oftentimes only wicked men; and sometimes only good men, As Dilexit mundum,

God loved the world, And Hic est verè salvator mundi, This is the Christ, the Saviour of the world; And Reconciliatio mundi, The casting away of the Iews, is the reconciliation of the world: The Jews were ⁴³⁰ a part of the world, but not of this world. Now in every sense, the world may well be said to bee subject to the reproofe of God, as reproof is a rebuke: for He rebuked the winde, and it was quiet; And, He rebuked the red Sea, and it was dryed up; He rebuked the earth bitterly in that Maledicta terra, for Adams punishment, Cursed be the ground for thy sake; And for the noblest part of earth, man, and the noblest part of men, Kings, He rebuked even Kings for their sakes, and said, Touch not mine anointed. But this is not the rebuke of our Text; for ours is a rebuke of comfort, even to them that are rebuked; Whereas the angry rebuke of God carries heavy effects with it. In- ⁴⁴⁰ crepat, & fugiunt, God shall rebuke them, and they shall flie far off; He shall chide them out of his presence, and they shall never return to it. Increpasti superbos, & maledicti isti: Thou hast rebuked the proud, and thy rebuke hath wrought upon them as a malediction, not physick, but poyson; As it is in another Psalm, Increpasti, & periit, Thou hast rebuked them, and they perished. In these cases, there is a working of the holy Ghost; and that, as the holy Ghost is a Comforter; for it is a comfort to them, for whose deliverances God executes these judgements upon others, that they are executed; but we consider a rebuke, a reproofe that ministers comfort even to them upon whom it fals; and ⁴⁵⁰ so in that sense, we shall see that this Comforter reproves the world, in all those significations of the word which wee named before.

As the world is the whole frame of the world, God hath put into it a reproofe, a rebuke, lest it should seem eternall, which is, a sensible decay and age in the whole frame of the world, and every piece thereof. The seasons of the yeare irregular and distempered; the Sun fainter, and languishing; men lesse in stature, and shorter-lived. No addition, but only every yeare, new sorts, new species of wormes, and flies, and sicknesses, which argue more and more putrefaction of which they are engendred. And the Angels of heaven, which did so familiarly ⁴⁶⁰ converse with men in the beginning of the world, though they may not be doubted to perform to us still their ministeriall assistances, yet they seem so far to have deserted this world, as that they do not appeare to us, as they did to those our Fathers. S. Cyprian observed this in his time, when writing to Demetrianus, who imputed all those calamities which afflicted the world then, to the impiety of the Christians who would not joyne with them in the worship of their gods, Cyprian went no farther for the cause of these calamities, but Ad senescentem mundum, To the age and impotency of the whole world; And therefore, sayes he, Imputent senes Christianis, quòd minùs valeant in ⁴⁷⁰ senectutum; Old men were best accuse Christians, that they are more sickly in their age, then they were in their youth; Is the fault in our religion, or in their decay? Canos in pueris videmus, nec ætas in senectute desinit, sed incipit à senectute; We see gray haire in children, and we do not die old, and yet we are borne old. Lest the world (as the world signifies the whole frame of the world) should glorifie it selfe, or flatter, and abuse us with an opinion of eternity, we may admit usefully (though we do not conclude peremptorily) this observation to be true, that there is a reproofe, a rebuke born in it, a sensible decay and mortality of the whole world.

- Consolatio* ⁴⁸⁰ But is this a reproofe agreeable to our Text? A reproofe that carries comfort with it? Comfort to the world it selfe, that it is not eternall?
- Rom. 8.19 Truly it is; As S. Paul hath most pathetically expressed it; The creature (that is, the world) is in an earnest expectation, The creature waiteth, The whole creation groaneth, and travelleth in pain. Therefore the creature (that is, the world) receives a perfect comfort, in being delivered at last, and an inchoative comfort, in knowing now, that it shall be delivered; From what? From subjection to vanity, from the bondage of corruption; That whereas the world is now subject to mutability and corruption, at the Resurrection it shall no longer be so, but in that
- Ver. 20. and 21 measure, and in that degree which it is capable of, It shall enter into the glorious liberty of the children of God, that is, be as free from corruption, or change in that state, wherein it shall be glorified, as the
- Ver. 21 ⁴⁹⁰ Saints shall be in the glory of their state; for, The light of the Moon shall be as the light of the Sun, and the light of the Sun shall be sevenfold; And there shall be new heavens, and new earth; Which is a state, that this world could not attaine to, if it were eternally to last, in that condition, in which it is now, a condition subject to vanity, impotency, corruption, and therefore there is a comfort in this reproofe, even to
- Essay 30.26 this world, That it is not eternall; This world is the happier for that.
- 2 Pet. 3.13 ⁵⁰⁰ As the world, in a second sense, signifies all the men of the world,
- Mundus, homines*

(so it is, Wo unto the world, because of offences) There is a reproofe born in every man; which reproofe is an uncontrollable sense, and an irresistible remorse, and chiding of himselfe inwardly, when he is about to sin, and a horroure of the Majesty of God, whom, when he is alone, he is forced (and forced by himselfe) to feare, and to beleeve, though he would fain make the world beleeve, that he did not beleeve in God, but lived at peace, and subsisted of himselfe, without being beholding to God. For, as in nature, heavy things will ascend, and light descend rather then admit a vacuity, so in religion, the devill will ⁵¹⁰ get into Gods roome, rather then the heart of man shall be without the opinion of God; There is no Atheist; They that oppose the true, do yet worship a false god; and hee that sayes there is no God, doth for all that, set up some God to himselfe. Every man hath this reproofe borne in him, that he doth ill, that he offends a God, that he breaks a law when he sins. And this reproofe is a reproofe within our Text, for it hath this comfort with it, That howsoever some men labour to overcome the naturall tendernesse of the conscience, and so triumph over their own ruine, and rejoyce when they can sleep, and wake again without any noise in their conscience, or sense of sin, yet, in truth this ⁵²⁰ candle cannot be blowne out, this remorse cannot be overcome; But were it not a greater comfort to me if I could overcome it? No. For though this remorse (which is but a naturall impression, and common to all men) be not grace, yet this remorse, which is the naturall reproofe of the soule, is that, that grace works upon. Grace doth not ordinarily work upon the stifnesse of the soule, upon the silence, upon the forwardnesse, upon the aversnesse of the soule, but when the soule is soupled and mellowed, and feels this reproofe, this remorse in it self, that reproofe, that remorse becomes as the matter, and grace enters as the form, that becomes the body, and grace becomes the soule; and that ⁵³⁰ is the comfort of this naturall reproofe of the world, that is, of every man: First, that it will not be quenched in it selfe, and then, that ordinarily it induces a nobler light then it selfe, which is effectuell and true Repentance.

Consolatio

*Mundus,

Heb. 11.7
2 Pet. 2.5

As the world, in a third sense, signifies only the wicked world (so it is, Noah in preparing an Ark, condemned the world; And so, God spared not the old world) That world, the world of the wicked suffer many reproofes, many rebukes in their hearts, which they will not discover, because they envy God that glory. We reade of divers great actors in the first persecutions of the Christians, who being fearefully ⁵⁴⁰ tormented in body and soule, at their deaths, took care only, that the Christians might not know what they suffered, lest they should receive comfort, and their God glory therein. Certainly Herod would have been more affected, if he had thought that we should have knowne how his pride was punished with those sudden wormes, then with the punishment it selfe. This is a self-reprooffe; even in this, though he will not suffer it to break out to the edification of others, there is some kinde of chiding himself for some thing mis-done. But Acts 12.23 is there any comfort in this reprooffe? Truly, beloved, I can hardly speak comfortably of such a man, after he is dead, that dyes in such a Consolatio dis-affection, loath that God should receive glory, or his servants edification by these judgements. But even with such a man, if I assisted at his death-bed, I would proceed with a hope to infuse comfort, even from that dis-affection of his: As long as I saw him in any acknowledgement (though a negligent, nay though a malignant, a despitefull acknowledgement) of God, as long as I found him loath that God should receive glory, even from that loathnesse, from that reprooffe, from that acknowledgement, That there is a God to whom glory is due, I would hope to draw him to glorifie that God before his last gasp; My zeale should last as long as his wives officiousnesse, or his ⁵⁵⁰ childrens, or friends, or servants obsequiousnesse, or the solicitude of his Physitians should; as long as there were breath, they would minister some help; as long as there were any sense of God, I would hope to do some good. And so much comfort may arise even out of this reprooffe of the world, as the world is only the wicked world.

Mundus, sancti
 In the last sense, the world signifies the Saints, the Elect, the good men of the world, beleeving and persevering men. Of those Christ sayes, The world shall know that I love the Father; And, That the world may beleeve that thou hast sent me. And this world, that is, the godliest of this world, have many reprooffes, many corrections upon ⁵⁷⁰ them. That outwardly they are the prey of the wicked, and inwardly have that Stimulum carnis, which is the devils Solicitor, and round about them they see nothing but profanation of his word, mis-employment of his works, his creatures, mis-constructions of his actions, his judgements, blasphemy of his name, negligence and under-valuation of his Sacraments, violation of his Sabbaths, and holy convocations. O what a bitter reproofe, what a manifest evidence of the infirmity, nay of the malignity of man, is this, (if it be put home, and throughly considered) That even the goodnesse of man gets to no higher a degree, but to have been the occasion of the greatest ill, the greatest ⁵⁸⁰ cruelty that ever was done, the crucifying of the Lord of life! The better a man is, the more he concurred towards being the cause of Christs death; which is a strange, but a true and a pious consideration. Dilexit mundum, He loved the world, and he came to save the world; That is, most especially, and effectually, those that should beleeve in him, in the world, and live according to that beliefe, and die according to that life. If there had been no such, Christ had not died, never been crucified. So that impenitent men, mis-beleeving men have not put Christ to death, but it is we, we whom he loves, we that love him, that have crucified him.

⁵⁹⁰ In what rank then, of opposition against Christ, shall we place our sins, since even our faith and good works have been so farre the cause why Christ died, that, but for the salvation of such men, Beleevers, Workers, Perseverers, Christ had not died? This then is the reproofe of the world, that is, of the Saints of God in the world, that though I had rather be a doore-keeper in the house of my God, I must dwell in the tents of wickednesse, That though my zeale consume me, because mine enemies have forgotten thy words, I must stay amongst them that have forgotten thy words; But this, and all other reproofes, that arise in the godly, (that we may still keep up that consideration, ⁶⁰⁰ that he that reproves us, is The Comforter) have this comfort in them, that these faults that I indure in others, God hath either pardoned in me, or kept from me: and that though this world be wicked, yet when I shall come to the next world, I shall finde Noah, that had been drunk; and Lot, that had been incestuous; and Moses, that murmured at Gods proceedings; and Iob, and Ieremy, and Ionas, impatient, even to imprecations against themselves; Christs owne Disciples ambitious of worldly preferment; his Apostles forsaking him, his great Apostle forswearing him; And Mary Magdalen that had been, I know not what sinner; and David that had been all; I leave none so ill in this ⁶¹⁰ world, but I may carry one that was, or finde some that had been as ill as they, in heaven; and that blood of Christ Jesus, which hath brought them thither, is offered to them that are here, who may be successors in their repentance, as they are in their sins. And so have you all intended for the Person, the Comforter, and the Action, Reproofe, and the Subject, the World; remains only (that for which there remains but a little time) the Time, Cum venerit, When the Comforter comes he will proceed thus.

We use to note three Advents, three commings of Christ. An Advent of Humiliation, when he came in the flesh; an Advent of glory, ⁶²⁰ when he shall come to judgement; and between these an Advent of grace, in his gracious working in us, in this life; and this middlemost Advent of Christ, is the Advent of the Holy Ghost, in this text; when Christ works in us, the Holy Ghost comes to us. And so powerfull is his comming, that whereas he that sent him, Christ Jesus himself, ⁶³⁰ of certaine persons, upon whom he sheds the comfort of his application. The Holy Ghost picks out and chooses whom he will; Spirat ubi vult; perchance me that speake; perchance him that heares; perchance him that shut his eyes yester-night, and opened them this morning in the guiltinesse of sin, and repents it now: perchance him that hath been in the meditation of an usurious contract, of an ambitious supplantation, of a licentious solicitation, since he came hither into Gods house, and deprehends himselfe in that sinfull purpose now. This is his Advent, this is his Pentecost. As he came this day with a Manifestation, so, if he come into thee this evening, he comes with a Declaration, a Decla-

⁶⁴⁰ ration in operation. Pater meus usque modo operatur, & ego operor, My Father works even now, and I work, was Christs answer, when he was accused to have broken the Sabbath day; that the Father wrought that day as well as he. So also Christ assignes other reasons of working upon the Sabbath; Cujus Bos, Whose Oxe is in danger, and the owner will not relieve him? Nonne legistis, Have ye not read how David ate the Shew-bread? And Annon legistis, Did not the Priests breake the Sabbath, in their service in the Temple? But the Sabbath is the Holy Ghosts greatest working day: The Holy Ghost works more upon the Sunday, then all the week. In other dayes, he picks 650 and chooses; but upon these days of holy Convocation, I am surer that God speakes to me, then at home, in any private inspiration. For, as the Congregation besieges God in publique prayers, Agmine facto, so the Holy Ghost casts a net over the whole Congregation, in this Ordinance of preaching, and catches all that break not out.

Tertul.

If he be come into thee, he is come to reprove thee; to make thee reprove thy selfe; But doe that, Cum venerit, when the Holy Ghost is come. If thou have beene slack in the outward acts of Religion, and findest that thou art the worse thought of amongst men, for that respect, and the more open to some penall Laws, for those omissions, 660 and for these reasons onely beginnest to correct, and reprove thy selfe, this is a reproofe, Antequam Spiritus venerit, before the Holy Ghost is come into thee, or hath breathed upon thee, and inanimated thine actions. If the powerfulnessse, and the piercing of the mercies of thy Saviour, have sometimes, in the preaching thereof, entendered and melted thy heart, and yet upon the confidence of the readinesse, and easinesse of that mercy, thou returne to thy vomit, to the re-pursuite of those halfe-repentend sins, and thinkest it time enough to goe forward upon thy death-bed, this is a reproofe Postquam abierit Spiritus, After the Holy Ghost is departed from thee. If the burden of thy sins 670 oppresse thee, if thou beest ready to cast thy selfe from the Pinnacle of the Temple, from the participation of the comforts afforded thee in the Absolution, and Sacraments of the Church, If this appeare to thee in a kinde of humility, and reverence to the Majesty of God, That thou darest not come into his sight, not to his table, not to speake to him in prayer, whom thou hast so infinitely offended, this is a re-proofe, Cum Spiritus Sanctus simulatur, when the Holy Ghost is counterfained, when Satan is transformed into an Angel of light, and makes thy dismayed conscience beleewe, that that affection, which is truly a higher Treason against God, then all thy other sins, (which 680 is, a diffident suspecting of Gods mercy) is such a reverend feare, and trembling as he looks for.

Reprove thy selfe; but doe it by convincing, not by a downe-right stupefaction of the conscience; but by a consideration of the nature of thy sin, and a contemplation of the infinite proportion between God and thee, and so between that sin and the mercy of God; for, thou

- canst not be so absolutely, so intirely, so essentially sinfull, as God is absolutely, and intirely, and essentially mercifull. Doe what thou canst, there is still some goodnesse in thee; that nature that God made, is good still; Doe God what hee will, hee cannot strip himselfe, not⁶⁹⁰ devest himselfe of mercy. If thou couldst doe as much as God can pardon, thou wert a Manichæan God, a God of evill, as infinite as the God of goodnesse is. Doe it, Cum venerit Spiritus, when the Holy Ghost pleads on thy side; not cum venerit homo, not when mans reason argues for thee, and sayes, It were injustice in God, to punish one for another, the soule for the body: Much lesse Cum venerit inimicus homo, when the Devill pleads, and pleads against thee, that thy sins are greater then God can forgive. Reprove any over-bold presumption, that God cannot forsake thee, with remembring who it was that said, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? Even⁷⁰⁰ Christ himselfe could apprehend a dereliction. Reprove any distrust in God, with remembring to whom it was said, Hodiè mecum eris in Paradiso; Even the thiefe himselfe, who never saw him, never met him, but at both their executions, was carryed up with him, the first day of his acquaintance. If either thy cheerefulnessse, or thy sadnesse bee conceived of the Holy Ghost, there is a good ground of thy Noli timere, feare neither. So the Angel proceeded with Ioseph, Feare not to take Mary, for that which is conceived in her, is of the Holy Ghost. Feare not thou, that a chearefulnessse and alacrity in using Gods blessings, feare not that a moderate delight in musique, in conversation,⁷¹⁰ in recreations, shall be imputed to thee for a fault, for, it is conceived by the Holy Ghost, and is the off-spring of a peacefull conscience. Embrace therefore his working, Qui omnia opera nostra operatus est nobis, Thou, O Lord, hast wrought all our works in us; And whose working none shall be able to frustrate in us; Operabitur, & quis avertit? I will worke, and who shall let it? And as the Son concurred with the Father, and the Holy Ghost with the Son, in working in our behalfe, so Operemur & nos, let us also worke out our Salvation with feare and trembling, by reprovng the errors in our understanding, and the perversenesses of our conversation, that way, in which the⁷²⁰ Holy Ghost is our guide, by reprovng, that is, chiding and convincing the conscience, but still with comfort, that is, stedfast application of the merits of Christ Jesus.

GALAT. 4.4 and 5. BUT WHEN THE FULNESSE OF TIME WAS COME, GOD SENT FORTH HIS SON, MADE OF A WOMAN, MADE UNDER THE LAW, TO REDEEM THEM THAT WERE UNDER THE LAW, THAT WE MIGHT RECEIVE THE ADOPTION OF SONS.

WEE ARE met here to celebrate the generation of Christ Jesus; but Generationem ejus quis enarrabit, sayes the Prophet, who shall declare his generation, his age? For, for his essentiall generation, by which he is the Son of God, the Angels, who are almost 6000. yeares elder then we, are no nearer to that generation of his, then if they had been made but yesterday: Eternity hath no such distinctions, no limits, no periods, no seasons, no moneths, no yeares, no dayes; Methusalem, who was so long lived, was no elder in respect of eternity, then Dauids son by Berseba, that dyed the first¹⁰ week. The first Fiat in the Creation of Adam, and the last note of the blowing of the Trumpets to judgement, (though there be between these (as it is ordinarily received) 2000. yeares of nature, between the Creation, and the giving of the Law by Moses, and 2000. yeares of the Law between that, and the comming of Christ, and 2000. yeares of Grace and Gospell between Christs first, and his second comming) yet this Creation and this Judgement are not a minute asunder in respect of eternity, which hath no minutes. Whence then arises all our vexation and labour, all our anxieties and anguishes, all our suits and pleadings, for long leases, for many lives, for many yeares purchase in this world, when, if we be in our way to the eternall King²⁰ of the eternall kingdome, Christ Jesus, all we are not yet, all the world shall never be a minute old; Generationem ejus quis enarrabit, what tongue can declare, what heart can conceive his generation which was so long before any heart or tongue was made? But we come not now to consider that eternall generation, not Christ meerly as the Son of God, but the Son of Mary too: And that generation the Holy Ghost hath told us, was in the fulnesse of time: When the fulnesse of time was come, God sent forth, &c.

In which words, we have these three considerations; First, the time³⁰ of Christs comming, and that was the fulnesse of time; And then, the maner of his comming, which is expressed in two degrees of humiliation, one, that he was made of a woman, the other, that he was made under the Law; And then, the third part is the purpose of his comming, which also was twofold; for first, he came to redeem them who were under the Law, All; And secondly he came, that we (we the elect of God in him) might receive adoption; When the fulnesse of time was come, &c.

I Part

For the full consideration of this fulnesse of time, we shall first consider this fulnesse in respect of the Jews, and then in respect of⁴⁰ all Nations, and lastly in respect of our selves: The Jews might have seen the fulnesse of time, the Gentiles did (in some measure) see it, and we must (if we will have any benefit by it) see it too. It is an observation of S. Cyril, That none of the Saints of God, nor such as were noted to be exemplarily religious, and sanctified men did ever celebrate with any festivall solemnity, their own birth-day. Pharaoh celebrated his own Nativity, but who would make Pharaoh his example? and besides, he polluted that festivall with the blood of one of his servants. Herod celebrated his Nativity, but who would think it an honor to be like Herod? and besides, he polluted that festivall⁵⁰ with the blood of Iohn Baptist. But the just contemplation of the miseries and calamities of this life, into which our birth-day is the doore, and the entrance, is so far from giving any just occasion of a festivall, as it hath often transported the best disposed Saints and servants of God to a distemper, to a malediction, and cursing of their birth-day. Cursed be the day wherein I was born, and let not that day wherein my mother bare me be blessed. Let the day perish wherein I was born, let that day be darknesse, and let not God regard it from above. How much misery is presaged to us, when we come so generally weeping into the world, that, perchance, in the whole body ⁶⁰ of history we reade but of one childe, Zoroaster, that laughed at his birth: What miserable revolutions and changes, what downfals, what break-necks, and precipitations may we justly think our selves ordained to, if we consider, that in our comming into this world out of our mothers womb, we doe not make account that a childe comes right, except it come with the head forward, and thereby prefigure that headlong falling into calamities which it must suffer after? Though therefore the dayes of the Martyrs, which are for our example celebrated in the Christian Church, be ordinarily called natalitia Martyrum, the birth-day of the Martyrs, yet that is not intended of their ⁷⁰ birth in this world, but of their birth in the next; when, by death their soules were new delivered of their prisons here, and they newly born into the kingdome of heaven; that day, upon that reason, the day of their death was called their birth-day, and celebrated in the Church by that name. Onely to Christ Jesus, the fulnesse of time was at his birth; not because he also had not a painfull life to passe through, but because the work of our redemption was an intire work, and all that Christ said, or did, or suffered, concurred to our salvation, as well his mothers swathing him in little clouts, as Iosephs shrowding him in a funerall sheete; as well his cold lying in the

First we consider it to have been so to the Jews; for this was that fulnesse, in which all the prophecies concerning the Messias, were exactly fulfilled; That he must come whilst the Monarchy of Rome flourished; And before the Temple of Jerusalem was destroyed; That he must be born in Bethlem; That he must be born of a Virgin; His person, his actions, his passion so distinctly prophecyed, so exactly accomplished, as no word being left unfulfilled, this must necessarily ⁹⁰ be a fulnesse of time. So fully was the time of the Messias comming, come, that though some of the Jews say now, that there is no certain time revealed in the Scriptures when the Messias shall come, and others of them say, that there was a time determined, and revealed, and that this time was the time, but by reason of their great sins he did not come at his time, yet when they examine their own suppurations, they are so convinced with that evidence, that this was that fulnesse of time, that now they expresse a kind of conditionall acknowledgement of it, by this barbarous and inhumane custome of theirs, that they alwayes keep in readinesse the blood of some Christian, with which they anoint the body of any that dyes amongst them, with these words, if Jesus Christ were the Messias, then may the blood of this Christian availe thee to salvation: So that by their doubt, and their implied consent, in this action, this was the fulnesse of time, when Christ Jesus did come, that the Messias should come.

Gentibus

It was so to the Jews, and it was so to the Gentiles too; It filled those wise men which dwelt so far in the East, that they followed the star from thence to Jerusalem. Herod was so full of it, that he filled the Countrey with streames of innocent bloud, and lest he should spare that one innocent childe, killed all. The two Emperours of Rome, Vespasian and Domitian were so full of it, that in jealousy of a Messias to come then, from that race, they took speciall care for the destruction of all, of the posterity of David. All the whole people were so full of it, that divers false-Messiahs, Barcocab, and Moses of Crete, and others rose up, and drew, and deceived the people, as if they had been the Messiah, because that was ordinarily knowne, and received to be the time of his comming. And the Devill himself was so full of it, as that in his Oracles he gave that answer, That an Hebrew childe should be God over all gods, and brought the Emperour to erect an Altar, to this Messiah Christ Jesus, though he knew not what he did. This was the fulnesse that filled Jew and Gentile, Kings and Philosophers, strangers and inhabitants, counterfaits and devils to the expectation of a Messiah; and when comes this fulnesse of time to us, that we feele this Messiah born in our selves?

Nobis

In this fulnesse, in this comming of our Saviour into us, we should finde a threefold fullnesse in our selves; we should finde a fulnesse of nature (because not only of spirituall, but of naturall and temporall things, all the right which we have in this world, is in, and for, and by Christ, for so we end all our prayers of all sorts, with that clause, per Dominum nostrum Iesum Christum, Grant this O Lord, for our Lord and Saviour Christ Iesus sake.) And we should finde a fulnesse of grace, a daily sense of improvement, growth in grace, a filling of all former vacuities, a supplying of all emptinesses in our soules, till we came to Stephens fulnesse, Full of the holy Ghost and wisdom, and full of the holy Ghost and Faith, and full of faith and power: And so we should come to finde a fulnesse of glory, that is an apprehension and inchoation of heaven in this life; for the glory of the next world, is not in the measure of that glory, but in the measure of my capacity; it is not that I shall have as much as any soule hath, but that I shall have as much as my soul can receive; it ¹⁴⁰ is not in an equality with the rest, but in a fulnesse in my self; And so, as I shall have a fulnesse of nature, that is, such an ability and such a use of naturall faculties, and such a portion of the naturall things of this world as shall serve to fill up Gods purpose in me: And as I shall have a fulnesse of grace, that is, such a measure of grace as shall make me discern a tentation, and resist a tentation, or at least repent it, if I have not effectually resisted it, so even here, I shall have a fulnesse of glory, that is, as much of that glory as a way-faring soul is capable of in this world; All these fulnesses I shall have, if I can finde and feele in my selfe this birth of Christ.

¹⁵⁰ His eternall birth in heaven is unexpressible, where he was born without a mother; His birth on earth is unexpressible too, where he was born without a father; but thou shalt feele the joy of his third birth in thy soul, most inexpressible this day, where he is born this day (if thou wilt) without father or mother; that is, without any former, or any other reason then his own meere goodnesse that should beget that love in him towards thee, and without any matter or merit in thee which should enable thee to conceive him. He had a heavenly birth, by which he was the eternall Son of God, and without that he had not been a person able to redeem thee; He had ¹⁶⁰ a humane birth, by which he was the Son of Mary, and without that he had not been sensible in himself of thine infirmities, and necessities; but, this day (if thou wilt) he hath a spirituall birth in thy soul, without which, both his divine, and his humane birth are utterly unprofitable to thee, and thou art no better then if there had never been Son of God in heaven, nor Son of Mary upon earth. Even the Stork in the aire knoweth her appointed time, and the Turtle, and the Crane, and the Swallow observe the time of their comming, but my people knoweth not the judgements of the Lord. For, if you doe know your time, you know that now is your fulnesse of time; This¹⁷⁰ is your particular Christmas-day; when, if you be but as carefull to cleanse your soules, as you are your houses, if you will but follow that counsell of S. Augustine, Quicquid non vis inveniri in domo tua, non inveniat Deus in anima tua. That uncleannesse which you would be loth your neighbour should finde in your houses, let not God nor his Angels finde in your soules, Christ Jesus is certainly born, and will as certainly grow up in your soules.

2 Part

non Dei*

We passe from this, to our second part, The manner of his coming; where we proposed two degrees of Christs humiliation, That he was made of a woman, and made under the Law. In the first alone,¹⁸⁰ are two degrees too, that he takes the name of the Son of a woman, and waives the glorious name of the Son of God; And then, that he takes the name of the son of a woman, and waives the miraculous name of the son of a Virgin. For the first; Christ ever refers himself to his Father; As he sayes, The Father which sent me, gave me a commandement what I should say, and what I should speak, so, for all that which he did or suffered, he sayes, My meate is to doe his will that sent me, and to finish his work: And so, though he say, I am come out from the Father, and am come into the world; yet, be where he will, still, Ego & pater unum sumus, He and his Father¹⁹⁰ were all one. But divesting that glory, or slumbring it in his flesh, till the Father glorifie him againe with that glory, which he had with him from the beginning, in his Ascension, he humbles himselfe here to that addition, The Son of a woman, made of a woman.

*Non

Christ waived the glorious Name of Son of God, and the miraculous Name of Son of a Virgin to; which is not omitted to draw into doubt, the perpetuall Virginity of the Blessed Virgin, the Mother of Christ; she is not called a woman, as though she were not a Maid; when it is said, Joseph knew her not, donec peperit, till she brought forth her Son, this did not imply his knowledge of her after, no more,²⁰⁰ then when God sayes to Christ, donec ponam, sit at my right hand, till I make thine enemies thy footstoole, that imports, that Christ should remove from his right hand after: For, here is a perpetuall donec in both places; for evermore the ancient Expositors have understood that place of Ezekiel, to be intended of the perpetuall Virginitie of Mary, This gate shall be shut, and shall not be opened, and no man shall enter by it. Solomon hath an exclamation, Is there any thing whereof a man may say, Behold this is new? and he answers himselfe immediately before, There is no new thing under the Sun.

Joh. 12.[49]

[Eccles. 1.9
and 10]

But behold here is a greater then Solomon, and he sayes now in action, ²¹⁰ by being borne of a Virgin, as he had said, long before, in Prophesie, The Lord hath created a new thing upon earth, a woman shall compasse a man. If this had been spoken of such a woman, as were no Maid, this had been no new thing: As it was, it was without example, and without naturall reason; si ratio reddi posset, (sayes St. Bernard) non esset mirabile, si exempla haberemus, non esset singulare; If there were reason for it, it were no miracle, if there were precedents for it, it were not singular; and God intended both, that it should be a miracle, and that it should be done but once; we see in Nature, trees do bud out, and there is an emission, and emanation of flowers, and ²²⁰ fruits, without any help of man, or any act done by him, to that tree; we reade in Genesis, That the earth had produced all plants and herbs, before eyther any raine fell upon it, or any man tilled it. And these are good helps, and illustrations to us, after we have beleaved that a Virgin brought forth a Son; but nothing deduced out of nature, could prove this at first, to any man, except he beleaved it before. And therefore blessed be God, that hath given us that strength, which the Egyptian Mid-wives said the women of Israel had, that they brought forth children, without the help of Mid-wives: That we can humbly beleieve these mysteries of our religion, by faith, without the ²³⁰ hand, and help of Reason; Si nondum mens idonea, abstrusa investigare, sine hæsitacione credantur, sayes St. Augustine, In things which are not subject to any faculty of ours, to be discerned by reason, there is a present exercise of our faith. As we know it to be true, that the bush, in which God spake to Moses, was full of fire, and did burne, but not consume, because God hath said so, in his booke, but yet we doe not know, how that was done: so we know, (by the same evidence) that the Mother of our Saviour, was a Virgin; but for the manner of this Mystery, we rest upon Epiphanius Rule, Quæcunque dicit Deus, credamus quòd sint; quomodo, Soli Deo cognitum: what ²⁴⁰ soever God, in his word, sayes, was done, let us beleieve it to be done; how it was done, as we know that God knowes, so we are content not to inquire more then it hath been his pleasure to communicate to us.

Jer. 31.[22]

She was then, and she was alwaies a Virgin; but because this Text is of his Humiliation, he leaves that Name that proceeds from miracle, and descends to that lower name of nature, Made of a woman. The Spirit of God fore-saw, that the issue betweene the Church, and the Heretiques would not be Virgin or no Virgin, but whether Christ were made of a woman. Some Heretiques did question the first;

²⁵⁰ The Helvidians denied her perpetuall Virginitie: But that Heresie, and some others that opposed her Virginitie, vanished in a short time. But the Manichees, that lasted long, and spread farre in the old times, and the Anabaptists, which abound yet, deny that Christ was made of a woman; They say, that Christ passed through her, as water through a Pipe, but tooke nothing of her substance; and then, if he took not the nature of mankinde, he hath not redeemed mankinde. And therefore in that Prophetie of Ieremy, that Christ should be borne, and in this Gospel, in our Text, that Christ was borne, the Holy Ghost maintaines and continues that phrase, Made of a woman:

²⁶⁰ And where he begins to expresse his Divinitie in miracles, at the marriage in Cana, there Christ himselfe calls her, by no other name, Woman, what have I to doe with thee? And when he had drawne all his miracles to a glorious consummatum est, upon the Crosse, he calls her there, by that name too, Woman, behold thy Son. Here then was no such curious insisting upon Styles and Titles, and names of Dignities, no unkindnesse, no displeasure taken; [as] if one should leave out a Right Honourable, or Right Worshipfull, or an addition of an Office or Dignity; The powerfulnesse of Christs birth, consists in this, That he is made of God; The miraculousnesse of Christs birth, ²⁷⁰ consisted in this, that he was made of a Virgin, and yet the Prophet and the Apostle, two principall Secretaries of the Holy Ghost, present him with this addition, made of a woman. Christ had one priviledge in his birth, which never any Prince had, or shall have, that is, that he chose what Mother he would have, and might have been borne of what woman he would have chosen. And in this large and universall choyce, though he chose a woman full of grace to be his Mother, yet that he might give spirituall comfort to all sorts of women, first to those, who should be unjustly suspected, and insimulated of sin and incontinency, when indeed they were innocent, hee was content

²⁸⁰ to come of a Mother, who should be subject to that suspicion, and

Joh. 2.[4]

Joh. 19.[26]

whom her husband should think to be with child, before he married her, and thereupon purpose to put her away; And then, to fill those women, who had been guilty of that sinne, with reliefe in their consciences against the wrath of God, and with reparation of their reputation and good name in the world, it was his unsearchable will and pleasure, that in all that Genealogie, and pedigree, which he, and his spirit hath inspired the Euangelists to record of his Ancestors, there is not one woman named, of whom Christ is descended, who is not dangerously noted in the Scriptures, to have had some asper-²⁹⁰sion of incontinence upon her; as both St. Hierome, and St. Ambrose, and St. Chrysostome observe, of Thamar, of Berseba, and of Ruth also.

So then, Christ Jesus who came onely for the reliefe of sinners, is content to be known to have come, not onely of poore parents, but of a sinfull race; and though he exempted his Blessed Mother, more then any, from sin, yet he is now content to be born again of sinful Mothers: In that soul, that accuses it self most of sin; In that soul, that cald now to mind, (with remorse, and not with delight) the severall times, and places, and waies, wherein she hath offended God; ³⁰⁰In that soul that acknowledgeth it self to have bin a sink of uncleanness, a Tabernacle, a Synagogue of Satan; In that soul, that hath been as it were possessed with Mary Magdalens seven Devils, yea with him, whose name was Legion, with all Devils; In that sinful soul would Christ Jesus fain be born, this day, and make that soul, his Mother, that he might be a regeneration to that soul. We cannot afford Christ, such a birth in us, as he had, to be born of a Virgin; for every one of us wel-nigh hath married himself to some particular sin, some beloved sin, that he can hardly divorce himselfe from; nay, no man keepes his faith, to that one sin, that he hath married him-³¹⁰selfe to, but mingles himselfe with other sins also. Though Covetousnesse, whom he loves, as the wife of his bosome, have made him rich, yet he will commit adultery with another sin, with Ambition; and he will part, even with those riches, for Honour: Though Ambition be his wife, his married sin, yet he will commit adultery with another sin, with Licentiousnesse, and he will endanger his Honour, to fulfill his Lust; Ambition may be his wife, but Lust is his Concubine. We abandon all spirituall chastity, all virginitie, we marry our particular sinnes, and then we divide our loves with other sins too: Thou hast multiplyed thy fornications, and yet art not satisfied, is a complaint, that reaches us all, in spirituall fornications, and goes very farre, in carnall. And yet, for all this, we are capable of this Conception, Christ may be borne in us, for all this: As God said unto the Prophet, Take thee a wife of fornications, and children of fornications; so is Christ Jesus content to take our soules, though too often mothers of fornications: As long as we are united, and incorporated in his beloved Spouse, the Church, conforme our selves to her, grow up in her, hearken to his word in her, feed upon his Sacraments in her, acknowledge a seale of reconciliation, by the absolution of the Minister in her, so long, (how unclean soever we have bin, if wee abhorre and forsake our uncleannesse now) wee participate of the chastity of that Spouse of his, the Church, and in her, are made capable of this conception of Christ Jesus, and so, it is as true this houre of us, as it was when the Apostle spoke these words, This is the fulnesse of time, when God sent his Son, &c.

Ezech.

[Hos. 1.2]

Now you remember, that in this second part, (the manner of Christs comming) we proposed two degrees of humiliation; One which we have handled, in a double respect, as he is made, filius mulieris, non Dei, the son of a woman, and not the Son of God; the other, as he is filius mulieris, non Virginis, The son of a woman, and not called the son of a Virgin.

Sub Lege

The second remaines, that he was sub lege, under the law; now, this phrase, to be under the law, is not alwayes so narrowly limited in the Scriptures, as to signifie onely the law of Moses; for, so, onely the Jews were under the law, and so, Christs comming for them, who were under the law, his Death, and Merits should belong onely to the Jews. But St. Augustine observes, that when Christ sent the message of his birth, to the wise men, in the East, by a starre, and to the shepheards, about Bethlem, by an Angel, In pastoribus, Iudæi; in magis, Gentes vocatæ; The Jews had their calling in that manifestation to the shepheards, and the Gentiles in that, to the wise men in the East. But besides that Christ did submit himselfe, to all the waight even of the Ceremoniall law of Moses, he was under a heavier law, then that, under that lex decreti, the contract and covenant with God the Father, under that oportuit pati, This he ought to suffer, before he could enter into glory. So that his being under the law, may be accounted not a part of his Humiliation, as his being made of a woman was, but rather the whole history, and frame of his humiliation, All that concernes his obedience, even to that law, which the Father had laid upon him; for, the life and death of Christ, from the ³⁶⁰ Ave Maria, to the consummatum est, from his coming into this World, in his Conception, to his transmigration upon the Crosse, was all under this law, heavier then any law, that any man is under, the law of the contract, and covenant between the Father, and him.

Though therefore we may think, judging by the law of reason, that since Christ came to gather a Church, and to draw the world to him, it would more have advanced that purpose of his, to have been borne at Rome, where the seat of the Empire, and the confluence of all Nations, was, then in Iury, and (if he would offer the Gospel first to the Jews) better to have been borne at Ierusalem, where all the out-³⁷⁰ ward, publique, solemne worship of the Jews was, then at obscure Bethlem, and in Bethlem, in some better place then in an Inne, in a Stable, in a Manger; though we may think thus, in the law of reason, yet, non cogitationes meæ cogitationes vestræ, sayes God in the Prophet, My thoughts are not your thoughts, nor my lawes your lawes, for I am sub lege decreti, under another manner of law, then falls within your reading, under an obedience to that covenant, which hath passed betweene my Father, and me, and by those Degrees, and no other way, was my humiliation, for your Redemption, to be expressed. Though we may thinke in the law of Reason, that his work ³⁸⁰ of propagating the Gospel, would have gone better forward, if he had taken for his Apostles, some Tullies, or Hortensii, or Senecaes, great, and perswading Orators, in stead of his Peter, and Iohn, and Matthew, and those Fishermen, and tent-makers, and toll-gatherers; Though we might think in reason, and in piety too, that when he would humble himselfe to take our salvation into his care, it had beene enough, to have beene under the law of Moses, to live innocently, and righteously, without shedding of his blood; If he would shed blood, it might have beene enough to have done so in the Circumcision, and scourging, without dying; If he would die, it might have been enough ³⁹⁰ to have dyed some lesse accursed, and lesse ignominious death, then the death of the Crosse; though we might reasonably enough, and

Esay 55.[8]

- [Mat. 3.15] piously enough, think thus, yet, non cogitationes vestræ, cogitationes meæ, sayes the Lord, your way is not my way, your law is not my law; for, Christ was sub lege decreti, and thus, as he did, and no other way, it became him to fulfill all righteousness, that is, all that Decree of God, which he had accepted, and acknowledged as Righteous. He was so much under Moses law, as he would be: so much under that law, as that he suffered that law, to be wrested against him, and to bee pretended to be broken by him, and to be endited, and con-
- Exod. 22.[18] ⁴⁰⁰demned by that law. The Jews pressed that law, non sines veneficum vivere, Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live, when they attributed all his glorious miracles, to the power of the devil: and the Romans were incensed against him, for treason, and sedition, as though he aliened and withdrew the people from Cæsar. But he was under a heavyer law, then Jews or Romanes, the Law of his Father, and his owne eternall Decree, so farre, as that he came to that sense of the waight thereof, Eli, Eli, My God, My God, why hast thou forsaken me? and was never delivered from the burden of this law, till he pleaded the performance of all conditions between his Father, and
- [Mat. 27.46] ⁴¹⁰him, and delivered up all the evidence thereof, in those words, In manus tuas, Into thy hands, O Lord I give my spirit, and so presented both the righteousness of his soule, which had fulfilled the law, and the soule it selfe, which was under the law. He dyed in Execution, and so discharged all; And so we have done with our second part, The manner of his comming.
3. Part We are come now, in our Order, to our third part, The purpose of Christs comming; and in that we consider two objects, that Christ had, and two subjects to work upon, two kindes of work, and two kindes of persons; First, to Redeeme, and then to Adopt; Those are ⁴²⁰his works, his objects; And then, To redeeme those that were under the law, that is, all, but to Adopt those whom he had chosen, us; And those are the persons, the subjects, that he works upon, by his comming.
- Sub Lege First then, (to begin with the persons) those of the first kinde, those that were under the Law: for them, (as we told you before) the law must not be so narrowly restrained here, as to be intended onely of Moses Law, for Christs purpose was not onely upon the
- 2 Reg. 5 Jews; for else, Naaman the Syrian, by whom God fought great bat-tailes, before he was cured of his leprosie, and who, when he was ⁴³⁰ cured, was so zealous of the worship of the true God, that he would needs carry holy earth, to make Altars of, from the place, where the Prophet dwelt: And else, Iob, who though he were of the land of Hus, hath good testimony of being an upright and just man, and one that feared God; And else, the Widow of Sarepta, whose meale, and oyle God preserved unwasted, and whose dead sonne, God raised againe, at the prayer of Elijah; All these, and all others, whom the searching Spirit of God, seales to his service, in all the corners of the earth, because they are strangers in the land of Israel, should not be under the Law, and so should have no profit by Christs being made ⁴⁴⁰ under the Law, if the Law should be understood, onely of the Law of Moses. And therefore to be under the Law, signifies here, thus much, To be a debter to the law of nature, to have a testimony in our hearts and consciences, that there lyes a law upon us, which we have no power in our selves to performe; that to those lawes, To love God with all our powers, and to love our neighbour as our selves, and to doe, as we would be done to, we finde our selves naturally bound, and yet wee finde our selves naturally unable to performe them, and so to need the assistance of another, which must be Christ Jesus, to performe them for us; And so, all men, Jews and Gentiles ⁴⁵⁰ are under the Law, because naturally they feelee a law upon them, which they breake. And therefore wheresoever our power becomes defective, in the performance of this law, if our will be not defective too, if we come not to say, God hath given us an impossible Law, and therefore it is lost labour, to goe about to performe it, or God hath given us another to performe this Law for us, and therefore nothing is required at our hands; If we abstaine from these quarrels to the law, and these murmurings at our owne infirmity, wee shall finde, that the fulnesse of time is this day come, this day Christ is come to all that are under the Law, that is, to all mankind; to all, because ⁴⁶⁰ all are unable to performe that Law, which they all see, by the light of nature to lye upon them.

These then be the persons of the first kinde, All, all the world; Dilexit mundum, God so loved the world, that he gave his Son for it, for all the world; And, accordingly, venit salvare mundum, the obedience of the Son, was as large as the love of the Father, Hee came to save all the world, and he did save all the world; God would have all men, and Christ did save all men. It is therefore fearefully (and scarce allowably said) that Christ did contrary to his Fathers will, when he called those to grace, of whom he knew his Fathers pleasure ⁴⁷⁰ to bee, that they should have no grace; It is fearefully and dangerously said, Absurdum non esse, Deum interdum falsa loqui, & falsum loquenti credendum, that it is not absurd to say, (that is, that it may truly be said) that God does sometimes speake untruly, and that we are bound to beleieve God, when he does so: for, if we consider the soveraigne balme of our soules, the blood of Christ Jesus, there is enough for all the world; if we consider the application of this physick, by the Ministers of Christ Jesus in the Church, hee hath given us that spreading Commission, To goe and preach to every creature, we are bid to offer, to apply, to minister this to all the world: Christ hath ⁴⁸⁰ excommunicated no Nation, no shire, no house, no man: Hee gives none of his Ministers leave to say to any man, thou art not Redeemed, he gives no wounded nor afflicted conscience leave, to say to it selfe, I am not Redeemed. There may be meat enough brought into the house, for all the house, though some be so weake, as they cannot, (which is the case of the Gentiles) some so stubborne, as they will not eate, (which is the case of the carnall man, though in the Christian Church.)

He came to all, There are the persons, and to Redeeme all, there is his errand; but how to Redeeme? S. Hierome saies, Gentes non ⁴⁹⁰ Redimuntur, sed emuntur: The Gentiles, saies hee, are not properly Christs, by way of Redeeming, but by an absolute purchase: To which purpose those words are also applied, which the Apostle saies to the Corinthians, Ye are bought with a price, S. Hieroms meaning therein, is, that if we compare the Jews and the Gentiles, though God permitted the Jews, in punishment of their rebellions, to bee captivated by the devill in Idolatries, yet the Jews were but as in a mortgage, for they had beene Gods peculiar people before; But the Gentiles were as the devils inheritance, for God had never claimed them, nor owned them for his; and therefore God sayes to Christ, Postula à me, Aske ⁵⁰⁰ of me, and I will give thee the nations for thine inheritance; as though they were not his yet, or not his by that title, as the Jews were. So that, in S. Hieromes construction, the Jewes, which were Gods people

1 Cor. 6.20

before, were properly Redeemed, the Gentiles, to whom God made no title before, are rather bought, then redeemed. But, Nullum tempus occurrit Regi, against the King of Kings there runnes no prescription; no man can devest his Allegiance to his Prince, and say he will be subject no longer; And therefore, since the Gentiles, were his by his first title of Creation, (for, it is he that hath made us, and not we our selves, nor the devill neither) when all we, by our generall revolt, ⁵¹⁰ and prevarication, (as we were all collectively in Adams loynes) came to be under that law, morte morieris, Thou shalt dye the death, when Christ came in the fulnesse of time, and delivered us from the sharpest, and heaviest clause of that Law, which is the second death, then he Redeemed us properly, because, (though not by the same title of Covenant, as the Jews were) yet we were his, and sold over to his enemy. These then were the persons, All, (none can say that he did not need him, none can say, that he may not have him) And this was his first worke, to Redeeme, to vindicate them from the usurper, to deliver them from the intruder, to emancipate them from the tyrant, ⁵²⁰ to cancell the covenant betweene hell, and them, and restore them so far to their liberty, as that they might come to their first Master, if they would; this was Redeeming.

But in his other worke, which is Adoption, and where the persons were more particular, not all, but wee, Christ hath taken us to him, in a straiter and more peculiar title, then Redeeming. For, A servando Servi, men who were, by another mans valour, saved and redeemed from the enemy, or from present death, they became thereby, servants to him that saved and redeemed them: Redemption makes us (who were but subjects before, for all are so, by creation) ⁵³⁰ servants; but it is but servants; but Adoption makes us, who are thus made servants by Redemption, sons: for, Adoption is verbum forense, though it be a word which the Holy Ghost takes, yet he takes it from a civill use, and signification, in which, it expresses in divers circumstances, our Adoption into the state of Gods children. First, he that adopted another, must by that law, be a man, who had no children of his owne; And this was Gods case towards us; Hee had no children of his owne, wee were all fili i iræ, The children of wrath, not one of us could be said to bee the child of God, by nature, if we had not had this Adoption in Christ. Secondly, he, who, by that law, might

Adoptio

Eph. 2.[3]

⁵⁴⁰ Adopt, must be a Man, who had had, or naturally might have had children; for an Infant under yeares, or a man, who by nature was disabled from having children, could not Adopt another; And this was Gods case towards us too; for God had had children without Adoption; for by our creation in Innocence, we were the sons of God till we died all in one transgression, and lost all right, and all life, and all meanes of regaining it, but by this way of Adoption in Christ Jesus. Againe, no man might adopt an elder man then himselfe; and so, our Father by Adoption, is not onely Antiquus dierum, The ancient of Daies, but Antiquior diebus ancienter then any Daies, before

⁵⁵⁰ Time was; he is (as Damascene forces himselfe to expresse it) Super-principale principium, the Beginning, and the first Beginning, and before the first beginning; He is, saies he, æternus, and præ-æternus, Eternall, and elder then any eternity, that we can take into our imagination. So likewise no man might adopt a man of better quality then himselfe, and here, we are so far from comparing, as that we cannot comprehend his greatnesse, and his goodnesse, of whom, and to whom, S. Augustin saies well, Quid mihi es? If I shall goe about to declare thy goodnesse, not to the world in generall, but Quid mihi es, how good thou art to me, Miserere ut loquar, saies he, I must have

⁵⁶⁰ more of thy goodnesse, to be able to tell thy former goodnesse, Be mercifull unto me againe, that I may bee thereby able to declare how mercifull thou wast to me before, except thou speake in me, I cannot declare what thou hast done for me. Lastly, no man might be adopted, into any other degree of kindred, but into the name, and right of a son; he could not be an adopted Brother, nor cosin, nor nephew: And this is especially our dignity; wee have the Spirit of Adoption, whereby we cry Abba, Father. So that, as here is a fulnesse of time in the text, so there is a fulnesse of persons, All, and a fulnesse of the worke belonging to them, Redeeming, Emancipation, delivering from the ⁵⁷⁰ chaines of Satan, (we were his by Creation, we sold our selves for nothing, and he redeemed us, without money, that is, without any cost of ours) but because for all this generall Redemption, we may turne from him, and submit our selves to other services, therefore he hath Adopted us, drawne into his family and into his more especiall care, those who are chosen by him, to be his. Now that Redemption reached to all, there was enough for all; this dispensation of that Redemption, this Adoption reaches onely to us, all this is done, That wee might receive the Adoption of Sonnes.

But who are this Wee? why, they are the elect of God. But who ⁵⁸⁰ are they, who are these elect? Qui timidè rogat, docet negare: If a man aske me with a diffidence, Can I be the adopted son of God, that have rebelled against him, in all my affections, that have troden upon his Commandements, in all mine actions, that have divorced my selfe from him, in preferring the love of his creatures before himselfe, that have murmured at his corrections, and thought them too much, that have undervalued his benefits, and thought them too little, that have abandoned, and prostituted my body, his Temple, to all uncleannesse, and my spirit to indevotion, and contempt of his Ordinances; can I be the adopted son of God, that have done this?
⁵⁹⁰ Ne timidè roges, aske me not this, with a diffidence and distrust in Gods mercy, as if thou thoughtst with Cain thy iniquities were greater then could be forgiven; But aske me with that holy confidence, which belongs to a true convert, Am not I, who, though I am never without sinne, yet am never without hearty remorse and repentance for my sinnes; though the weaknesse of my flesh sometimes betray mee, the strength of his Spirit still recovers me; though my body be under the paw of that lion, that seekes whom hee may devoure, yet the lion of Judah raises againe and upholds my soule; though I wound my Saviour with many sinnes, yet all these, bee they never so many, I ⁶⁰⁰ strive against, I lament, confesse, and forsake as farre as I am able. Am not I the child of God, and his adopted son in this state? Roga fidenter, aske me with a holy confidence in thine and my God, & doces affirmare, thy very question gives me mine answer to thee, thou teachest me to say, thou art; God himselfe teaches me to say so, by his Apostle, The foundation of God is sure, and this is the Seale, God knoweth who are his, and let them that call upon his name, depart from all iniquity: He that departs so far, as to repent former sinnes, and shut up the wayes, which he knows in his conscience, doe lead him into tentations, he is of this quorum, one of us, one of them, ⁶¹⁰ who are adopted by Christ, to be the sonnes of God. I am of this quorum, if I preach the Gospell sincerely, and live thereafter, (for hee preaches twice a day, that followes his owne doctrine, and does as he saies) And you are of this quorum, if you preach over the Sermons which you heare, to your owne soules in your meditation, to your families in your relation, to the world in your conversation. If you come to this place, to meet the Spirit of God, and not to meet one another, If you have sate in this place, with a delight in the Word of God, and not in the words of any speaker, If you goe out of this place, in such a disposition, as that, if you should meet the last Trum-⁶²⁰pets at the gates, and Christ Jesus in the clouds, you would not intreat him to goe back, and stay another yeare: To enwrap all in one, if you have a religious and sober assurance, that you are his, and walke according to your beleefe, you are his, and, as the fulnesse of time, so the fulnesse of grace is come upon you, and you are not onely within the first commission, of those who were under the Law, and so Redeemed, but of this quorum who are selected out of them, the adopted sons of that God, who never disinherits those that forsake not him.

A Sermon Preached at St. Dunstons January 15. 1625. [1625/6]

The First Sermon after Our Dispersion, by the Sickness.

EXOD. 12.30. FOR THERE WAS NOT A HOUSE WHERE THERE WAS NOT ONE DEAD.

GOD INTENDED life and immortality for man; and man by sin induc'd death upon himself at first: When man had done so, and that now man was condemned, man must die; yet God gave him, though not an absolute pardon, yet a long reprieve; though not a new immortality, yet a life of seven and eight hundred years upon earth: And then, misery by sin growing upon man, and this long life which was enlarged in his favour being become a burden unto him, God abridged and contracted his seven hundred to seventy, and his eight hundred to eighty years, the years of his life¹⁰ came to be threescore and ten; and if misery do suffer him to exceed those, even the exceeding it self is misery. Death then is from our selves, it is our own; but the executioner is from God, it is his, he gives life; no man can quicken his own soul, but any man can forfeit his own soul: And yet when he hath done so, he may not be his own executioner; for as God giveth life, so he killeth, says Moses there: not as the cause of death, for death is not his creature; but because he employs what person he will, and executes by what instrument it pleases him to chuse, age or sickness, or justice, or malice, or (in our apprehension) fortune. In that History from whence we deduce²⁰ this Text, which was that great execution, the sodain death of all the first-born of Egypt; it is very large, and yet we may usefully, and to good purpose enlarge it, if we take into our consideration spiritual death, as well as bodily: for so in our houses from whence we came hither, if we left but a servant, but a child in the cradle at home, there is one dead in that house. If we have no other house but this which we carry about us, this house of clay, this tabernacle of flesh, this body, yet if we consider the inmate, the sojourner within this house, the state of our corrupt and putrified soul, there is one dead in this house too. And though we be met now in the House of God, and³⁰ our God be the God of Life, yet even in this house of the God of Life, and the ground enwrapped in the same consecration; not only of every such house, but let every mans length in the house be a house; of every such space this Text will be verified, There is not a house where there is not one dead.

God is abundant in his mercies to man, and as though he did but learn to give by his giving, as though he did but practise to make himself perfect in his own Art, which Art is bountiful Mercy; as though all his former blessings were but in the way of earnest, and not of payment; as though every benefit that he gave, were a new obligation⁴⁰ upon him, and not an acquittance to him; he delights to give where he hath given, as though his former gifts were but his places of memory, and marks set upon certain men, to whom he was to give more. It is not so good a plea in our prayers to God, for temporal or for spiritual blessings, to say, Have mercy upon me now, for I have loved thee heretofore, as to say, Have mercy upon me, for thou hast loved me heretofore. We answer a Beggar, I gave you but yesterday; but God therefore gives us to day, because he gave us yesterday: and therefore are all his blessings wrap'd up in that word, Panis quotidianus, Give us this day our daily bread: Every day he gives; and early⁵⁰ every day; his Manna falls before the Sun rises, and his mercies are new every morning. In this consideration of his abounding in all ways of mercy to us, we consider justly how abundant he is in instructing us. He writes his Law once in our hearts, and then he repeats that Law, and declares that Law again in his written Word, in his Scriptures. He writes his Law in stone-Tables once; and then those Tables being broken, he repeats that Law, writes that Law again in other Tables. He gives us his Law in Exodus and Leviticus, and then he gives us a Deuteronomy, a repetition of that Law, another time in another Book. And as he abounds so in instructing us, in going the⁶⁰ same way twice over towards us, as he gives us the Law a second time, so he gives us a second way of instructing us; he accompanies, he seconds his Law with examples. In his Legal Books we have Rules; in the Historical, Examples to practise by. And as he is every way abundant, as he hath added Law to Nature, and added Example to Law, so he hath added Example to Example; and by that Text which we have read to you here, and by that Text which we have left at home, our house and family, and by that Text which we have brought hither, our selves, and by that Text which we finde here, where we stand, and sit, and kneel upon the bodies of some of our dead friends or neighbors, he gives to us, he repeats to us, a full, a various, a multiform, a manifold Catechism, and Institution, to teach us that it is so absolutely true, that there is not a house in which there is not one dead, as that (taking spiritual death into our consideration) there is not a house in which there is one alive.

That therfore we may take in light at all these windows that God opens for us, that we may lay hold upon God by all these handles which he puts out to us, we shall make a brief survey of these four Houses; of that in Egypt, where the Text places it; of that at home, in which we dwell; of this, which is our selves, where we always are, or ⁸⁰ always should be within; and of this in which we are met, where God is in so many several Temples of his, as are above and under ground: So that this Sermon may be a general Funeral Sermon, both for them that are dead in the flesh, and for our selves, that are dead in our sins; for of all these four houses it is true, and by useful accommodation, applyable to all, There is not a house where there is not one dead.

First then to survey the first House, the House in Egypt, Pharaoh, by drawing upon himself and his Land this last and heaviest plague of the ten, the universal, the sodain, the midnight destruction of all, all the firstborn of Egypt, hath made himself a Monument, and a ⁹⁰ History, and a Pillar everlasting to the end of the world, to the end of all place in the world, and to the end of all time in the world, by which all men may know, that man, how perverse soever, cannot weary God; that man cannot add to his Rebellions so many heavy circumstances, but that God can add as many, as heavy degrees to his Judgements. First, God turns their Rivers into blood; Pharaoh sits that proces, and more, many more; and then in this bloody massacre of all their first-born, God brings blood out of the channels of their Rivers, into their chambers, into all their Chambers; not only to cut off their children

- from without, and the young men from the streets (as the Prophet speaks) but (as he says also there) Death came in at their windows, and entred into their Palaces. As Christ says of Mary Magdalens devotion, That wheresoever his Gospel should be preached in the world, there should also this which this woman had done, be told for a memorial of her: So we may say of mans obduration, Wheresoever the Book of God shall be read, Pharaoh shall be an example, that God will have his ends, let man be possest with the spirit of contradiction as furiously, with the spirit of rebellion as ragefully as he will. Fremuerunt Gentes, says David in the beginning of the second Psalm, The Heathen Rage, and they break their sleep to contrive mischief.
- ¹⁰⁰ And within three verses more we finde, The Lord sits still in heaven, and laughs, and hath them in derision. The building of the Tower of Babel did not put God to build another Tower to confront it; God did nothing, and brought all their labours and their counsels to nothing. God took no hammer in hand to demolish and cast down Nebuchadnezzars Image, but a stone that was cut out without hands, smote the image, and broke it in pieces. Si inceperit, if God once set his work on foot, If I begin, I will also make an end, says God to Samuel; if he have not begun, si juraverit, if the Lord have sworn it, it shall be, (those whom the Lord swore should not enter into his Rest, never entred into his Rest.) If he have not sworn, si locutus fuerit, that's security enough, the security that the Prophet Esay gives through all his Prophecy, os Domini, thus and thus it must be, for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it: if he have not gone so far, si cogitaverit, if he have purposed it, as that word is used in Esay; if he have determined it, as the word is used in the Chronicles; if he have devised such a course, as the word is in Jeremy; God will accomplish his work, if he have begun it; his oath and word, if he have said or sworn it; his purpose and determination, if he have intended it; nothing shall frustrate or evacuate his purpose, he will atchieve his ends, though there be never a soul that doth not sigh, never a heart that doth not ake, never a vein that doth not bleed, never a house in which there is not one dead.
- ¹¹⁰ In the building of the material Temple, there was no hammer, nor tool of noise used: In the fitting and laying of us, the living stones of the mystical Temple, God would use no hammer, no iron, no occasion of noise, or lamentation; but there are dispositions which will not be rectified without the hammer, and are not malleable neither, not fit to be rectified by the hammer, till a hot fire of vehement affliction have mollified them. Thespesius they say was a man desperately vicious, irrecoverably wicked; his friends asked the Oracle whether ever he ¹⁴⁰ would mend? The Oracle answered, he would when he was dead; he died of a sodain fall, at least to the eyes, and in the understanding of the world he died; but he recovered, and came to life again, and then reported such fearful visions which he had seen in the other world, upon the souls of some of his companions, and of his own father, as that out of the apprehension of those terrors in his extasie, in his second life, he justified the Oracle; and after he had been dead, lived well. Many such stories are in the Legends; but I take this at the fountain where they take most of theirs, that is, out of Plutarch; for Plutarch and Virgil are two principal Evangelists of the Legendaries.

¹⁵⁰ The Moral of them all is, That God will imprint a knowledge of his Majesty, and a terror of his Judgements, though the heart be Iron: He would bring the Egyptians to say with trembling, We are dead men, though they would not be brought to say it, till there was not a house in which there was not one dead.

But as in a River that is swelled, though the water do bring down sand and stones, and logs, yet the water is there still; and the purpose of Nature is to vent that water, not to pour down that sand, or those stones: so though God be put to mingle his Judgements with his mercies, yet his mercy is there still, and his purpose is, ever in those ¹⁶⁰ judgments, to manifest his mercy. Where the Channel is stopped by those Sands, and Stones, and Logs, the Water will finde another Channel; where the heart is hardned by Gods corrections, and thereby made incapable of his mercy, (as in some dispositions, even Gods corrections do work such obstructions and obdurations, as in Pharaohs case it was) yet the water will find a Channel, the mercy of God will flow out, and shew it self to others, though not to him; his mercy will take effect somewhere, as (in Pharaohs case) it did upon the Children of Israel. And yet God would not shew mercy to them, but so, as that at the same time they also might see his judgments, and thereby be ¹⁷⁰ brought to say, God hath a Treasury of both, Mercy and Justice; and God might have changed the persons, and made the Egyptians the objects of his Mercies, and us of his Justice.

[Luke
23.40]

The first act of Gods mercy towards me, when I see him execute a judgment upon another, is to confess, that that judgment belonged to me, and thereby to come to a holy fear, being under the same condemnation; as the one Thief said to the other, upon their several crosses; Fearest not thou, being under the same condemnation? At this time God delivered his Children out of Egypt; then was fulness of mercy; but God let them see his power and his powerful indignation¹⁸⁰ upon others, for their instruction. God brought them out; there was fulness of mercy towards them: but he brought them out in the night. God would mingle some shadow, some signification of his judgments in his mercies, of adversity in prosperity, of night in day, of death in life. The persecuting Angel entred into none of their houses, God let them live; but God, though he let them live, would not let them be ignorant, that he could have thrown death in at their windows too: For they came not into a house where there was not one dead.

Part II
Domus

We stay no longer upon this first survey of the first house, That in Egypt: The next is, our own house, our habitation, our family. We have¹⁹⁰ in the use of our Church, a short, and a larger Catechism; both instruct the same things, the same Religion, but some capacities require the one, and some the other. God would catechise us in the knowledge of our mortality; since we have devested our immortality, he would have us understand our mortality; since we have induced death upon our selves, God would raise such a benefit to us, out of death, as that by the continual meditation thereof, death might the less terrifie us, and the less damnifie us. First, His Law alone does that office, even his Common Law, Morte morieris, and stipendium peccati Mors est: All have sinned, and all must die. And so his Statute Law too, *Statutum*²⁰⁰ est, It is enacted, it is appointed to man once to die: And then as a Comment upon that Law, he presents to us, either his great Catechisms, Sennacheribs Catechism, in which we see almost Two hundred thousand Soldiers, (more by many then both sides arm and pay, in these noiseful Wars of our Neighbors) slain in one night; or Jeroboams Catechism, where Twelve hundred thousand being presented in the field, (more by many, then all the Kings of Christendom arm and pay) Five hundred thousand men, chosen men, and men of mighty valor, (as the Text qualifies them) were slain upon one side in one day; or Dauids Catechism, where Threescore and ten thousand were ²¹⁰ devoured of the Pestilence, we know not in how few hours; or this Egyptian Catechism, of which we can make no conjecture, because we know no number of their houses; and there was not a house, in which there was not one dead; or God presents us his Catechism in the Primitive Church, where every day may be written in Red Ink, every day the Church celebrated Five hundred, in some Copies Five thousand Martyrs every day, that had writ down their names in their own blood, for the Gospel of Christ Jesus; or God presents us his Catechism in the later Roman Church; where, upon our attempt of the Reformation, they boast to have slain in one day Seventy Millions, in another ²²⁰ Two hundred Millions of them that attempted and assisted the Reformation; or else God presents his lesser Catechisms, the several Funerals of our particular Friends in the Congregation; or he abridges this Catechism of the Congregation to a less volume than that, to the consideration of every particular peece of our own Family at home: For so, there is not a house, in which there is not one dead.

Have you not left a dead son at home, whom you should have chastened, whilst there was hope, and have not? Whom you should have beaten with the rod, to deliver his soul from Hell, and have not? Whom you should have made an Abel, a Keeper of Sheep; or a Cain, ²³⁰ a Tiller of the Ground; that is, bestowed him, bound him, to some Occupation, or Profession, or Calling, and have not? You may believe God without an oath; but God hath sworn, That because Eli restrained not the insolencies of his sons, no sacrifice should purge his house for ever. And scarce shall you finde in the whole Book of God, any so vehement an intermination, any judgment so vehemently imprinted, as that upon Eli, for not restraining the insolencies of his sons: For in that case God says, I will do a thing in Israel, at which, both the ears of every one that heareth it shall tingle: That is, he would inflict a sudden death upon the Father, for his indulgence to his sons. Have ye

Deut. 31.12 ²⁵⁰ men, and women, and children, and strangers within thy gate, says God, that they may all learn the Law of the Lord. If thy care spread not over all thy family, whosoever is dead in thy family by thy negligence, thou shalt answer the King that Subject, that is, the King of Heaven that Soul.

Part 3 We have (as we proposed to do) surveyed this House in Egypt, where the Text lays it, and the House at home where we dwell; there is a third House, which we are, this House of Clay, and of Mud-walls, our selves, these bodies. And is there none dead there? not within us? The House it self is ready to fall as soon as it is set up: The next thing

²⁶⁰ that we are to practise after we are born, is to die. The Timber of this House is but our Bones; and, My bones are waxen old, says David; and perchance not with age, but as Job says, His bones are full of the sins of his youth. The lome-walls of this House are but this flesh; and Our strength is not the strength of stones, neither is our flesh brass; and therefore, Cursed is the man that trusteth in man, and maketh flesh his arm. The windows of this House are but our eyes; and, the light of mine eyes is gone from me, says David; and we know not how, nor how soon. The foundation is but our feet; and, besides that Our feet stumble at noon, (as the Prophet complains) David found them so ²⁷⁰ cold, as that no art nor diligence could warm them. And the roof and covering of this House, is but this thatch of hair; and it is denounc'd by more then one of the Prophets, That upon all heads shall fall baldness: The House it self is always ready to fall; but is there not also always some dead in this House, in our selves? Is not our first-born dead? Our first-born (says St. Augustin) are the offspring of our beloved sin; for we have some Concubine-sins, and some one sin that we are married to: Whatsoever we have begot upon that wife, whatsoever we have got by that sin, that's our first-born, and that's dead: How much the better soever we make account to live by it, it is dead.

²⁸⁰ For, as it was the mischievous invention of a Persecutor in the Primitive Church, to tie living men to dead bodies, and let them die so; so men that tie the rest of their Estate to goods ill gotten, do but invent a way to ruine and destroy all. But that which is truly every mans first-born-childe, is his zeal to the Religion and Service of God: As soon as we know that there is a Soul, that Soul knows that there is a God, and a Worship belonging to that God; and this Worship is Religion. And is not this first-born childe dead in many of us? In him that is not stirr'd, not mov'd, not affected for his Religion, his pulse is gone, and that's an ill sign. In him that dares not speak for it, not counsel, not preach²⁹⁰ for it, his Religion lies speechless; and that's an ill sign. In him that feeds not Religion, that gives nothing to the maintenance thereof, his Religion is in a consumption. In a word, if his zeal be quenched, his first-born is dead. And so for these three Houses, That in Egypt, that at home, that in our selves, There is not a house in which there is not one dead.

Esai. 15.2

Jer. 48.37

The fourth House falling under this survey, is this House in which we are met now, the house of God; the Church and the ground wrapped up in the same consecration: and in this house you have seen, and seen in a lamentable abundance, and seen with sad eyes, that³⁰⁰ for many moneths there hath scarce been one day in which there hath not been one dead. How should there be but multiplicity of deaths? why should it be, or be looked to be, or thought to be otherwise? The Master of the house, Christ Jesus, is dead before; and now it is not so much a part of our punishment, for the first Adam, as an imitation of the second Adam, to die; death is not so much a part of our debt to Nature, or Sin, or Satan, as a part of our conformity to him who died for us. If death were in the nature of it meerly evil to us, Christ would have redeemed us, even from this death, by his death. But as the death of Christ Jesus is the Physick of mankind, so this natural death of the³¹⁰ body is the application of that Physick to every particular man, who only by death can be made capable of that glory which his death hath purchased for us. This Physick, all they whom God hath taken to him, have taken, and (by his grace) received life by it. Their first-born is dead; the body was made before the soul, and that body is dead. Rachel wept for her children, and would not be comforted, because they were not. If these children, and parents, and friends, and neighbours of ours were not, if they were resolved into an absolute annihilation, we could not be comforted in their behalf; but Christ, who says, he is the Life, lest we should think that to belong only to this life, says also that he is³²⁰ the Resurrection. We were contracted to Christ in our Election, married to him in our Baptism, in the Grave we are bedded with him, and in the Resurrection estated and put into possession of his Kingdom: And therefore, because these words do not only affect us with that sad consideration, That there is none of these houses in which there is not one dead; but minister withall that consolation, That there is none so dead, but may have a Resurrection, We shall pass another short survey over all these Houses.

Thus far we have survey'd these four Houses, Egypt, our families, our selves, and the Church, as so many places of Infection, so many ³³⁰ temporal or spiritual Pesthouses, into which our sins had heaped powder, and Gods indignation had cast a match to kindle it. But now the very phrase of the Text, which is, That in every house there was one dead, There was, invites us to a more particular consideration of Gods mercy, in that, howsoever it were, it is not so now; in which we shall look how far this beam of mercy shines out in every of these houses, that it is not so now, There is not one dead in every house now; but the Infection, (Temporal and Spiritual Infection) is so far ceased, as that not only those that are alive, do not die, as before; but those whom we called dead, are not dead; they are alive in their spirits, in Abrahams ³⁴⁰ bosome; and they are alive in their very bodies, in their contract and inherence in Christ Jesus in an infallible assurance of a joyful Resurrection.

[Luke 16.22]

Now in the survey of the first sort of houses, of Egypt, herein we are interrupted. Here they were dead, and are dead still: We see clearly enough Gods indignation upon them; but we see neither of those beams of mercy, either that there die no more, or that we have the comfort of a joyful Resurrection in them who are dead: For this fearful calamity of the death of their first-born wrought no more upon them, but to bring them to that exclamation, that vociferation, that voice of ³⁵⁰ despairful murmuring, Omnes Moriemur, We are all dead men: And they were mischievous Prophets upon themselves; for, proceeding in that sin which induc'd that calamity and the rest upon them, they pursued the children of Israel through the Red-sea, and perished in it; and then they came not to die one in a house, but as it is expressed in the Story, and repeated in the Psalms, There remained not so much as one of them alive; so that in their case there is no comfort in the first beam of mercy, that this phrase, They were dead, or They did die,

v. 33

Exod. 14.28
Psal. 106.11

should intimate, That now they did not die, now Gods correction had so wrought upon them, as that God withdrew that correction from ³⁶⁰ them, for it pursued them, and accompanied them to their final and total destruction. And then for the other beam of mercy, of transferring them which seemed dead in the eyes of the world, to a better life, by that hand of death, to present happiness in their souls, and to an assured resurrection to joy and glory in their bodies, in the communion of Gods Saints, Moses hath given us little hope in their behalf; for thus he encourageth his Countreymen in that place, The Egyptians whom you have seen this day, you shall see no more for ever: No more in this world, no more in the world to come. Beloved, as God empayl'd a Goshen in Egypt, a place for the righteous amongst the wicked; so ³⁷⁰ there is an Egypt in every Goshen, neasts of Snakes in the fairest Gardens, and even in this City (which in the sense of the Gospel, we may call, The Holy City; as Christ called Jerusalem, though she had multiplied transgressions, The Holy City, because she had not cast away his Law, though she had disobeyed it: So howsoever your sins have provoked God, yet as you retain a zealous profession of the truth of his Religion, I may in his name, and do in the bowels of his mercy, call you, The Holy City) even in this City, no doubt but the hand of God fell upon thousands in this deadly infection, who were no more affected with it, then those Egyptians, to cry out, Omnes Moriemur, ³⁸⁰ We can but die, and we must die: And, Edamus, & bibamus, cras moriemur, Let us eat and drink, and take our pleasure, and make our profits, for to morrow we shall die, and so were cut off by the hand of God, some even in their robberies, in half-empty houses; and in their drunkenness in voluptuous and riotous houses; and in their lusts and wantonness in licentious houses; and so took in infection and death, like Judas's sop, death dipt and soaked in sin. Men whose lust carried them into the jaws of infection in lewd houses, and seeking one sore perished with another; men whose rapine and covetousness broke into houses, and seeking the Wardrobes of others, found their own wind-³⁹⁰ ing-sheet, in the infection of that house where they stole their own death; men who sought no other way to divert sadness, but strong drink in riotous houses, and there drank up David's cup of Malediction, the cup of Condemned men, of death, in the infection of that place. For these men that died in their sins, that sinned in their dying, that sought and hunted after death so sinfully, we have little comfort of such men, in the phrase of this Text, They were dead; for they are dead still: As Moses said of the Egyptians, I am afraid we may say of these men, We shall see them no more for ever.

nostra*

But God will give us the comfort of this phrase in the next House;

⁴⁰⁰ This next House is Domus nostra, our Dwelling-House, our Habitation, our Family; and there, They were dead; they were, but by Gods goodness they are not. If this savor of death have been the savor of life unto us; if this heavy weight of Gods hand upon us have awakened us to a narrower survey, and a better discharge of our duties towards all the parts of our Families, we may say, to our comforts and his glory, There was a son dead in disobedience and murmuring; there was a daughter dead in a dangerous easiness of conversation; there was a servant dead in the practice of deceit and falsifying; there was, but the Lord hath breath'd a new life into us, the Lord hath made even his ⁴¹⁰ tempest a refreshing, and putrefaction a perfume unto us. The same measure of wind that blows out a candle, kindles a fire; this correction that hath hardned some, hath entred and mollified us; and howsoever there were dead sons, and dead daughters, and dead servants, this holy sense of Gods Judgements shall not only preserve for the future, that we shall admit no more such dead limbs into our Family, but even give to them who were (in these kindes) formerly dead, a new life, a blessed resurrection from all their sinful habits, by the power of his grace, though reached to them with a bloody hand, and in a bitter cup, in this heavy calamity; and as Christ said of himself, they ⁴²⁰ shall say in him, I was dead, but am alive; and by that grace of God, I am that I am.

[Apoc. 1.18]
15.10]
Domus nos

The same comfort also shall we have in this phrase of the Text, in our third House; the third House is not Domus nostra, but Domus nos, not the House we inhabit, but the House we carry; not that House which is our House, but that House which is our selves: There also, They were dead; they were, but are not. For beloved, we told you before in our former survey of these several Houses, That our first-born, (for still ye remember, they were the first-born of Egypt, that induce all this application;) Our first-born in this House, in our selves, ⁴³⁰ is our Zeal; not meerly and generally our Religion, but our zeal to our Religion. For Religion in general, is natural to us; the natural man hath naturally some sense of God, and some inclination to worship that Power, whom he conceives to be God, and this Worship is Religion. But then the first thing that this general pious affection produces in us, is Zeal, which is an exaltation of Religion. Primus actus voluntatis est Amor; Philosophers and Divines agree in that, That the will of man cannot be idle, and the first act that the will of man produces, is Love; for till it love something, prefer and chuse something, till it would have something, it is not a Will; neither can it turn upon ⁴⁴⁰ any object, before God. So that this first, and general, and natural love of God, is not begotten in my soul, nor produced by my soul, but created and infus'd with my soul, and as my soul; there is no soul that knows she is a soul, without such a general sense of the love of God. But to love God above all, to love him with all my faculties, this exaltation of this religious love of God, is the first born of Religion, and this is Zeal. Religion, which is the Worship of that Power which I call God, does but make me a man; the natural man hath that Religion; but that which makes me a Father, and gives me an off-spring, a first-born, that's Zeal: By Religion I am an Adam, ⁴⁵⁰ but by Zeal I am an Abel produced out of that Adam. Now if we consider times not long since past, there was scarce one house, scarce one of us, in whom this first-born, this Zeal was not dead. Discretion is the ballast of our Ship, that carries us steady; but Zeal is the very Freight, the Cargason, the Merchandise it self, which enriches us in the land of the living; and this was our case, we were all come to esteem our Ballast more then our Freight, our Discretion more then our Zeal; we had more care to please great men then God; more consideration of an imaginary change of times, then of unchangeable eternity it self. And as in storms it falls out often that men cast their Wares and their ⁴⁶⁰ Fraights over-board, but never their Ballast, so as soon as we thought we saw a storm, in point of Religion, we cast off our Zeal, our Freight, and stuck to our Ballast, our Discretion, and thought it sufficient to sail on smoothly, and steadily, and calmly, and discreetly in the world, and with the time, though not so directly to the right Haven. So our first-born in this House, in our selves, our Zeal, was dead. It was; there's the comfortable word of our Text. But now, now that God hath taken his fan into his hand, and sifted his Church, now that God hath put us into a straight and crooked Limbeck, passed us through narrow and difficult trials, and set us upon a hot fire, and drawn us 470 to a more precious substance and nature then before; now that God hath given our Zeal a new concoction, a new refining, a new inanimation by this fire of tribulation, let us embrace and nurse up this new resurrection of this Zeal, which his own Spirit hath begot and produced in us, and return to God with a whole and entire soul, without dividing or scattering our affections upon other objects, and in the sincerity of the true Religion, without inclinations in our selves, to induce; and without inclinableness, from others, upon whom we may depend, to admit, any dramms of the dregs of a superstitious Religion; for it is a miserable extremity, when we must take a little poyson for 480 physick. And so having made the right use of Gods corrections, we shall enjoy the comfort of this phrase, in this House, our selves, our first-born, our Zeal was dead; it was, but it is not.

[Exod. 3.5]

Lastly, in this fourth House, the House where we stand now, the House of God, and of his Saints, God affords us a fair beam of this consolation, in the phrase of this Text also, They were dead. How applicable to you, in this place, is that which God said to Moses, Put off thy shoes, for thou treadest on holy ground; put off all confidence, all standing, all relying upon worldly assurances, and consider upon what ground you tread; upon ground so holy, as that all the ground is made 490 of the bodies of Christians, and therein hath received a second consecration. Every puff of wind within these walls, may blow the father into the sons eys, or the wife into her husbands, or his into hers, or both into their childrens, or their childrens into both. Every grain of dust that flies here, is a piece of a Christian; you need not distinguish your Pews by figures; you need not say, I sit within so many of such a neighbour, but I sit within so many inches of my husbands, or wives, or childes, or friends grave. Ambitious men never made more shift for places in Court, then dead men for graves in Churches; and as in our later times, we have seen two and two almost in every Place and Office, 500 so almost every Grave is oppressed with twins; and as at Christs resurrection some of the dead arose out of their graves, that were buried again; so in this lamentable calamity, the dead were buried, and thrown up again before they were resolved to dust, to make room for more. But are all these dead? They were, says the Text; they were in your eyes, and therefore we forbid not that office of the eye, that holy tenderness, to weep for them that are so dead. But there was a part in every one of them, that could not die; which the God of life, who breathed it into them, from his own mouth, hath suck'd into his own bosome. And in that part which could die, They were dead, but they 510 are not. The soul of man is not safer wrapt up in the bosome of God, then the body of man is wrapt up in the Contract, and in the eternal Decree of the Resurrection. As soon shall God tear a leaf out of the Book of Life, and cast so many of the Elect into Hell fire, as leave the body of any of his Saints in corruption for ever. To what body shall Christ Jesus be loth to put to his hand, to raise it from the grave, then, that put to his very God-head, the Divinity it self, to assume all our bodies, when in one person, he put on all mankind in his Incarnation? As when my true repentance hath re-ingrafted me in my God, and re-incorporated me in my Savior, no man may reproach me, and say, 520 Thou wast a sinner: So, since all these dead bodies shall be restored by the power, and are kept alive in the purpose of Almighty God, we cannot say, They are, scarce that they were dead. When time shall be no more, when death shall be no more, they shall renew, or rather continue their being. But yet, beloved, for this state of their grave, (for it becomes us to call it a state; it is not an annihilation, no part of Gods Saints can come to nothing) as this state of theirs is not to be lamented, as though they had lost any thing which might have conduced to their good, by departing out of this world; so neither is it a state to be joyed in so, as that we should expose ourselves to dangers unnecessarily, in 530 thinking that we want any thing conducing to our good, which the dead enjoy. As between two men of equal age, if one sleep, and the other wake all night, yet they rise both of an equal age in the morning; so they who shall have slept out a long night of many ages in the grave, and they who shall be caught up in the clouds, to meet the Lord Jesus in the aire, at the last day, shall enter all at once in their bodies into Heaven. No antiquity, no seniority for their bodies; neither can their souls who went before, be said to have been there a minute before ours, because we shall all be in a place that reckons not by minutes. Clocks and Sun-dials were but a late invention upon earth; but the Sun it self, 540 and the earth it self, was but a late invention in heaven. God had been an infinite, a super-infinite, an unimaginaire space, millions of millions of unimaginaire spaces in heaven, before the Creation. And our afternoon shall be as long as Gods forenoon; for, as God never saw beginning, so we shall never see end; but they whom we tread upon now, and we whom others shall tread upon hereafter, shall meet at once, where, though we were dead, dead in our several houses, dead in a sinful Egypt, dead in our family, dead in our selves, dead in the Grave, yet we shall be received, with that consolation, and glorious consolation, you were dead, but are alive. Enter ye blessed into the ⁵⁵⁰ Kingdom, prepared for you, from the beginning. Amen.

 342, } 344, } Euangelist 346 }

NOTE: The recurrence of this form in these three lines, as also elsewhere in the 1640 Folio, shows the connection of the word with the Greek εὐαγγελιστής, whereas the form "evangelist" comes through the French "évangéliste." From the twelfth to the fourteenth century the usual form was "ewan(i)geliste" (N.E.D.). We have therefore retained "Eu," as its use here is evidently deliberate.
